INTRODUCTION

Family tree research has been the most interesting, pleasurable and gratifying hobby that I have ever undertaken. By reading Volume II, it is hoped that you can experience the same pleasures and develop a desire to continue this research. Just follow the trails and trials of your forebears and they will lead you to many exciting tales, successes, triumphs, failure, loves and pathos — true life stories — as glamorous as any from Hollywood.

It can also take you to new lands and places, through study and writing, or in person, as you search for the records of your unknown progenitors. You will also broaden your knowledge of history, geography, laws, customs and life in general of the present and the dim past as you delve into records in new and ancient archives.

You will thrill time and time again as you find the accounts of your forefather's endeavors — births, marriages, deaths, wills, land transfers, moves, etc. Sometimes you will run into puzzles as interesting and hard to explain as it is possible to imagine. You will solve some quickly, others may keep you in suspense for years.

As you study the first two volumes of THE WIGHTMAN ANCESTRY, you will realize that many details of your family are not reported. Record this information at the end of your copy of this book as well as that of your spouse. Remember — the family history of your spouse is very important to your descendants.

Special thanks goes to my wife, Jean (Gerstner) Wightman, who has again shown her understanding, patience and acceptance of an eccentric old man that spends 40 hours a week at his computer to compile family records.

Also, special thanks goes to Birdella (Wightman) Corbitt of 15 Ivy Lane, Seekonk, MA 02771 [the trailblazer who has restored and maintained the Wightman Cemetery where George[1] Wightman is buried on the old homestead]. "Birdie" has also generously contributed pictures and articles that appear in both volumes of THE WIGHTMAN ANCESTRY.

It is specially important to realize that my family has had the most influence on the late years of my life. My granddaughters are portrayed in the introduction and on page 2303 with detailed updates of their lives and their dreams and goals for the future.

The next page can be used to determine your relationship to your forbears and cousins according to Common or Cannon Law. This 10-generation chart can easily be expanded several generations by following the example that I have drawn on the chart.

RELATIONSHIP CHART

(Cannon or Common Law)

ABBREVIATIONS:
CP - Common progenitor bro - brother or sister cou - cousin
g.g.neph - great grand nephew g.g. son - great grandson neph - nephew or niece
r - generation removed son - son or daughter

HOW TO USE

1. Locate the position of the Family Representative or yourself in the left, double lined column marked 1-10.
2. Locate the position of the person you are figuring the relationship for by finding his direct descent from the common progenitor (CP) in the right, double-lined column 1-10.
3. The correct relationship will be found where these two lines cross.

EXAMPLES: The relationship of # 1 on the left and # 1 on the right is "bro". If each is the son of the common progenitor, they would have to be brothers (or sisters). The relationship of # 2 on the left and # 1 on the right would be "neph" (nephew or niece). The relationship of # 2 on the left and # 4 on the right would be first cousins twice removed, and # 7 on the left and # 10 on the right would be sixth cousins three generations removed (6 cou 3 r).

IN SEARCH OF MY SON

BY

S. K. WIGHTMAN*

S. K. Wightman

In 1865 a father went from New York to North Carolina to reclaim the body of his boy killed in action. Here is his account of how the task was done.

*Stillman King[7] Wightman [see page 272 - Vol. I of THE WIGHTMAN ANCESTRY] (Rev. Frederick[6], John[5], Elisha[4], Capt. John[3], Dea. George[2], George[1])

Sergeant Edward K.[8] Wightman

On January 15th, 1865, the United States Army and Navy bombarded, stormed, and captured Fort Fisher, the great Confederate strong point which guarded the outlet of Cape Fear River just below Wilmington, North Carolina. This battle closed the Confederacy's last port for blockade runners; it also cost the Federal Army and Navy some 1,300 casualties.

Permission was granted to reprint this article by American Heritage. It originally appeared in this magazine on Feb. 1963; Vol. XIV, No.2.

Among the men killed at Fort Fisher was Edward K. Wightman, of the 3rd New York Volunteer Infantry, who was shot to death in the attack on the northwest bastion of the fort. His father, a New York attorney named Stillman King Wightman (1803-1899), at once concluded that it was his sad duty to go to Fort Fisher, recover his son's body, and bring it north for proper burial. Despite grave obstacles, the father did this, and two months later, with the experience still raw and fresh, set down in writing his account of it.

In the long course of time--for Mr. Wightman lived to the age of ninety-six--the manuscript passed into the hands of his descendants. Through the courtesy of his grandson, Dr. Orrin Sage Wightman of New York, and of his great-grandson, Dr. Henry Booth Wightman of Ithaca, New York, we are privileged to publish it for the first time, verbatim. We are also in the debt of Robert T. Horn, assistant treasurer of Cornell University for his assistance.

Stillman Wightman was persevering. It was hard to reach Fort Fisher; harder yet to find the body of the dead soldier and to arrange matters so that the body could be brought back for burial in a Connecticut cemetery; still harder for the father to steel himself for the performance of a grim but necessary task. In his recital of this experience, Mr. Wightman somehow managed to speak for all of the men, in all times and lands, who have had to see a precious light go out under the smoke of battle. He opened the grave where his boy had been buried, looked upon what remained, satisfied himself that this was indeed the body of his son, lived through the harrowing job that then became necessary, bought the coffin back home--and then devoutly thanked God for the infinite mercy that had enabled him to do all of this.

There were hundreds of thousands of fathers and mothers in the Civil War who felt as this man felt, and there have been hundreds of thousands since then who have had to live with, and master, the grief he felt. Because his artless narrative expresses something not merely timeless but ennobling and inspiring, American Heritage presents it here as a haunting echo from the nation's terrible time of testing.

Army transports tended to be stuffy, overcrowded, and uncomfortable sea craft, but there was no other way for Stillman Wightman to go. Shortly after he made his trip, a magazine artist drew a transport unloading stores in Cape Fear River opposite Fort Fisher.

It was on Thursday morning the 19th of January, 1865, we found it announced in the Herald of that date, that "Sergeant Major Whiteman 3rd N.Y.V. was killed" in the battle. Our house was immediately enveloped in sad mourning. I went down to my office and made inquiries, and soon came to the conclusion, after prayerful deliberation, that it was my duty to go to Fort Fisher. It was a great undertaking for me at that season of the year, and especially as I was not at the time in very good health, and I had not for many years been subject to so great exposure. I returned to my house and held a consultation with my family, and told them what I had thought of doing. They did not discourage me, but left the matter to my own sense of duty.

I accordingly resolved to go; and at seven o'clock on the evening of the same day, I started in the cars at Jersey City, and after riding through a cold, sleepless night, I arrived in Washington, D.C., at six o'clock the next morning. My object in going to Washington was to procure a pass to and from Fort Fisher. I was informed that it was difficult to procure such a pass; and so in order to be more certain of success, I first waited on Gideon Welles, Secretary of the Navy, an old friend of mine, who gave me a letter of introduction to the Secretary of War, which proved all sufficient in insuring me a pass. I forthwith presented the note to the War Department, and immediately obtained the pass; and at three o'clock in the afternoon of Friday, the 20th

[Not Transferable.]

All-important to Wightman's journey was this pass permitting him to go south, issued at the War Department after intercession on his behalf by Navy Secretary Gideon Welles.

January, was on board a steamer lying at a wharf in the Potomac, and soon afterwards was sailing down the River in her for Fortress Monroe.

The vessel was crowded with soldiers and civilians, all of whom were strangers to me. For several hours—indeed until long after nightfall—our progress was much impeded with floating cakes of ice. I laid myself down on two narrow chairs with my head on a cushion, and fell into a broken, fitful sleep for about two hours. We arrived at Fortress Monroe about 10 o'clock in the forenoon of Saturday the 21st January, and immediately went on shore.

Fort Monroe is a very strong fortification, and may be regarded as almost impregnable. There I was unavoidably detained, for want of a transport, until Tuesday following; during which time, it was very cold, and stormed almost incessantly. Having learned unexpectedly that there was a Capt Warren of Albany, belonging to the 3rd Regiment N.Y. Volunteers, who was then at the Chesapeake Hospital at Hampton, I lost no time in procuring a pass from the Provost Marshall, and walked a distance of about three miles on Sunday, in the face of a rain and a strong wind, to the Hospital, where, after some difficulty, I found him confined to his bed by sickness. I also saw Lieut Behan, belonging to the same Regiment, who had been wounded in the neck at the battle of Fort Fisher, and was under treatment in the same room with Capty Warren. They gave me the first reliable information I had been able to obtain respecting Edward.

"I regret to inform you," said Captain to me, "that your son Edward was killed, being in the front ranks that commenced the attack in the storming of Fort Fisher. I had known him well for a long time. Edward was not rash, but was a bold man, and never flinched from danger. He was very correct and circumspect in all his habits and deportment. I never saw him drink any spirits. He was strictly temperate, and never used profane language. He was very social, kind and affable, and was held in great esteem by the men of the Regiment. Whenever engaged in battle, he was firm, cool and collected, and understanding his duty, he never failed to discharge it with promptitude and bravery. Perhaps," said the Captain, "the best description I can give of him, is, that I considered him a model soldier."

Lieut. Behan was present and attested to the truth of what the Capt had said to me.

"Edward and myself," he remarked, "were at the head of the Regiment, and among the first to attack the Fort at the commencement of the battle. I," said he, "had got upon the point of reaching the same parapet, near me, not far from the north west end of the Fort, when he was shot, as I think, in the left breast by a minie ball from a rifle, and fell while shouting to the Regiment to press bravely on to charge. Some friend ran immediately and brought a cup of water and placed it to his lips; but his eyes were closed, and he never opened them afterwards."

The sad reality now came over me, that Edward was no more a living man in this World; and I left the Hospital with a heavy heart, and returned to the Fortress. My aim then was to speed my journey as rapidly as possible; and I spent Monday in unceasing, but fruitless efforts, to accomplish my purpose. Besides, I was obliged to stay nights at a miserable dining saloon, sleeping a short and broken rest on a sofa, taking irregular meals, and being very uncomfortable from exposure to the storm and want of suitable fires...

At length on Tuesday morning I learned that the Transport Ellen S. Terry had arrived from New York the previous night, bound for Newbern, N.C., and was lying nearby at anchor in Hampton Roads; and as I knew her Captain, I resolved I would take passage on board of her. After much trouble, I finally found her master, Capt Chapin; and having procured a pass from the Provost Marshall, and paid for my transportation, I was taken on board of the vessel.

I found she had several horses and sixty head of cattle on her second, or under deck, that were to be taken to Newbern. Two of the cattle had died in the passage from New York, and had been thrown overboard, and another had just died in the harbor; and the stench that came through the hatches was at times almost suffocating. Never the less my courage was not abated, but I resolved to continue on board and share my chances with the passengers and crew. About eleven o'clock in the forenoon of Tuesday, the 24th January, the storm cleared away, and the Transport steamed out of the harbor, past the Rip Raps; and by meridian, we were ploughing old ocean with a stiff breeze and a heavy roll of the boat. The Capt threw overboard another dead ox, and then we went to dinner. The whole Transport was infected with the stench from dead animals; which affected my appetite for food as long as I continued on board the vessel. In my judgment she was far from being a good sea boat, as she rolled terribly, and her progress was slow, not more than seven or eight knots per hour.

At length we saw Cape Hatteras on our starboard, and the light house standing upon the Point; and having sailed Tuesday and Tuesday night, we entered Hatteras Inlet about ten o'clock Wednesday forenoon, the 25th Jany. There the vessel had the ill luck to get aground upon a bar, and remained aground until six o'clock in the evening, when, by the assistance of a steamship, she was got off and proceeded immediately on her way through Pamlico Sound and up Neuse River to Newbern, N.C., where we arrived about nine o'clock in the morning of Thursday the 26th Jany, just one half an hour too late for me to take the cars there that day for Morehead City opposite Beaufort, N.C.

Mewbern must have been at the commencement of the War, a desirable place for business, and for the residence of gentlemen of leisure. Before the War, probably some ten or twelve thousand inhabitants were residents there; but since our army took possession, most of the inhabitants have abandoned their homes, and many of the building are occupied by our officers and troops for war purposes. Having leisure I spent Thursday in rambling through the town. Aside of officers, soldiers, horsemen, and heavy baggage wagons each drawn by a team of six mules, I saw very few persons in the streets, except Negroes who were very numerous. Although it was a severe cold day, I was surprised to find the tree tops filled with robins and other birds, chirping from limb to limb as if it were midsummer. I returned at night to the Ellen, satisfied from observation, that the place was ruined for the time being.

On Friday morning at 9-1/2 o'clock, I took the cars at the depot for Morehead City. The cars proceeded on southerly over a thin, sandy, level soil, tinctured occasionally with iron, and extensively covered with pine forests, until we arrived a Morehead City. Now and then I could see three or four Negro huts by the wayside, and there were three or four military stations on the route, and a Fort about five miles north of Morehead City; but on the whole road, a distance of forty miles, I did not discover a single dwelling house. I was told the land was worth ten shillings per acre.

It was a very cold day, and having suffered severely with cold feet and frosty air while riding in the cars, I alighted with great pleasure on the wharf at Morehead City, opposite Beaufort, N.C., at 11-1/2 o'clock, on the same day, Friday the 27th January, in the forenoon, and immediately went to the Quartermaster's office for information. There I was pleased to find E. R. Middlebrook, a brother of [the man at] the First Baptist Church, New York City, who kindly proffered me every assistance in his power. He was chief clerk in the department, and he and Capt Wheeler, the Quartermaster, insisted on my dining with them, to which I reluctantly assented; and after a full repast, resumed the prosecution of my business. Brother Middlebrook furnished me with a good pine coffin, ready made, for Edward, which I got put on board the Transport Montauk, then lying near the wharf, and went on board of her myself about five o'clock in the afternoon on my way to Fort Fisher. She was taking in supplies for the army nearly all the following night.

On Saturday morning, at 9-1/2 o'clock, the 28th of January, the Transport Montauk, Capt Greenman, started for Fort Fisher. We had moderately rough time during the day and ensuing night, and arrived at Fort Fisher about 7 o'clock on Sunday morning, the 29th January, and anchored within the bar, near the southern extremity of Federal Point, just easterly of where Cape Fear River empties into the ocean. Here we had a fine view of the river, which is about a mile in width, and of the Point, and Fort Buchanan, Fort Lamb, and Fort Fisher, and the headquarters of the army further north on the east bank of the river.

The sun was shining bright and clear, but the wind was cold and piercing. I felt well nigh worn out with want of rest, fatigue and exposure; but my anxiety was so great to learn further particulars of Edward's fate, that at about 9 o'clock on Sunday morning, the Capt at my request landed me on shore; and I proceeded immediately on foot toward Fort Fisher, the north eastern extremity of which was about two miles from the place of my landing. The whole distance was but a continuation of loose, deep sand or muddy salt marsh which was covered much of it with water by every flowing tide.

Everything was new and strange to me. Fort Buchanan was on the Point, an earth work perhaps 50 feet in height, somewhat in the shape of a cone. Fort Lamb was situated about three quarters of a mile easterly on the shore of the sea, being another earth work of conical form, of much greater magnitude, rising perhaps 70 feet from its base. Upon both these forts were heavy ordinance. And then near Fort Buchanan, were the offices of the Commissariat, the Quartermaster, and the Captain of the Port; and interspersed between Fort Buchanan and Fort Fisher were encampments of some of our troops.

None of these novelties however, hindered me in my progress toward Fort Fisher. The travelling was irksome, the wind was cold and cutting, and came sweeping from the northwest over Cape Fear River, and the salt marsh and sand beach with an irresistible rush; and by the time I had walked one half the distance, my frame began to quiver, and I felt that the days of my youth were gone. I had travelled over eight hundred miles, by land and by sea, had been subjected for ten days and nights to great exposure, and had made every inquiry I could, but had only learned that Edward was shot and killed at the battle of Fort Fisher on the 15th of January.

There was an explosion of a magazine in the Fort on Monday the 15th January, and many had been killed or buried in the ruins. Whether Edward's body had been buried at all, or had been covered in the ruins, or whether I should ever be able to find or identify his remains, was to me a matter of entire uncertainty; especially as I was told it was a custom where many were killed, to bury the bodies in trenches, sometimes three or four deep, and when buried in separate graves, there were comparatively but few instances where the name of the deceased was to be found indicating his identity.

These doubts and difficulties, and my well nigh exhausted condition, all had a strong tendency to almost dishearten me, until the pressure of my feelings began to find vent in tears. At first I thought I would sit down and rest, but I was in the midst of a salt marsh, and that was impracticable. Next, I sought for some spot where I might be partially shielded from the cold, cutting wind; but there was not any place any where near me to afford the least relief. It was at this time that my heart broke forth in prayer to God, to strengthen and nerve my mind and body, and enable me to perform what I had undertaken, if it would be consistent with His holy will. Almost at the same instant, the promises of God came into my thoughts with great force and energy. "As thy days, so shall thy strength be." "Fear not, for I am with thee." "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

Other passages of similar import came into my mind, until I was comforted, and became joyful, and exclaimed aloud in the language of the Psalmist, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want;" and then I commenced and sang the hymn--

The Lord my shepherd is
I shall be well supplied,
Since he is mine and I am His,
What can I want beside.

I would walk and sing till my breath began to fail, and then stop and rest, and then again, walk and sing.

Meanwhile I had reached the more immediate region of the battleground of Fort Fisher, which was strown with shells broken and unbroken, with balls, shot and shrapnell, and diverse other missils and implements of death. Torpedoes, broken cannon, and fragments, wheels and carriages, and other evidences of destructive warfare arrested my vision in various directions; while the massive earthworks before me and on the right, rising to an elevation of about 25 feet, with traverses or mounds of earth on the parapet rising perhaps 20 feet still higher, and the whole extending from north so south more than half a mile, and then from south to west almost a like distance, until nearly reaching Fort Lamb, lay just before me and on my right in fearful grandeur.

All the front of the Fort not bordering on the sea had a ditch at its base, filled with water from the tide, and also a strong stockade outside the ditch, built of the bodies of small pine trees placed in juxtaposition about 12 feet in height with sharpened points at the top and holes cut through in near the ground for the almost perpendicular from its base. It embraced about 70 acres of land, and to the eyes of civilian, would seem absolutely impregnable.

I passed through a gateway cut in the stockade at the north extremity of the Fort, and crossing a small bridge, turned to the right, and came immediately upon a plain of sand that stretched southward to the sea, and northward perhaps two or more miles to a pine forest, and westward, with salt marsh, to the banks of Cape Fear River. I was now in front of the northwest end of the Fort, and within about 250 feet of the stockade. Here the fierce, cold wind made a rushing sweep, raising at times clouds of dust.

With the exception of a single soldier strolling near me, I was alone. I inquired of him if there were any graves in that region, of soldiers killed in the battle of the 15th January. He replied there were, and that some of them lay a short distance from me on a slightly elevated knoll of sand in front of the Fort. Thither I repaired alone immediately where I saw perhaps thirty graves, the most of which were left without any indication of the name or identity of the person buried. Extending my vision northward, I saw several other places where there were many graves a convenient distances, but most of them without any identification.

I began to feel alarmed lest, after all my long, wearisome journey and constant anxiety and hopeful anticipations, it might be my sad lot to fail in the accomplishment of my purpose; and yet I could not delay a moment in my eager efforts. I commenced with the nearest grave to the Fort, about 250 feet northerly of the stockade. It had no indications of identity. The next grave had a small, narrow pine board erected at the head of it. I turned my back to the wind, to keep off the flying dust, and leaning over the grave and looking through my spectacles, read the following words, legibly written with a small lamp-black brush upon the board:- "Sergt Major 3d N. Y. V. - E. K. Wightman." !!!

O, how my heart leaped with joy! No tongue nor pen can describe my feelings. Within perhaps three or four hundred feet of the spot in the parapet where Edward was killed, with evidence before me, I could not hesitate in the belief that his body was buried there, and that I was standing beside his grave which gave me unspeakable satisfaction. All his life came up before me, and how beloved he was by his parents and brothers and sisters, and what an interest we had felt and manifested in his welfare and happiness, and there I stood alone and mourned and wept.

I found that I was almost transfixed to the spot, until a reference to my watch warned me of my duty to proceed to headquarters. I made three efforts to leave the grave, and in each instance, after having walked away some distance, found myself back again, engaged in reading the inscription. At length, I started for headquarters, distant about a mile northerly from the Fort. I passed large numbers of rifle pits and breastworks, that had been hastily dug and thrown up by our forces, in their approaches to attack Fort Fisher; and soon came to camps of soldiers, and finally first to the headquarters of General Ames, and then just beyond, to the headquarters of General Terry, which were situated on a sandy soil, somewhat elevated above, and a few rods easterly of the easterly side of Cape Fear River.

My first object was to get an introduction to General Terry. I went to his headquarters and found he was absent, but would return soon. Meanwhile I had a conversation with his chief clerk, and he became interested in my behalf. After a time General Terry came in, and at my request I was introduced to him. He shook hands and treated me in a gentlemanly manner. But I felt that I must enlist his sympathy.

"General," said I, "were you not formerly a practicing lawyer in New Haven, Connt, and a clerk of Court?" "I was," said he. "Well," I continued, "I am a practicing lawyer in New York City; but I once resided, near five years, in New Haven, while I was at Yale College, and studying law, and I subsequently practiced law in Connecticut, until I removed to New York City in 1843."

"Is this," said the General, "Stillman K. Wightman?" I replied, "It is." "Give us your hand," said he. "How are you. I have, a long time, known you well by reputation. Anything that I can do for you, shall be done with the greatest pleasure." Whereupon orders were forthwith given to me, directed to General Ames, to afford me all the facility in his power, in the removal of the body of my son, and to the Chief Quartermaster, Capt Lamb, to furnish me with every facility for the removal of the body by government transport.

With these orders I proceeded to the headquarters of General Ames, presented my authority, and made known my wishes. He treated me very kindly, and sent for the Surgeon general Dr. Washburn, and other officers, who soon appeared, and thereupon we held a conversation. I first made a brief statement when and where I had been informed Edward was killed, and that I believed I had found his grave; and spoke of my desire to procure his remains and take them home with me. Surgeon Washburn enquired if I had a lead coffin. I replied no, It was simply made of pine, and was all I could obtain at Morehead City.

"I think," said he, "it is too late for you now to take up the body and carry it away with only a pine coffin; and my advice to you would be to abandon the idea for the present. At some future time, you might perhaps send a lead coffin, eight or ten months hence, and obtain the remains of your son." A chaplain of a regiment was there, and he approved of the Surgeon's views, as did others present. I felt that it was an important moment with me; and if I could not get their approval, I would probably fail in the whole object of my journey. Thoughts whirled through my mind with great rapidity, during which time not a word was spoken by anyone.

At length I broke silence, and addressing myself to General Ames, "General," said I, "a long and tedious journey from New York City I have just performed to this place, to obtain the body of my son. I have the affections and feelings of a kind father. I have left at home his mother and several brothers and sisters, all of whom loved Edward; and if I were to return home without his remains, when they are evidently so near within my reach, it would be a sad disappointment to all of us. It has been a never-failing rule with me hitherto, never to abandon a thing I have undertaken, until it is accomplished, provided it be an object worth pursuing. This is an object eminently worthy of my utmost efforts, and I must say, without intending to give offense, that if it be not counter to God's will, I will never leave Federal Point without taking the body of Edward with me."

Here another pause ensued. "Well," said the General, "I will cheerfully aid you all I can; but we are as yet in a very unsettled condition." Others present proffered their services. "It is possible," said Surgeon Washburn, "if the body were deposited in the coffin, and the residue of the space filled with salt and rosin, you might be able to carry the remains north in tolerable safety at this season of the year." Having arrived at this favorable point, I did not deem it advisable to press the matter further for that day; and so I bade them good afternoon.

The night was approaching and I was three miles from the Point, and was obliged to be there about sunset, or I might fail to get them to send me a boat from the Montauk, where I was forced to go and stay nights, as there was neither food nor lodging of any kind for me on shore. So I commenced and waded through quicksands and salt marsh to the Point, where, in about a half an hour afterwards, they sent me a boat, and took me on board the Montauk. I had no food since morning; my excitement and been very great, and my frame very weary. After supper I sat awhile, and then went to the after cabin, where, after thanking the Lord for His mercy and goodness to me, and praying for the success of my enterprise, if consistent with his will, I lay down in my berth and slept soundly and sweetly through the night.

On Monday morning the 30th January, I again went ashore at the Point and saw Capt Lamb, the Quartermaster, and gained his sympathies in my behalf, with his promise to aid me all in his power. The wind blew severe from the north or north-east, and was accompanied with some rain, and it was uncomfortably stormy and cold. But I drew my overclothing around me, and started again on a pilgrimage to headquarters, not forgetting to stop at Edward's grave on my way.

Having arrived at General Terry's headquarters, I obtained an interview with Doctor Barnes, a physician, and inquired if he knew where I might obtain salt or rosin. General Terry remarked that he could furnish me with plenty of salt; and Doctor Barnes said there was no rosin to be found there, but he expected to go to Smithville, across Cape Fear River, the next day, and if he could find any rosin he would bring some over on his return. With these assurances, I found myself obliged to be content for the day. I saw that the business must take time for its accomplishment; and too much haste might defeat my purpose. So I spent the rest of the day in roaming through the camps, among the soldiers, and in examining critically the rifle pits and breast works, and Fort Fisher, and Forts Lamb and Buchanan, and in holding sundry conversations with officers and soldiers.

During the day I found an officer who told me that he had three bodies taken up last June at Newbern, N. C., that had been buried three months. That he procured tent-cloths, and covered the cloths with hot pitch, and wound them around the bodies, and put hot pitch in the coffins, and sent them to Brooklyn, New York, where they were buried in Greenwood Cemetery; and no fault was found, or complaints made; and he kindly offered me his assistance if I should need it. I then went to General Ames' headquarters, and saw Surgeon Washburn, and reported the facts to him; and he thought the plan a better one than he had suggested the day before.

Finally, after a day of anxious care, I returned to the Point, and went on board the Montauk. At supper we had at the table Capt Ainsworth, the harbor master, and also the Capt of the small steamer Howard, which was accustomed to run from the Point up the River to a wharf abreast of General Terry's headquarters, and was engaged in other harbor service. I inquired of them, as I did of many others, for information where I might obtain pitch, or rosin, or tent-cloths; and as for pitch, or rosin, they did not know where they could be found.

The next morning, Tuesday the 31 January, I went ashore again at the Point, and waded through sand and salt marsh until I reached Fort Lamb; and from there to the north easterly extremity of Fort Fisher I made thorough search, throughout the whole rear of the Fort, for pitch, and rosin, inquiring of every person I saw, if they knew of any such articles; to which, I received the uniform answer, that they had no knowledge respecting it. Finally, observing a rising knoll of sand lying in the rear near the tide water of the River, I repaired thither, and with the fragment of a pick-axe I went to work, picking a slight mound of sand; when, to my astonishment, I found a whole barrel of rosin there, buried in the sand! I was affected, even to tears, and thanked the Lord and took courage.

I then sought for and found a large sand-bag, and emptying out the sand, I commenced filling it with large lumps of rosin; and having obtained from 25 to 30 pounds, and seeing a large four-wheel wagon, drawn by a team of six mules, just passing me, I begged the privilege of depositing the bag of rosin in the wagon--which was freely granted, and the rosin was thus carried to a point within half a mile of headquarters. There I took the load upon my back, and carried it through deep sand, to the headquarters of General Ames, and left it in charge of a soldier for the ensuing night.

The same day I had the coffin sent ashore, and saw Capt Lamb, and by his orders the coffin was forwarded and left in charge of another soldier near the same headquarters. I got a permit and obtained a sufficient quantity of boards to make a box to inclose the coffin, and had coffin and boards left in front of Cap Gordon's tent, who promised, the next morning to detail a carpenter, and have the box made, and in the meantime to have the coffin and boards properly guarded and not taken away. It was now near nightfall, and I was greatly fatigued.

I could find only two men belonging to the 3d Regiment N.Y. Volunteers, and they did not know where Edward was buried. The rest of the Regiment had been sent to a place in or near Smithville, on the western shore of the sea, near the mouth of Cape Fear River, 10 or 12 miles distant; and I could not see them without getting a pass and spending two days, which I did not feel at liberty to undertake to do, in view of the delay that must ensue; for, I found nothing would be done unless I was constantly present, attending to the business myself, and the body was, every day, becoming undoubtedly more and more decomposed and unfit for transportation.

It seemed to me I could not walk back to the Point in season to get on board the Montauk; and so, after a moment's reflection, I moved slowly toward an officer standing near General Ames' headquarters. I had conversed with him the day before, and he had known Edward, and felt an interest in my success. Addressing myself to him, in a half mournful, half jovial tone, I said, "Pity the sorrows of a poor old man, whose trembling limbs have borne him to your door! I am quite fatigued," said I, "and yet I must be at Federal Point by sunset, or perhaps lose my night's rest on board the Montauk."

Turning round to an orderly he said, "Orderly, take your horse and another, and go with this gentleman to the Point." And in less than five minutes, I was on horseback, with the orderly by my side, and away we galloped to the Point, where the orderly took my horse and returned, and I went aboard the Montauk for the night.

I went ashore at the Point early on Wednesday morning the 1st February, and again waded, as usual, through sand and salt marsh, in the face of a keen, cold wind, until I arrived at the spot where I had before found the barrel of rosin; and now commenced making search for pitch. I critically examined every place where I thought there was any probability of success. Finally, I betook myself to the edge of the tide from Cape Fear River, which was beginning to ebb; and there, after a short search, I discovered what I judged to be a barrel of pitch, embedded in the sand under the water. This unexpected good fortune enlivened my hopes, and gave me a fresh impulse, and encouraged me to persevere.

I then proceeded immediately to General Ames' headquarters, and told him of my labors the day before, and that it was necessary for me to procure assistance in endeavoring to obtain the pitch, and more rosin than I had been able to carry through the deep sand on my back. He very kindly reproved me for not asking for assistance, instead of carrying the rosin myself; and ordered a detail of men and a team forthwith, to be at my disposal. In a few minutes I was provided with a heavy four-wheel wagon, drawn by six mules, with a driver, and three men; and on we moved to the places where were the rosin and pitch. We gathered a further quantity of rosin, and then went for the pitch.

The tide had receded, and in digging around what I supposed was a barrel, we found it was only three barrel staves, which however, had pitch on the inside about two inches thick. This, we concluded, would not be sufficient, so, while one of the men was severing the pitch from the staves, we strolled over southward, beyond the barrel of rosin, into the central part of the rear of the Fort, and there found a barrelhead, covered with pitch from 4 to 6 inches thick, embedded in the sand; which was all and more than I needed. I felt extremely elevated in this sudden and unexpected discovery. We carried it with the rest of the pitch and the rosin, to the wagon, and went and deposited the whole at General Ames' headquarters.

I next repaired to Capt Gordon's tent, to see what progress had been made in finishing the box, and found the lumber had not been touched by a carpenter. The coffin was there, but the boards had been removed some distance to a pile of joints. I sought out Capt Gordon, and respectfully remonstrated. He went with me immediately to the only joiner there was there, and ordered him to leave all other jobs and make me the box. The carpenter obeyed, and I stood by him and helped him, every way I could, for about five hours, when, it being near nightfall, and seeing that the work was about done, I walked from headquarters to the Point, very much fatigued, and again went aboard the Montauk, and slept sweetly through the night.

Thursday morning the 2d February I again went ashore at the Point, and walked, as usual, to headquarters. It was cold and the wind blew very hard from the northwest. I called upon General Ames, and told him the progress I had made, and now all I wanted was a tent-cloth. He said I would have to go to General Terry for that. I immediately repaired to General Terry's headquarters, and told him what I needed; and by his direction I was furnished with an order on the physician at the hospital, a mile above, to deliver to me a tent-cloth to wrap the body in, and a detail of men, and a team, to take up and remove the body. He also ordered me a horse, to be at my disposal during the day.

So I mounted the horse and galloped away, through clouds of dust and sand, to the hospital, and saw the physician, who politely informed me that he could not furnish a team, or a detail of men; but he would send a tent-cloth to General Ames' headquarters, where the rest of my materials were deposited. He gave me an order on an officer at General Ames' headquarters, for a team, and detail of men. Consequently I had to ride back to those quarters; and there the officer gave me an order for a team, and detail of men, on another officer three quarters of mile above the hospital.

I found the box, and coffin, rosin and pitch, and subsequently the tent-cloth, all deposited together at General Ames' headquarters. I then galloped off in the eye of the keen wind, with my mouth, eyes and ears filled with dust and sand, to the station above the hospital, and presented my order to the officer. He ordered up a team, and a detail of four men, besides a driver.

Thus equipped, we moved forward, and arrived at General Ames' headquarters, we loaded in the coffin, and box, and tent-cloth, and rosin, and pitch, and started for Edward's grave. On the way I conversed freely with one of the men, a Lieutenant, who was the most intelligent, and did the most important part of the work. He said his father was an undertaker.

Having arrived at the grave, we selected a spot about five feet below the top of the knoll, just west of where Edward was buried; and then while they were digging a hollow place and lining it with large stones, and procuring pine wood for a fire, I rode around into the rear of the Fort, and there I found an old iron pot partially broken, and a bit of an old iron sauce pan, which we carried to the place; and putting on fuel upon the stones and starting a fire and fixing the pot thereon, we threw in a plenty of pitch, with a little rosin, and when it was boiling hot, we put it on with an old brush and swab, and covered the inside and top board of the coffin, so that it appeared to be air tight. We then covered one side of the tent-cloth with pitch, so that it appeared water tight.

We then repaired to the grave, and the men began to dig. By this time, including straggling soldiers, there were about twenty standing around the grave. I stood at the foot, anxiously watching every particle of sand that was removed. When they had dug down about four feet, they came to his body. They carefully removed the sand.

He was lying partly on his back and partly on his right side, with his face inclining toward the East. He was buried in his military dress, just as he appeared when he was shot on the parapet. The collar, or rather cape, of his coat had been drawn up, and each end of it folded over his face. When they came to move aside the collar, or cape, revealing his contenance, I was sadly struck with the sight. His face was white and very much swollen; his eyes had evidently been in some way injured, his chin dropped down very low, and his upper teeth were very prominent. However, his forehead and eyebrows and hair and ears were very natural, his hands were unmistakable, and his limbs,-all were evidently his remains. In addition to this, he had on his left shoulder the badge of Sergt. Major.

I saw the holes made by the ball that was the cause of his death. It had passed through the muscles of his right arm, about equidistant between the shoulder and elbow, and entered his right breast, perhaps five inches below the collar bone. He had evidently been shot while fighting with his sword in his right hand, by a minie ball, from the rifle of a sharpshooter.. He was shot while on the southeast verge of the top of the first mound at the northeast extremity of the Fort at about five o'clock in the afternoon. His legs gave way under him, and he dropped down where he was shot. He had marched with his Regiment across the bridge about four o'clock in the afternoon, when they climbed up around and on the top of the mound and fought there, often hand to hand with the enemy until he was killed. He was the fifth man that first entered the Fort.

The morning after the battle, Capt John Knowles, his tent mate, and who was near him on the same mound when he fell, went and found Edward's body lying under three other dead bodies on the top of the mound in the same spot where he was shot, with his pockets turned inside out and his watch stolen. Capt Knowles removed his body from the mound which was covered with the dead, and buried it were I found it. As he lay in the grave, his left arm was lying across his body, and his right arm was extended at an angle of forty five degrees from his body, with the hand open and fingers curved inward. His left knee and left foot rested upon his right knee and right foot, his legs being akimbo and drawn up toward his body. He had his military shoes on; otherwise, he had no blanket or covering other than his ordinary military dress. The grave had evidently been dug about five feet in length and about four feet in depth. I still stood at the foot of the grave, and looking at everything critically, wishing to satisfy myself entirely that it was, beyond a doubt, the body of Edward.

Observing a manifest disposition to proceed in the removal, I requested the men to delay a short time, as it was my desire to become first fully convinced of his identity.

"And ye can have no doubt about that," said a rough son of Erin, "for sure now he greatly resembles ye."

On some other occasion, such an Irish bull might have provoked a smile in me; but it passed unheeded.

Edward had been in the two expeditions to Fort Fisher. The first had occupied near 24 days, and he had written us that he had lost flesh. The second, though of shorter duration, was accompanied with storms and high winds. He had no rest, was sea sick, and had taken a severe cold; yet when he landed with the rest of the forces on the 13th January, he was in comfortable health. He was evidently thin in flesh when he was killed. He had been about two and a half years in the service, and had been in fifteen battles, some of them very severe engagements.

I stood in silence looking at his remains. His whole life rushed upon my memory; his affection for father and mother and brothers and sisters and relations, his finished education, his judgment and intelligence, and the hopes he entertained, in common with all of us, that when he had honorable served out the term of his enlistment for three years, he would return to his welcome home, and quietly resume his wonted avocations in civil life; gazing upon his lifeless remains before me, the wreck of all his and our fond anticipations, and feeling that I his father was standing there alone, a stranger in a strange land, far away from my family, with no one present heartily to sympathize with me in the loss, my emotions overcame me, and for a brief time my cheeks were wet with tears. No one can conceive of the agony of my trials on that occasion.

I gave the men directions to remove him from the grave, and place him in the coffin. This was soon done. They spread out the tent-cloth with the pitch on the outside, and laid his body in the cloth, upon his back; and stretching his legs, and folding his arms over his body, and winding the cloth around him, deposited the body in the coffin, which proved to be just the right length and size for his remains. I then requested them to nail down the top of the coffin and pitch the seams on the outside with hot pitch, and then deposit the coffin in the box prepared to receive it, and nail down the top and pitch the outside seams in the same manner.

Meanwhile I mounted my horse (for I could not bear to hear the driving of a nail) and rode rapidly to Fort Lamb, and there obtained from an officer an order or permit to have the body deposited in a bomb-proof, under guard, until it should be transferred to a transport. On my return to the grave, I found the work was completed; and we went immediately and examined some of the bomb-proofs, and came to the conclusion not to deposit the box there, as it was large and very heavy, and would take from four to six men to carry it; and I determined to send it to and deposit it in a building on and near the head of wharf in Cape Fear River, abreast of General Terry's headquarters--where it was accordingly carried and deposited, and remained under guard during the ensuing night.

The sun was near setting. I rode to headquarters, and General Terry's brother directed an orderly to go with me, and we rode, with great speed, to the Point, where the orderly took my horse and returned to headquarters, and I went on board the Montauk. I sat down at the table, almost completely exhausted, but after supper felt revived. Perhaps it had been to me, the most painful day that I had ever experienced. As I was very weary, I soon betook myself to my berth, and slept soundly through the night.

Friday morning the 3d February, I again went ashore at the Point, and first visited the headquarters of Capt Lamb, the Quartermaster, and was told that he was at the headquarters of General Terry. I then had to wade through the sand and marsh to General Terry's headquarters, and was there informed that Capt Lamb had gone to the Point. I found the box in the building on the wharf, under guard.

Soon afterwards I had a long, pleasant interview with General Terry in his private room, by special invitation, I told him I must see Capt Lamb, and that it was my wish to return to New York at the earliest possible moment. He ordered me a horse, and that an orderly should go with me to the Point to see Capt Lamb; and in a short time I was galloping, with an orderly by my side, back to the Point, where we soon arrived. Capt Lamb was not there, and I had to wait for him a long time; and so I sent the orderly back to headquarters, but kept my horse for further use.

When Capt Lamb came, I told him the body was ready for transportation, and inquired of him if there was any vessel there, bound for the Port of New York. He replied, no: but the Transport North Point was lying at anchor near the Montauk, and she would sail for Fortress Monroe that afternoon or early next morning. I told him where the box was. He said the Howard would soon go from the Point up the River to the wharf, and if I were there the box could be put on board and carried by the Howard and put on board the North Point.

While we were talking, the Howard came sailing around the Point up the River, on her way to the wharf. Seeing that this was possible the only chance in my power for expedition, I mounted my horse and ran him as fast as I could make him run, until I reached General Terry's headquarters. Meanwhile the boat had arrived at the wharf and was lying there.

I gave up my horse, and went immediately to the wharf, and had the box put on board the Howard; and shortly afterwards we were sailing down to the Point. On our right, over on the west side of the River, lay Admiral Porter's flagship, two or three Monitors, and about twenty gun boats, quietly in the stream. We passed the point, and soon came to the North Point, where the box was put on board of her . . .

On Saturday about 12 o'clock at noon the 4th February, we sailed out of the harbor, past Fort Fisher, across the bar, and then were detained two hours, awaiting dispatches from headquarters. On their arrival we put to sea, and I bade farewell to Fort Fisher, Our transport had no cargo on board, and having no side wheels, we were liable, at any time, to become the sport of the waves. However, we sailed very well through the night; and the forenoon of Sunday, the 5th February, was extremely pleasant and refreshing.

For two hours I sat upon a hatch and chatted with passengers. The sea was quite smooth, the sun was warm, the sky clear, and the air was bland. About 2 o'clock in the afternoon, we changed our course, and began to steer in a more northerly direction. Presently clouds began to gather in the east and northeast, and the wind grew strong from the northwest, which continued to increase until it blew a heavy gale. The waves ran very high, the vessel rolled and plunged and tumbled. The air became very keen and cold, and there were no places on board for comfort or accommodation. The Captain (Capt Kerwan) was sick with neuralgia, and two of his crew were confined with fevers.

Night came on, the most uncomfortable I ever witnessed. Down to this time I had not been sea-sick during my journey. I stayed up till 10 o'clock at night in the Pilot House, and then went to my berth in the rear cabin. It was impossible to walk the deck, or take a step, anywhere, without holding on to something. I went to my berth, a nasty, filthy place, unfit for a human being to sleep in, small in dimensions, and full of confined air peculiar to forecastles in sea vessels. The vessel was tossing at a terrible rate, and I very soon became seasick. I did not regret it, for I knew it would do me good. After I had got near exhausted, I fell over on my back, and went to sleep. During the night the North Point rolled tremendously. On one occasion the Captain was thrown out of his berth prostrate upon the floor.

We arrived at Fortress Monroe and anchored in Hampton Roads about 9 o'clock in the morning of Monday the 6th February. I immediately went on shore, and after much trouble and delay, went out in a steam tug and got the body from the North Point, and had it brought and deposited at the head of the wharf. I then started and went to the Chesapeake Hospital, to see Lieut. Behan. I found him and Capt Warren as before. Lieut Behan said he was not positive whether Edward was shot in his right or left breast, but he knew it was one or the other. This was all I wanted to know from him.

I returned to Fortress Monroe, and having procured an order of transportation from the quartermaster and a pass from the Provost Marshal, I succeeded, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, in getting the box and myself on board the steamer Alida which soon set sail up the Chesapeake Bay for Baltimore. The vessel was crowded with civilians and soldiers, some of whom were sick, having but just left the hospital. I sat up on all night, sleeping about two hours in an arm chair. During the night, two soldiers died of sheer exhaustion. One of them fell down on the deck and died in five minutes after calling in vain for some kind of spirits to revive him. He had not a friend on board.

We arrived at the wharf in Baltimore at 7 o'clock on Tuesday morning the 7th February. At 9 o'clock I had got the body transferred and put on board the cars, when we started in the New York train for New York. There came up a storm of snow which caused some delay, and I did not reach the depot in New York until about 8 o'clock in the evening, where I left the body in charge of the baggage master for the night. I arrived at home about 9 o'clock in the evening, having travelled about sixteen hundred miles in less than three weeks, and in better health than when I first started on my journey.

On Wednesday morning the 8th February, the body was brought to our house, No 65 East 14th Street. The box was found to be air tight. The funeral was attended at our house on Friday the 10 February at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Relatives and numerous friends were present, and the services were solemn and appropriate. Saturday morning about half past 7 o'clock, the body was taken to the depot at 27th Street. There we had it put on board a car, and myself and three sons, Frederick, James, and Charles, proceeded with it in the cars to Middletown, Connt., where we arrived at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

We had previously written to friends in Middletown and Cromwell, of our wish to bury the body that day in Cromwell. We found several warm hearted friends waiting for us at the depot, and a carriage and hearse and all things in readiness. From there we went to Cromwell and to the cemetery, where we had the body buried in our family burying ground. Edward's remains were deposited beside the grave of his little sister, who died, at about two and half years of age, and was buried in 1832. The funeral services at Edward's grave were appropriately performed by Revd Stephen Topliff, the only surviving brother of Mary Butler deceased, widow of James Butler, deceased, the brother of my wife.

Before I left the grave, I went back and took a long last lingering look at the box, containing the remains of a son that was near and dear to me. Many friends attended the burial, and services at his grave. "And there," said I, "his body lies, and I trust will be permitted to lie, in peace till the morning of the resurrection."

I came away feeling that all my care and toil was nothing, compared with the satisfaction of knowing that his remains had been taken up from a grave in an enemy's land, and had been safely buried in our family cemetery.

After the burial, we stopped a short time at the house of our friend, Bulkley Edwards, and then came to the City of Middletown and spent a couple of hours with our old and tried friend Nathaniel Smith and wife and family, where, after partaking of a rich repast, we went to the depot, and starting in the cars at half past 7 o'clock in the evening, arrived home in New York shortly before midnight. The day had been clear and cold and night was frosty. On the following day we were visited with a severe snow storm.

I herewith append a rough sketch, made by me with a pen, of Fort Fisher and its surroundings. [It appears on page 1300]

In the foregoing narrative I have endeavored to state facts with a view of being clearly understood, wholly regardless of style or diction. And now, in bringing this sketch to a close, I desire to express by gratitude to Almighty God, for all the way in which He led me through all the scenes which I have so imperfectly described.

It was at first uncertain whether Edward had been killed or wounded. Yet my impressions were irresistible that it was my duty to go after him or his body immediately. On arriving at Washington, although I was detained the whole forenoon in obtaining a pass, I nevertheless left in a steamer at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and could not have left before, for Fortress Monroe. On arriving at Fortress Monroe, I was detained over three days and nights in that military strong-hold. Yet it proved for my benefit--for, during the detention, I was enabled to obtain critical information of Edward's death, and manner of death, from an eye witness, which I afterwards found I could not obtain from any other source.

The way did not seem to open for me to go direct from Fortress Monroe to Fort Fisher, and I grew uneasy. In the midst of the delay the Ellen S. Terry anchored in Hampton Roads, driven in by stress of weather, bound for Newbern; and as I was acquainted with the Captain and principal owner, I went on board of her, and sailed to Newbern. On arriving at Newbern I felt unpleasant that I was detained there for a day and a night; and yet the delay gave me a fine opportunity to ramble through the place and notice the inhabitants. Besides, on reaching Morehead City the next day, I found, if I had been there the day before, no transport would have been ready to sail for Fort Fisher. If I had gone direct from Fortress Monroe to Fort Fisher, I must have gone without a coffin; whereas on my arrival at Morehead City, our kind brother Middlebrook furnished me with a coffin already made, and the next morning I started with it for Fort Fisher.

After landing at Federal Point on Sunday morning, I feel that I was led by Him who knoweth all our thoughts and ways, in the most direct route to Edward's grave; and in all my subsequent efforts to effect the removal of his remains, and the almost marvelous manner in which I discovered, from time to time, and obtained the necessary materials to carry out my purpose, I recognize, and, with gratitude, record, my acknowledgments of, the superintending care and goodness of God in dealing so graciously with me in the midst of my fiery trials. So far as I know, not a transport left Fort Fisher after my arrival there, until I was ready to return home; and then, the very next day the North Point started for Fortress Monroe, which was more agreeable to me than to think of coming all the way home by sea at such an inclement season of the year. Moreover, notwithstanding all my exposure and fatigue, I found myself improving in health. My return homeward was rapid; and after my arrival in New York, everything worked favorable until we had deposited Edward's remains in their resting place and we had returned to our home.

I believe that the bounds of our lives are fixed by our Creator, and we cannot pass them. Edward's time to depart from us had come; and while I mourn his loss, (for I loved him tenderly) I feel it my duty to yield submissively to the will of the Most High, and to acknowledge that He hath done all things well. Blessed be His holy name. I feel that I am reconciled to this dispensation of his providence, and say "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, and blessed be the name of the Lord."

This is the last letter written by Edward Wightman. He was still aboard the transport, anchored off Fort Fisher, when he wrote expressing the hope that he would soon resume his old place in the family circle. He had three more days to live.

January 12, 1865

Dear Father, Mother, Fred, Abbie, Jim, Lillie, Chas, Mary, Ell and the Babies:-

Your Christmas family letter dropped into camp on New Year's Day like a five hundred pound Parrot shell and administered such a shock of home-sickness and hunger that I came near being annihilated. What had I, a free going, half starved soldier, to do with your savory turkey, and mealy sweet potatoes and luscious plum pudding, and hot mince pies and foaming lager? Ah, my friends, thus was it with the Captain in ancient times, when afar off he gazed woefully at the smoking ruins of the beloved city of his birth, burned by a barbarous enemy. Now, "veni" "sed" "vidi", though without the rest? Well, well, if we all do see another Christmas, maybe it will be a jolly one.

I am glad to hear that you had such a pleasant time. Our family is very fortunate, indeed, to have preserved thus far, its circle unbroken and to be able to meet and enjoy quietly an occasional holiday. You will readily believe, without much assurance from me, that I long to rejoin you and resume my place in your midst. Let us hope that the year 1865 will restore peace in the country and to all Americans the rights and privileges of respectable citizens.

As ever your Affectionate son, brother, and uncle,

THE KENNY WIGHTMAN STORY

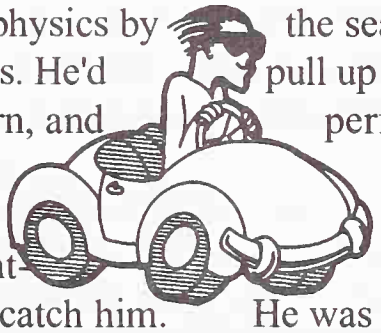
Kenny Wightman, 37, and currently incarcerated at MCI-Cedar Junction, formerly known as Walpole State Prison, is among the most notorious prisoners in the Massachusetts prison system. His notoriety predates his unprecedented escape from maximum security Walpole in 1979. Although four others had escaped from Walpole since it opened in 1956, none remained free for very long. Wightman lived free and crime-free for four years before he was recaptured, even going into business with a Sandusky, Ohio police officer. Now, eleven years later, the folks in Ohio still would welcome him back into their community.

Kenneth R. Wightman
1985 at Walpole

Wightman, the youngest of three children, grew up in a housing development in Hyde Park, a Boston neighborhood with a tough reputation. Hyperactive and extremely bright, Wightman was bored by school which offered him no outlet for his energy and intelligence. His role model was his older brother Bobby, in whose footsteps he followed. Bobby liked to steal cars.

And so cars, specifically high-performance models, became young Wightman's obsession. He learned to drive them (at first sitting on a phone book so he could see over the steering wheel), fix them, and eventually steal them. He was such a daring car thief that he became a local legend while still in his teens, among both his peers and the police. He loved speed and aptly learned the laws of physics by the seat of his pants. Wightman liked to taunt the local cops. He'd pull up in front of the Hyde Park police station, blow the horn, and perform long winding burn-outs in the stolen car, producing dense billowy clouds of white smoke. Furious, the cops would chase him — chases that Wightman loved. Most of the time they were unable to catch him. He was so "ballsy" that more than once he came up behind the police cruiser searching for him and playfully tapped their rear bumper with his car. It was Keystone cops all the way and cops don't like being made fools of.



Eventually Boston area cops began to automatically pin car-related crimes on Kenny Wightman, whether or not he was responsible for them. In fact, it wasn't just the police who automatically assumed Kenny Wightman was behind the wheel of every stolen hot rod. Once Wightman's father saw someone that he thought was his son drive by in a car he didn't recognize. He became furious that Kenny had stolen another car, until a moment later, his son walked up to him on the sidewalk. Another time, father and son noticed a crowd gathering around a car crashed into a mailbox. "Yeah, Kenny Wightman crashed another car," was the word, until Wightman himself walked up.

His notoriety grew when he began escaping, first from local area courthouses, then through the skylight of the Hyde Park police station. Later he escaped from the Deer Island House of Correction where he swam the frigid November water of Boston Harbor to gain his freedom. Only later would he learn about the previous would-be escapees who had drowned.

Wightman had been moving toward straightening out. He wasn't a bad kid so much as a wild kid. Wightman, a talented mechanic, would sometimes repair the cars that he had stolen, abandoning them to be recovered and returned to their owners in better condition. The way out of Kenny Wightman's low-income neighborhood was to join the service and Wightman tried to enlist in the Navy. His most cherished ambition was to pilot F16 fighter jets. Told to come back after a suspended court sentence was lifted, he circled the tentative date on his bedroom calendar and spent the time training to become a certified auto mechanic. He was only one month away from certification when his life changed forever.

An attempted holdup of a courier outside a Boston area bank led to the shooting of two Boston police detectives. Both officers lived, but were disabled for life. Within days three men were arrested and linked to the crime by physical and eyewitness evidence. In front of an apartment rented by one of the three men, a stolen car was recovered. Keys to the car were found inside the apartment. School books bearing Kenny Wightman's name were in the trunk. Most significantly, Wightman had introduced the person who had sold a rifle used in the robbery to the person who bought and used it. Although Wightman had no history of violence, he was now wanted in connection with the shooting. Changing his identity, he went into hiding.

Around the same time, another Boston police officer who once had been wounded while on duty, died. His son was Thomas Mundy, a prosecutor with the Suffolk County District Attorney's Office. Devastated by his father's death, Mundy became Kenny Wightman's nemesis. The cocky, defiant Wightman, whether or not he participated in the holdup, symbolized the kind of person Mundy wanted most to take off the street. Mundy immediately wiretapped Bobby Wightman's work phone.

A state-wide manhunt ensued. Eventually Wightman was caught through the phone tap. Even though there was no physical, scientific or eyewitness evidence linking him to the crime and many witnesses said they saw only three men at the scene, Wightman was charged. Mundy, who recently died, had a well-known track record of having dubious convictions overturned on appeal. In fact, he was instrumental in building a false case against Willie Bennett for the murder of Carol Stuart, who was murdered in Boston by her husband, Charles. In another widely-publicized cop shooting case, the defendant, Albert Lewin, was released by the courts because of severe prosecutorial misconducts by Mundy.

Following his court arraignment, Mundy visited Kenny Wightman in the prisoners bullpen at the County Courthouse. He encouraged him to believe that he was a defense attorney and tried to obtain incriminating evidence against the others in exchange for a deal. When Wightman realized that Mundy was a prosecutor, he furiously spat in his face.

If Mundy wanted Kenny Wightman before, he wanted him passionately now, so passionately that at Wightman's trial, he called three witnesses who claimed to have heard Wightman incriminate himself. Two were career criminals and well-known snitches. One of them, on a life-parole for murder, was about to be returned to prison for a stolen car and multiple gun possession charges. The other had been institutionalized for mental illness on seven separate occasions and had been a perjured informant in the infamous Boston Strangler case. The third witness against Wightman, a young woman who had been found with cocaine in her freezer, had ample reason to cooperate with Mundy. All three witnesses received extensive rewards in exchange for their testimony. The judge allowed the testimony, even though it was considered hearsay. Wightman had never even spoken to two of the witnesses. However, the three witnesses' testimony and the evidence of Wightman's flight was the cornerstone of Mundy's case. Denied a separate trial, he went on trial with three other defendants under a theory of joint venture.

Wightman, only twenty years old, was stunned to find himself convicted and horrified to hear his sentence - 25 to 35 years in prison. He swore to himself that within six months he'd be dead or free. It took seventeen months. The trial had wiped out Wightman's parents, financially and emotionally. They lovingly stuck by him, writing and visiting often, but there was simply no money left to pay for the trial transcripts, which carried a hefty price tag of $4000, and without them, an appeal could not begin. He was told that because of a backlog there would be a four year wait before a public defender could perfect an appeal. Things were bleak.

Wightman was sent to Walpole, a maximum security prison well-known as a hellhole. He was terrified and with good reason. Upon his arrival, he was beaten up by guards, who chuckled as they escorted him to 3-Block, the most dangerous block in the prison, known as Death Valley. Only 5'6" and weighing 140 pounds, it was likely that he would soon be knifed or raped. To protect himself, he went to the prison library and made a flack jacket out of two National Geographic magazines and a pair of shoelaces, which he wore beneath over-sized sweatshirts. The cellblock was a concrete jungle best described as a war zone. Some guards openly dealt drugs, while gambling and shakedown rackets flourished. An old-time con befriended Wightman, advising him to get out of the Max-end block or he'd likely wind up just the same as the others; broken, doing life, or dead.

Wightman took the advice to heart and went to work in the prison auto shop. With no options left, he planned a daring escape and carefully prepared for it. Removing the barrier and cross-bracing between the trunk and back seat of the chaplain's car, which was in the prison repair shop for a few days, Wightman fabricated a concealed hiding place. He skillfully replaced the barrier with a false metal partition. He gave away his clothes so that the dogs wouldn't have his scent to sniff. He mailed home family photographs and ripped up all his personal papers and flushed them down the toilet.

On the day of the escape, friends on the block rolled up his mattress and folded his blanket. His now empty cell looked as though he'd been transferred. Distracting the tier guard, they then erased Wightman's name from the chalk board. At a pre-arranged time, another prisoner with a crude homemade phone set-up furtively hooked into the phone wires and called the auto shop where Wightman was working, telling the guard Wightman had a visitor. After being handed a pass, he pretended to leave, but instead sneaked into the hidden compartment in the trunk of the chaplain's car. Thought to be in the visiting room, he was not missed at the late afternoon count.

The car was systematically searched as the shop instructor drove it from the prison. In the vehicle trap, the doors, trunk, and the hood were opened. Underneath, the car was searched with mirrors on long poles, and different parts of the car were thumped to make sure they were empty. The noise made Wightman jump, but he didn't give himself away. In the stifling blackness, his heart hammered in terror. One guard hit the back seat cushion, only inches away from Wightman's head. The seat held. A guard dog slept nearby in the afternoon sun.

Still, it took a seemingly endless half hour before the car was finally driven away. The shop instructor parked it in the prison parking lot and then went back inside to conduct some business, leaving a frightened but jubilant Wightman to swelter in his hiding place. Finally, Wightman heard approaching footsteps. The shop instructor returned with a prison guard, they got in, and drove away. The two joked about the breast size of a cute waitress at the bar they were heading to and the instructor told the guard, "Your wife would kill you . . ." Exhausted and weak from the tension, Wightman almost had a laughing fit. He managed to keep silent by biting his hand.

After a few minutes the car stopped at a motorcycle shop and the trunk was opened. A box of motorcycle parts was removed. The car started again and finally stopped at a local bar frequented by off-duty prison guards. Loud shrill music was playing. The instructor and guard went inside. Wightman waited a few minutes then cautiously removed the partition and quietly moved out of his hiding place into the trunk, massaging his arms and legs which were numb. Using a homemade tool, he opened the trunk lid from the inside, lifting it a crack to peep out. Just then a woman walked by the rear of the car. He quickly pulled the trunk closed. A moment later, he slipped out, replaced the false partition, and walked away, putting on a Texaco shirt and hat as he went.

Hours later, at the prison, Kenny Wightman was discovered missing and all hell broke loose. That night Thomas Mundy was informed that Kenny Wightman had escaped. He went ballistic. His extreme reaction was telling. For the next two years, he sought and received police protection. Over the ensuing years, the Boston police released juiced-up reports stating that Wightman was carrying a hand grenade and wouldn't be taken alive. It was furthest from the truth. Wightman called his father to tell him he'd escaped. His father, astounded, said, "Kenny, it takes an hour to get into Walpole. How did you get out."

Wightman headed to New York City and immediately hooked up with a woman. Tucked away in a cheap hotel room, he turned on the television and was aghast when he saw his face filling the screen with a report detailing his escape. He quickly turned it off before the woman could recognize him. Wightman traveled for a while, first getting new identification. In a small town in Pennsylvania, he spent hours in the local library searching newspaper obituaries to find the obituary of a baby who had been born and then died around the time of his own birth. He then applied for the birth certificate, and with that, got a new social security number and then a driver's license. Protected by his new identity, Raymond Nicholas Diley, Wightman was elated to be alive and free, grateful for his new beginning.

The Southern economy booming, Wightman headed to Texas and easily found work in an auto repair shop. With his skills he quickly became an equal partner in the business. He met up with a pretty, but strange woman named Janey, who moved in with him at a beach house that he was renting near Galveston. Then, Bob Cooper, a friend of some friends to whom Wightman owed a favor showed up. Cooper was running from the police, and he needed help getting new identification. Wightman got him the identification, but Cooper didn't leave, moving in with Wightman and Janey. Worse yet, Cooper had guns, which didn't make Wightman very happy.

One morning Wightman asked Janey to leave. She seemed to exist in some sort of fog, at times not really all there, and Wightman was beginning to feel as though he was exploiting her. He told her that his parents were coming. She asked if she could come back after their visit. He hedged. The next morning Janey walked down to the beach and sat down cross-legged, gazing off at the ocean. Wightman got ready for work and then walked down the beach to get Janey so that he could give her a ride. As he approached, she turned around, without any warning fired Cooper's .357 Magnum at him. Frantically, he "zigged" and "zagged" over the sand dunes, managing to avoid being hit, although she came close. It was time to leave Texas.

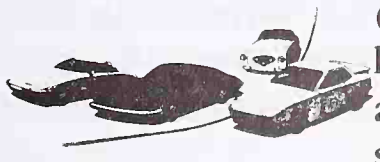
When the repair business lost its lease, Wightman and Cooper had begun buying cars in Texas, fixing them up, and then selling them at a dealer's auction in Columbus, Ohio. It was while on one of these trips that Wightman met Debbie Cole, who was playing pool in a lake side bar in Sandusky, Ohio. She took him home and they talked all night, making love as the sun came up. When Debbie's three children awakened, Wightman made a great impression on Debbie by taking the whole family to MacDonald's for breakfast. That night they all watched a spectacular Fourth of July fireworks display from the shores of Lake Erie. They spent nearly every day together.

Within weeks, Wightman moved in with Debbie and her three children and began to put a badly managed home and family in good order. He fixed up the house and as time went on, he earned more money fixing, buying and selling cars, he brought in new furniture and big appliances. He became a father to the children, who badly needed supervision. He insisted that they all sit down to breakfast and dinner together. He became especially close to the youngest, Ryan. One spring day, while teaching Ryan to fly a kite in the local park, a beautiful rainbow appeared on the horizon. Wightman remembers fondly explaining rainbows to Ryan, telling him about the pot of gold at the end. "No matter how bad something may seem to be," he told the little boy, "if we look hard enough, our own rainbow can be found anywhere." Ryan, wide-eyed and nodding intently, giggled. The two were nearly inseparable. By the time he was five, Ryan could name almost any car he saw. Wightman frequently socialized with Debbie's family who loved him and thought that he was good for their daughter. Partly because of Kenny's black Labrador, but mostly out of love, the three children nicknamed Kenny "Daddydog". The name stuck.

Kenny & Debbie

Wightman's pride and joy was a 1970 Pontiac GTO muscle car that over time he painstakingly restored. Every time work was done on the car, Ryan seemed to be there to help. Even washing the car turned into fun and games, with squirting each other with the hose and horsing around to the blare of rock music.

One weekend they brought the car to Norwalk Raceway where Wightman drag raced against a Corvette. Taking 1st place in his class (after two unsuccessful tries), he promptly handed the tall trophy to an elated Ryan. Later, as they drove home, Ryan tightly clutching the shiny trophy, excitedly talked about being older.



"One day I want to be just like you, Daddydog." Wightman took a long breath before he replied. "I don't think so, kid. Naw, you'll be way better than me, I bet." They high-fived each other. Kenny quickly turned away, fiddling with the radio while he swallowed the lump in his throat and hid the tears in his eyes.

Ryan's first day of kindergarten found Wightman standing with a small group of parents outside the school yard fence during recess. Ryan, dressed in new school clothes, looked lonely. Suddenly, spotting the red GTO parked at the curb, he dashed for the fence, searching from face to face until he found Kenny. Hanging on to the fence, he begged to go home, making up wild exaggerations about the trials and tribulations of kindergarten while the other amused parents looked on.

Kneeling down, Kenny told Ryan that he had to do his best at school and that he would soon make new friends. Winking, Wightman told the little boy that if he really tried, then, maybe, when he came to pick up Ryan after school, he'd let him help drive the GTO home. That afternoon, in an empty parking lot, the sounds of a high performance engine reverberated in the air. The GTO could be seen first leapfrogging and then slowly circling around in figure eight patterns. Ryan sat on Kenny's lap, steering the car. Kenny laughed, patted Ryan's head, and teasingly cautioned him, "Hey, slow down there, Mr. Mario Andretti . . ." while reminding him not to tell Mom. Ryan thrived in school and at home.

One night Kenny took Ryan with him to pick Debbie up from work. Ryan, as usual, sat atop the center console between Kenny and Debbie. On the way home, they encountered a shiny new Cadillac weaving on the road in front of them. When, after a few courteous beeps and a flash of the headlights, the Cadillac refused to give way, Ryan said, "Burn him, dad." Kenny floored it and zipped around the car, while Ryan stuck up his middle finger and softly muttered, "Jerk", as they sped by. Debbie, mortified, scolded them both, as Kenny gently elbowed Ryan.

Wightman developed a good reputation in Sandusky as an extremely hard worker and an excellent mechanic. He entered into an automotive partnership venture with a friend, Jack Butts, a talented jack-of-all-trades. The combined skills of the two men allowed them to expand their business. Soon Lloyd Bodi, a local police officer, joined into the partnership with Kenny and Jack. The three men were extremely close and trusted each other implicitly. Kenny Wightman became a well-respected member of the community, paying taxes, voting, and sometimes helping to coach his son's Little League team. He carried an infectious smile and a zest for life. Wightman was living the life that he always wanted.

He kept bi-monthly contact with his mother and father by telephone, using a simple but clever code system, pre-arranging phone calls to phone booths, never calling to or from the same phone. The FBI were constantly spot-checking the Wightman's house and their phone was tapped. At times, one of Wightman's parents would leave the house, to be followed by the police surveillance. Then the other one would slip out for his or her telephone rendezvous with Kenny. The limited contact meant everything.

While Wightman was living in Sandusky, his mother, who was diabetic and had always had delicate health, died. The heartbreaking news devastated Kenny. Grimly determined, he made his plans. Jack Butts helped Wightman with some money to get to his mother's funeral. Wightman planned to disguise himself in a nun's habit, but discarded the rented costume at the last minute, wanting to be free to run if the need arose. Knowing the police and the FBI would be laying in wait at the wake and at the cemetery, Wightman arrived at the cemetery well before dawn the day of his mother's burial. He managed to find a vantage point in a nearby tree that gave him a good view of two newly dug graves. High up off the ground and anchored securely to the tree with his belt, he settled in for the long wait, eventually dozing off. He awoke to see FBI agents staking out the grave site. The place swarmed with a dozen federal agents in dark sunglasses and suits. He watched several of them put on the uniforms of cemetery workers and take up strategic positions. Unmarked police vehicles were everywhere.

Eventually the funeral party arrived and the graveside ceremonies were conducted. From high up in the tree, Kenny solemnly watched his father, sister, and relatives, but unable to do what he needed to do most, which was to run to and mourn alongside his grieving family. Choked with tears, he watched his mother's coffin lowered into the ground and covered with earth. At dusk, hours after the police and the FBI had left the cemetery, Kenny came down from the tree and wept at his mother's grave.

Sometime that night a startled pastor awoke to discover a solitary figure at the door to his Cape Cod Church. Seeing the look of heartrending anguish covering the young man's face, he graciously allowed him inside, despite the late hour. After lighting a candle, he left Kenny alone in the small chapel. When daylight came, he was gone.

Kenny returned to Sandusky and continued his life with Debbie and the children, working long hours with Lloyd and Jack. He even went to the annual Policeman's Ball. Debbie wanted to get married but Wightman was unable to bring himself to agree, considering his circumstances. Confused by his vague reasons, she began to express jealousy. Debbie and Kenny decided to take a break. Kenny moved into a cozy apartment in the house of his business partner and friend, Jack Butts. The change did the relationship good and Debbie and Kenny frequently spent the night together. They excitedly planned for a vacation in Toronto.

The future looked promising, but Kenny always feared that he would end up back in Walpole. No one in Sandusky suspected anything about his turbulent past. Although Kenny had told both Lloyd and Jack that he had been a wild kid and had gotten into some trouble when was a younger, he could never share his vital secret. Jack wondered why he would sometimes see Kenny sitting alone on the porch in the middle of the night just staring off into the quiet darkness.

Bob Cooper had followed Kenny to Sandusky and was working as a salesman. He began making phone calls to an old girl friend in Boston, but he wasn't as careful as Kenny. Her phone was tapped too as Cooper was also a fugitive. When Cooper stupidly made a direct call to Boston from his Sandusky girlfriend's apartment one night, the FBI was waiting. They traced the call and quickly found him. While searching his apartment, they stumbled upon a faded picture of Kenny Wightman. Cooper's girlfriend, unknowing, gave them Ray Diley's name. Thomas Mundy was notified. Two days before, Kenny and Debbie had returned from their Canadian vacation.

Lloyd Bodi was the first police officer in Sandusky to learn that Ray Diley was really Kenny Wightman. He says of that day, "It was the most traumatic experience of my entire life. I would have to say that it was like the day my father died. It was a black day." A particularly brutal local FBI agent described Kenny's background to Bodi, finishing with the sarcastic remark, "That's your friend Kenny Wightman." Bodi replied, "I don't know Kenny Wightman. The man I know is Raymond Diley and he's the greatest guy in the world."

Bodi had no choice but to call Kenny to find out where he was. He was in his apartment laying in bed with Debbie. Just before midnight, the nearby houses were quietly evacuated and Wightman's apartment was surrounded by large numbers of police and the FBI SWAT team. Bodi, handed a bulletproof vest, solemnly refused it. When Kenny heard a strange sound outside his open window, he instinctively knew it was over. He leaned over and kissed Debbie, saying, "Good-bye babe." and shielded her body with his, as, a second later, the SWAT team came crashing through the windows and doors, wildly screaming and yelling, threatening to shoot. They violently pulled Kenny off the bed, handcuffed and chained him, and he was gone. Lloyd rushed in and hugged a shocked and dazed Debbie. Together they cried.

When he was taken to federal court, he saw many friends. Among the crowd were Debbie and the children. Seeing Ryan's confused and frightened little face broke Kenny's heart. He was ashamed to walk past them, shuffling slowly in the heavy chains, handcuffs and leg irons, surrounded by a dozen heavily armed agents and an equal number of shouting news reporters. Five year old Ryan broke away from Debbie's hand and rushed towards Kenny, but was quickly rebuffed by a federal agent. Upon the advice of a Massachusetts attorney, Wightman made the mistake of not fighting extradition to Massachusetts. His chances of a sympathetic hearing in Ohio where he was known and loved by respected members of the community were much higher. Instead, in the middle of a rainy September night, Wightman, heavily bound and shackled, was driven to a rural airfield and returned to Massachusetts in a chartered plane. The plane landed in a small airfield outside of Boston. In the wee hours of the morning, he was met by a gloating Thomas Mundy and fifteen vehicles which returned him to Walpole in convoy, blue lights flashing.

At Walpole, almost every guard in the place was lined up to get a look at Kenny Wightman, the infamous prisoner who had escaped. He ended up in Ten Block, the notorious maximum security solitary block at Walpole, where prisoners are kept under 23-hour-a-day lockdown. At times, he was maliciously denied his meager food tray — the guard pushing it through the slot in the door so hard that it would fall to the floor, ruined. During upheavals in the block, he was beaten repeatedly, hog-tied, and kicked. It was during one of those vicious beatings (cell extractions is the official term) that Kenny found himself vividly flashing back to that happy day with Ryan in the park and the telling of the rainbow story. Sometime that night, lying on the filthy floor of his dark cell behind the solid steel door, his body screaming in pain, his mouth, eyes and nose searing from the chemical mace, Kenny Wightman found his rainbow in the darkness. His memories and the rainbow gave him the needed strength of mind and soul to survive. He was in Ten Block for four years.

Ironically, the three men who actually carried out the robbery in which Kenny Wightman was implicated have all been paroled. In the eleven years since he returned to Massachusetts, Kenny Wightman has continued to demonstrate that he is rehabilitated. He has earned a Bachelor of Arts degree, magna cum laude from Curry College, a double major in Psychology and English Literature, where he twice made the Dean's List. He joined the "Project Youth" program where, for three years, he shared his life story with countless groups of young boys and girls in an effort to deter them from the brink of delinquency.

He continues to be in contact with Lloyd Bodi, Jack Butts, and many other friends in Ohio. Bodi has said, "Lets don't put a kid in prison and keep him there for years and years because of a mistake he made when he was a young fella. That's what rehabilitation is all about. I'd sure like to get him back here."

When a local television station showed a report on the case of Kenny Wightman, seventy members of the police force picketed, protesting the show. Although his nemesis, Thomas Mundy, died recently, Wightman remains a hated man in Massachusetts by members of law enforcement and the prison system. Because of his escape, Kenny has lost his right to appeal his 1977 conviction. When a story reporting that Paramount Pictures was developing his story appeared in a Boston newspaper in 1986, three well-known defense attorneys rushed to Walpole, asking for Kenny Wightman's power-of-attorney and offering to take over his defense. All the lawyers disappeared, when the movie went into turnaround.

Out of necessity, Kenny taught himself criminal appellate law for over six years. On June 15, 1993, Kenny filed a pro se (acting in his own behalf) Motion for a New Trial in the Suffolk County Superior Court. Attached was a fully briefed 85-page Memorandum of Law in support of his Motion.

For three years, he was the College Coordinator for the Higher Education in Prisons Program of the University of Massachusetts in Boston. For four years, he was the College Coordinator for the Justice Education Program for Curry College. Both programs offered higher education to incarcerated students. He is currently teaching AIDS education at Walpole and counseling HIV infected prisoners.

Kenny eventually made his way into a medium security institution and was on a track to a minimum security institution, a halfway house, and then parole. Recently, however, Kenny was returned to maximum security custody at Walpole, after two prisoners escaped from the facility where Wightman was also housed. Although Kenny was asleep in his cell at the time of the escape and had numerous reliable witnesses to that effect, the prison system grabbed at the chance to further punish the notorious Kenny Wightman. He has filed a civil lawsuit challenging the validity of this transfer. It is unclear whether his hearing appealing this reclassification will occur before he is paroled. He is eligible for parole in late 1996. His sentence expires in 2006.

Kenny — looking for that rainbow

A happy ending appears to be on the horizon. Recently, a renowned appellate attorney from the Public Defenders Office reviewed Kenny Wightman's Motion for a New Trial. He found extensive merit in at least two of the nine issues Wightman raised in his pro se Motion. Each issue independently appears to be well-founded grounds for a new trial. Because of this, a prominent Boston Appellate Attorney, Stephen Neyman, has been assigned to represent him. The District Attorney's office has not responded to Wightman's Motion. A Massachusetts Appeals Court decision is expected shortly.

Against his wishes, Debbie stuck by Kenny following his recapture. However, after waiting three years, she decided to move on with her life and married someone else. Kenny is now engaged to a woman who is a program Administrator in the Human Services Field.

He is currently writing a screenplay based on his life. His ultimate goal is to help develop and implement innovative educational programs geared for delinquent youth. When Kenny Wightman is finally released, they plan to move to Sandusky, Ohio and leave Massachusetts behind — forever. It is clear that he will be welcomed home.

The previous account of the life of Kenneth Ray Wightman was written from his viewpoint.

Another version of his life was written by a staff writer, Charles Kenney, of The Boston Globe in 1983 and 1985. Permission to print these two articles was given with the stipulation that they be reproduced in their entirety without change. Some pictures were reproduced from a copy machine print. FUGITIVE'S OHIO FRIENDS SAY HE WAS RELIABLE, WORKAHOLIC

KENNETH RAY WIGHTMAN

SANDUSKY, Ohio — He is only 27 years old, but, already, he has lived two lives.

He lived one life in the Boston neighborhoods of Hyde Park and Roslindale, where he grew up, as Kenneth Ray Wightman and where a legend grew around his criminal skills. He lived the other life in this gray industrial city on the shores of Lake Erie where, for the past three years, he has gone by the alias of Ray Dily.

In Massachusetts - where he has been one of the most wanted criminals of the decade, according to State and Boston Police - his life was marked by convictions on a variety of crimes from car theft to the attempted murder of two Boston Police detectives. By the age of 21, he had made 38 court appearances; gained a reputation as an expert driver, master of disguise and escape artist.

In Sandusky, he was known as a superb mechanic and auto body man, reliable friend, workaholic.

But nine days ago, after he had spent four years and three months as a fugitive, nearly 50 law enforcement officers, led by the FBI, descended upon Wightman in his Sandusky apartment. Deborah Cole, Wightman's girlfriend of three years, was lying next to him in bed at 11:05 p.m. when they heard the door of his apartment being broken down. Wightman knew instantly what was happening. He quickly rolled over to her, kissed her and said, "Goodbye, babe."

Just then, according to Cole, six agents burst in, guns drawn, shouting, "FBI. Freeze! Don't make a move or we'll shoot!"

Cole says Wightman, staring up the barrels of the guns, shouted back: "We won't! Please don't shoot!"

"They took him into another room and I asked them to please tell me what was going on," says Cole. "They told me, 'your little boyfriend, honey is wanted for murder, kidnaping, drugs, you name it . . . I more or less went into a state of shock then."

KENNY WIGHTMAN BEING LED AWAY BY LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS

So did a lot of others. Although it was not true that Wightman was wanted for murder, kidnaping or drugs, his friends here were none-the-less shocked — a couple of them shattered — to learn that he had been convicted in 1977 of attempted murder of two police officers during a Mattapan holdup.

They were stunned when they discovered that he was sentenced to serve 25 to 35 years at Walpole (Mass.) state prison, from which he pulled off a daring escape in 1979 in the trunk of the prison chaplain's car.

Soon to be extradited

Lloyd Bodi, a Sandusky police officer, is typical of the people who knew Wightman in Ohio.

"We had a good fellowship going," Bodi says. "My feelings haven't changed as far as Ray Dily is concerned. This other guy — I have no idea who that guy is. None whatsoever."

Neither do any of Wightman's other acquaintances here. They are sad that their friend is in the Lucas County Jail in Toledo and sadder still that he will soon be extradited back to Massachusetts where he faces 20 or more years of confinement.

Although one FBI agent said he believes Wightman committed crimes while he lived in Sandusky, he said he has no evidence to prove that. He said Wightman was caught only after agents tracked down Ralph J. Petroziello, another Massachusetts fugitive. Only after searching Petroziello's apartment did police learn Wightman's whereabouts.

The people here closest to Wightman certainly don't believe he has lived outside the law in Sandusky. What's more, the hint that he is anything but a good man brings their wrath.

Jack Butts, 47, and his girl-friend, Fran Voltz, were Wightman's closest friends in Sandusky.

"If he was a real hardened criminal," asserts Butts, "he would never have stayed as long as he did in Sandusky."

Says Cole: "There's always two sides of a story and until you hear both of them you shouldn't pass judgment on anyone."

And one side of the story — the story of Wightman's life before he went to Sandusky — is a story of trouble and crime.

He started out stealing cars, but his crimes escalated and he was convicted of more serious offenses and confined in Department of Youth Services facilities. At various times, he escaped from three different jails.

Course of life changed

But it was in April of 1977 that Wightman got involved in a crime that would alter the course of his life. He was convicted of having participated in the holdup of a man who was making a large cash deposit at a Mattapan Square bank.

When two Boston detectives attempted to prevent the theft, they were shot by one of the three men with Wightman. Police say that Wightman was in the back seat of the get-away car and that he opened fire on the two detectives, as well. According to a prosecutor, however, it was never proven that any of the bullets Wightman fired hit either detective. Both policemen were badly wounded, but survived.

Wightman and the three others were convicted of a variety of charges, including attempted murder, and sent to Walpole.

At Walpole, for the first time in his life his size — he is five feet five, about 120 pounds — proved to be an advantage. It allowed him to squeeze into the trunk of the prison chaplain's car and the back seat. He escaped when the car was driven outside the walls.

After his escape, police say Wightman joined Petroziello, 33, who is wanted for the 1974 murder of a Boston Police officer in Roslindale. Warrants were issue for their arrest after police alleged they were involved in bank robberies* in Pittsfield and

When he was caught, police found an unloaded 22 caliber target pistol under Wightman's mattress. When they searched Petroziello's apartment, they found a small arsenal including four hand guns and an Uzi-type machine gun, according to the FBI.

But the other side of the story has nothing to do with guns or crimes or police or prisons. It is the story of Kenny Wightman as Ray Dily — the man Cole and the others here knew so well.

During an interview at her Sandusky home, Cole offers a photograph taken on Easter Sunday 1981, showing Wightman — with her youngest son on his lap — having dinner at her parents' home in Sandusky. She cries and talks about the gifts he gave to her and the children.

She recalls last Christmas when he helped pay for new bicycles for her three children and says as she sobs: "He always made sure we had a good Christmas: a real good Christmas."

But more than that, she says that Wightman gave her "support, love and helped me discipline my children. We had our ups and downs — money problems and arguments about the kids — but he was always real good to me and the kids."

Many of Wightman's friends in Sandusky said he often worked seven-day weeks and 14-hour days and that the quality of his work was excellent. Bud Sonick, 37, a car salesman in Sandusky, says he worked with Wightman at a Chrysler dealership and that Wightman was reliable and hard-working.

"If I were in a situation to hire somebody to be a general do-any-thing type of guy I'd hire Ray Dily so fast it'd make your head spin." Sonick says. Lloyd Bodi, the Sandusky policeman, says that he has been in my car business on the side for many years and I never met a finer fellow.

* These bank robbery charges were dismissed against Wightman, 31, in 1987

Friend bewildered

Jack Butts, was Wightman's big brother-father figure as well as his closest friend in Sandusky. Butts sat in his apartment, which is on the same floor in the same house as Wightman's, and talked emotionally about his friend one night last week.

He is bewildered by Wightman's past, but more than that, he is anguished by it.

"If I had known him when he was younger he probably would have never gone through the things he did," Butts says.

Fran Voltz, says she has seen people "sit and cry over this. Men included."

Robert Krueger, 62, Cole's father, says if he was to describe the man he knew as Ray Dily to a stranger he would say Dily was "Kindhearted, very enjoyable to be around . . . if you needed help he'd give it to you. He's an ideal guy that you'd want for a son-in-law."

"We're just praying real hard for him." says Krueger's wife. "All of us, the whole family."

Because he is a police officer, Bodi has taken a good deal of flak about his friendship with Wightman.

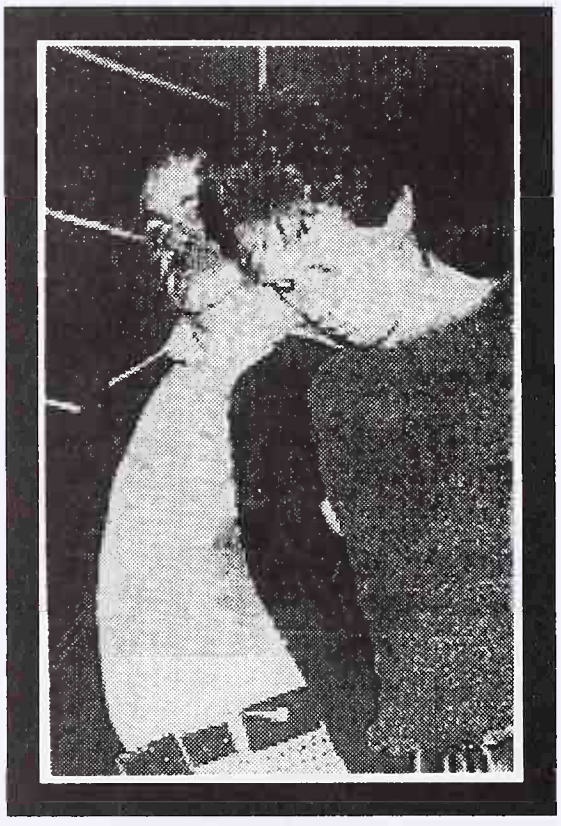
"I'm just numb about the whole thing," says Bodi. "I don't know what happened. All I ever knew him to be was exactly what he was around here . . . It's too bad what happened in his past — but he was a great guy around here."

Wightman called Butts from jail late last week.

"He told me the years he spent here," Butts says, "were the happiest years of his life."

And there could be more happy years ahead, says Fran Voltz.

I didn't know Ken Wightman," she said. "But I did know Ray Dily, and he serves 20 years and wants to come back, our door is open. The door will always be open to him."



KENNETH RAY WIGHTMAN IS ESCORTED TO COURT PROCEEDINGS IN TOLEDO, OHIO

BORN TO RUN

THE LIVES OF KENNY WIGHTMAN

BY CHARLES KENNEY

DOUBLE LIFE

Who is the real Kenny Wightman: The incorrigible kid from Hyde Park doing time for armed robbery and assault with intent to murder? Or the devoted family man from Sandusky, Ohio.

From The Boston Globe Magazine, November 3, 1985 written by staff writer, Charles Kenney.Reprinted with permission with the requirement that no changes be made.

When he was a teenager Kenny Wightman had already become a legend of sorts. He had stolen so many cars and outrun the police in so many chases that word passed among cops throughout Boston and beyond that when he got behind a wheel the kid was really something. When he was only 13, growing up in the Fairmount Housing Project in Hyde Park, Wightman started stealing cars. Propped up on a phone book or a balled-up jacket so he could see over the steering wheel, Wightman learned how to drive very fast and very well. It wasn't long before police began assuming that the kid piloting the TransAm, Corvette, or Road Runner flying down Hyde Park Avenue at 80 miles an hour was little Kenny. He worshiped the older boys who hot-wired cars, and he loved their attention when he did the same. The thefts, the chases, the respect of older kids — they became a drug that gave Wightman a rush to which he seemed addicted.

But his fixes came with a price, and each time he was caught the price rose. Eventually, he would pay dearly. His juvenile record was covered with motor vehicle offenses, and he came to know the inside of the juvenile justice system intimately. By the age of 21 he had been incarcerated in at least five different facilities, including the District 5 Boston police station and the Suffolk County House of Correction at Deer Island. When he escaped from both places, the Wightman lore grew. He's a brilliant driver, the cops said, and an escape artist, that's for sure. And word had it that he was a master of disguise as well.

He loved speed, and his ultimate ambition was to fly jets. And he nearly had an opportunity to try, when a judge told him he would seal his record if the young man were to join the service. Wightman tried to enlist in the Navy, but he was told to come back after his suspended sentence was lifted.

Wightman played catch-me-if-you-can, and the police obliged. But the game took a disastrous turn in 1977, when Wightman was 20 years old. During an attempted holdup of a man about to make a deposit at the Shawmut Bank in Mattapan Square, two veteran police detectives — good men with families — were shot and badly wounded. Three men were charged with the crime right away. And a fourth — Wightman — was charged when police, who were convinced that he was involved, finally caught up with him weeks later. Wightman says he did not shoot the officers; that he wasn't even present when it occurred. But along with the other three defendants, Wightman was convicted of armed robbery and assault with intent to murder. He was sentenced to the Massachusetts Correctional Institution at Walpole for 25 to 35 years.

If he had been a typical inmate, Wightman would have gone along, done his time, and been paroled in 18 or so years. But not Kenny Wightman. After spending 17 months in prison, he did two remarkable things that clinched his status as a local legend.

First, he achieved the impossible: He escaped from Walpole. And when he escaped, a wanted poster told the story of what the police expected from Wightman. It described him as "extremely dangerous" and warned that he could be "carrying a snub-nosed revolver and also a hand grenade. Wightman states that he will not be taken alive."

Second, when he got out he did not return to a life of crime. Instead, he moved to Sandusky, Ohio, and went straight — about as straight as a man can go. He settled into the life of a hard-working, tax-paying, blue-collar family man in the heart of the industrial Midwest.

"I was very happy," Wightman recalls. "Contented. I had my own business, a beautiful girl, a family. I had numerous, numerous friends. I had everything I wanted."

TWENTY-YEAR-OLD KENNY WIGHTMAN, THE FOURTH SUSPECT IN THE SHOOTING OF TWO BOSTON POLICEMEN, AFTER HIS ARREST IN 1977.

But then, after demonstrating for three years that he could live the life of a productive, law-abiding citizen, Wightman was captured in 1983 by a force of nearly 50 law enforcement officials — including state and local police as well as the FBI. At the age of 26 he was returned to Walpole, where he is scheduled to remain, assuming his conduct is perfect, until 1998, his earliest parole date, and quite possibly until 2003, when he will be 47 years old. For his first two years back in prison, Wightman was confined to Walpole's 10 Block, an isolation unit within the prison where inmates must remain in tiny cells for 23 hours a day, sometimes 24.

Wightman lost his right to appeal his conviction when he escaped from Walpole, and he is currently trying to win back that right. He expects to learn soon whether he will be allowed to file for appeal. His lawyer says winning a new trial will be a long shot. (Wightman has more immediate troubles that could lengthen his prison stay: Last month he was arraigned on armed robbery charges stemming from a 1979 robbery in Brockton.)[see footnote-p.1337]

During a series of interviews at MCI-Cedar Junction in Walpole, the first interviews Wightman has ever had with a reporter, his lips tighten when he speaks about his case and the length of his sentence. He is a small man, 5 feet 7 inches tall, 132 pounds, but he is wiry, his muscles toned.

His face is narrow at the jaw yet widens into a broad forehead. His jet-black hair is close cropped, unpro-fessionally done. His eyes convey a sense of joy when he smiles, but they more often reveal cool anger. He will answer almost any question, but the topic about which he speaks with the greatest passion is his incarceration. His frustration is that of a man who says he has proved he is capable of living the life of a working man yet faces the prospect of spending his most productive years behind bars. Yes, he concedes, he has stolen many cars, violated traffic laws, robbed. But he insists that he has never hurt anyone; that his days of crime are long since over. One of his friends from Sandusky, Jack Butts, says that if Wightman were a truly hardened criminal, "he would never have stayed as long as he did in Sandusky."

Kenny Wightman has lost his freedom. He has been deprived of the life he cherished in Sandusky. But he has not lost the woman he loved there. And he has not lost hope.

"I had been convicted. I had been sentenced to Walpole. I didn't have no more money for attorneys. I couldn't get an attorney to take the appeal at the time. I didn't have no money to pay for the appeal. At that time I had no future . . . . If I was Von Baron or whatever that guy's name is in Rhode Island, it'd be a whole different situation with the justice system. I could hire the best appeal attorney that could work on the case. I couldn't even get a copy of my trial transcript, never mind an attorney. What was I supposed to do? Sit in prison for 35 years for something I didn't do?"

It was April of 1979, Wightman had been in Walpole for 17 months and could stomach it no longer. One day, as he changed a tire in the prison body shop, he looked into the rear of a car, and his eye caught the partition between the trunk and the back seat. At that moment it dawned on him that he was looking at a way out of Walpole.

"If they ain't gonna let me out I'll get out myself," he recalls thinking at the time. "I had the trunk open, and I was taking the spare tire out to put on the car, and it just occurred to me that there was my way out if I wanted to take it. It was a '70 Ford Torino; it was the chaplain's car. Yellow. That night I made the decision in my cell. I was just going over my life, going over my trial, going over the options I had left to me. Basically I had no options. I had no money. My family had mortgaged their house and sold a car to pay for the trial. And there was just no money left for the appeal. I was in my cell, and I just couldn't see me doin' 25 years. I thought, "Here's my shot. I'll go for it.'"

He knew that if he were caught he would be thrown in 10 Block, Walpole's hellish isolation cell-block. But there was no doubt in his mind that it was worth the risk. During the next several days he worked at preparing his hiding place. To do so without detection he would slip inside the trunk and pull it nearly shut while he worked. His first task was to remove the partition between the trunk and the back seat. After that he traced a piece of cloth in the partition's shape so that he could cut sheet metal to the precise form of the partition. Next, he cut the crossbeam out from behind the rear seat, then cut out the back-seat springs. He removed all but three springs, leaving those so that the seat would retain its shape and not collapse entirely.

He cut a piece of sheet metal to the exact shape of the partition and glued it to the back of the partition. He then screwed a 2-by-4 onto the back of the partition so that when he got inside he would be able to pull the piece in tight enough to hide any sign that he sat within.

On the day the car was scheduled to leave the prison, Wightman learned that it would go sometime after lunch. That presented a problem. After lunch he would be confined to the auto-body shop, and he would be expected to be there at 2 o'clock, when there would be a routine count of the prisoners. He feared that the car might not be out by then, and if he was missing from the count the prison would be searched, and he would be found. But there was one way to be exempt from all the afternoon counts up until 5 o'clock, and that was to have a visitor. Wightman thought it through. What he really needed was not a visitor but a visitor's pass, a piece of paper that would exempt him from counts until 5 p.m. He sneaked away from the body shop right after lunch, picked up a prison phone, and dialed the shop. When the instructor answered the phone, Wightman, in the most authoritative voice he could muster, barked, "Send Wightman down to the block for a visit!"

"Okay," the teacher dutifully replied and quickly wrote out a visitor's pass.

"After he gave me the pass," Wightman recalls, "he turned around and went back in the classroom, and I pretended to leave by the door. As soon as he turned his back I just snuck over into a corner where I was out of sight and made sure nobody else was around. In the meantime, there was people walkin' back and forth, so I had to wait before I got in the car."

The distance from the corner where he hid, flattened against a wall, to the car was about 30 feet. A steady stream of prisoners and guards flowed by just a few feet from him, but he remained concealed for 45 minutes until he heard no one. Then he dashed across the garage and climbed into the trunk, closing it quickly, quietly. In the dark, he maneuvered into his hiding place between the rear seat and the trunk and pulled the partition into place.

And he waited.

Nearly an hour passed before the instructor got into the car and started the engine. "When I heard the car start I figured this is it — I'm either gonna go to 10 Block for the rest of my life or I'm gonna be free," he says. But the truth was that he believed then and had believed from the moment he had conceived the plan that he would be free; that he would succeed in escaping from Walpole. When he heard the garage door open and felt the car back out, his heart began pounding — hammering — in his chest. He thought about the quality of security at the prison. There was no question that it was very good.

The car was driven toward the prison's exit, but before leaving, it was placed in a "trap," an area enclosed by fences where one guard searched the vehicle while another, armed with a rifle, watched from a tower above. Inside the trap, the driver got out and the guard opened the car's four doors, the hood, and the trunk. Wightman believed he would be discovered only if the guard searching the car sat on or pounded the rear seat. Wightman had removed enough springs to make room for himself but in so doing, he knew, a solid blow would reveal the hollowness in the rear. The trunk remained open for about five minutes as the guard searched the rest of the vehicle. He banged on the floor of the car. He banged here, there. Then he moved to the rear, inches away from Wightman, and shut the trunk.

The instructor got back into the car, the trap was opened, and the car was driven outside the walls of the prison. But soon after pulling out, the instructor drove the car into the prison lot and parked it there. Wightman considered getting out then and making a run for the highway, but instead he waited for nearly an hour until the instructor returned, this time with a guard. They drove out of the prison parking lot, and Wightman could hear them talking about going out and having a few beers. First, though, they had to stop at a store and pick up some auto parts. They drove 10 or 15 minutes to the parts place, made their purchases, and placed the goods in the trunk. They drove about another five minutes and pulled into the parking lot of a bar on Route 1A.

Wightman had carefully planned every aspect of the escape, down to what he would wear when he got free. He did not want to be seen in prison garb, so he had procured within the walls a Texaco shirt and hat. "I grabbed it figuring if I did get out I could put it right on and nobody would bother me. They'd say, 'Oh, that's some guy goin' to work.' " He also had a set of license plates made in the prison in case he needed to get a car. In addition, he brought $600 with him, money he had made in the prison.

After the instructor and the guard went into the bar, Wightman waited a few minutes more. Finally, he pulled the partition out and slid into the trunk. Everything was quiet. He had rigged the trunk lock so that he could open it from the inside, and he raised the trunk half an inch so he could see whether anyone was watching. When it was clear, he jumped from the trunk and immediately turned around, leaned over, and put the partition back in place. He took the extra license plates, shut the trunk, and walked to Route 1. He stuck out his thumb, and the second car by stopped and picked him up. The ride took him nearly to Norwood Center, where he got a cab and traveled to the Millis-Dover area, where he borrowed a car from friends ("I told them I had just been released"). By this time it was nearly 3:30. He would be discovered missing soon after 5 o'clock. He got into the car and four hours later arrived in New York City.

Wightman checked into a hotel in Queens. He spent the evening with a woman, a bottle of Jack Daniel's, and a few lines of cocaine. At 11 o'clock he turned on the television and watched, astonished, as his own face filled the screen. He quickly moved in front of the female companion to prevent her from seeing his picture. The announcer reported that Kenneth Wightman may have escaped from Walpole prison. But a prison spokesman said officials were searching the prison with dogs and were confident that Wightman remained hidden somewhere within the walls. They were all but certain that he was still inside and quite confident they would soon find him.

In Queens, New York, more than 200 miles from the prison, Kenny Wightman smiled.

The age-old lament of prisoners is as familiar as it is hollow. In America's penitentiaries, there are no guilty men. More than 600 felons are confined to Walpole, all of them convicted of very serious crimes. But their stories claim that none of them did what they were accused of doing. All of them are innocent victims of circumstance. Or they were framed. Or the DA was out to shaft them. Or it was a case of mistaken identity. Or they were railroaded. Who can be blamed for skepticism, or even cynicism, in the face of such protestations?

Wightman is aware of the skepticism with which his claim of innocence is greeted, yet he asserts that he was "absolutely not" in Mattapan Square when the two police officers and a bystander were shot and wounded. And he says there is no physical, scientific, or eyewitness evidence against him. He says he would happily take a lie detector test, and further, he claims to have an alibi that he did not use at his trial but that he would call on if he were allowed to appeal.

"I've spent almost five years in a prison for something I didn't do, or something I wasn't involved with that they alleged I was involved with," he says. "I'm not saying I wasn't present when the gun was sold or exchanged. [But] I had nothin' to do with the actual robbery or the shootin' or anything at that scene in Mattapan Square."

A question at the trial was whether there were three or four men who took part in the incident. Some witnesses said they saw three men, others testified to having seen four. On the day of the shooting, police told reporters that the assault was committed by three men. The prosecution's contention was that there was a fourth man — Wightman.

Wightman says that his motive in escaping was to try to get the police to conduct a new investigation into the case. He maintains that within a week of escaping he called the home of the late Massachusetts State Police major John Regan and told Regan that he would turn himself in if Regan would reopen the investigation into the incident. Wightman says Regan would not go for the deal. State Police Lieutenant Colonel John O'Donovan doesn't believe Wightman made the call. O'Donovan says if such a call had been made he would have known about it.

Call or no call, Wightman's lawyer, Matthew Feinberg of Boston, says that there is not "a scintilla of evidence that he was there. He was not in the shoot-out with police."

Nonetheless, Wightman was convicted, says Feinberg, because of three pieces of incriminating evidence: First, the testimony of convicted felon Ronald Hood, who stated in court that he sold the machine gun that was used at the Mattapan incident to Wightman. Second, the testimony of convicted felon George Harrison, who testified that he spoke with Wightman at the Charles Street Jail after Wightman's arrest and that Wightman admitted participating in the crime. And third, a wiretapped conversation Wightman had with his brother, Bobby, before being arrested for the crime. In his closing argument to the jury, Thomas J. Mundy Jr., chief trial counsel for the Suffolk County district attorney's office, quoted from a portion of the transcript in which Bobby Wightman tells his brother that there is a wanted poster out on him, and Kenny responds by asking whether the picture resembles him.

Mundy said during closing argument: "Could you imagine someone coming to you and saying, 'Look, they've got a "Wanted" poster down the station for you.' What would you say? 'Does the picture look like me?' That's all he's interested in; not what the warrant is about. 'Does it look like me?' "

At the trial, Feinberg attacked the credibility of the two principle witnesses against Wightman, saying in his closing argument that "ultimately, the Commonwealth asks you to convict Kenneth Wightman on the basis of the testimony of two convicted felons, George Harrison and Ronald Hood." Feinberg argued that the two men had promises from the prosecution that they would be treated favorably in return for their testimony against Wightman. Feinberg believes the jury found it difficult to separate Wightman from his three codefendants and found them all guilty. "When you have four guys there in the dock and this horrendous crime, it's very hard for the jury to separate a fourth guy," says Feinberg.

The man who prosecuted him says Wightman also was convicted because two trial witnesses testified that he told them he had opened fire at the scene. Mundy says the state's case against Wightman was probably weaker than the cases against the other three codefendants, but Mundy says it was "very strong" nonetheless.

According to Mundy, a witness named Steve Martin, an acquaintance of Wightman's, testified that Wightman told him after the incident, as recorded in Mundy's notes. "It got screwed up and everyone started shooting. If I had to do it over again I wouldn't have done it." And Rene Balliro, a friend of Wightman's, testified that Wightman told her, "They were shooting at my friends, and I just freaked out."

Mundy says a bullet from the machine gun Wightman purchased struck and wounded a bystander. But he also says there was no evidence Wightman shot either of the police officers.

Wightman spent only a few nights in the hotel before renting a furnished apartment on Queens Boulevard near St. John's Hospital. He was comfortable in Queens because of its size and variety of people. "You don't stand out there," he says.

"It's real strange being locked up for two years and then being free," he says. He spent his first days of freedom going to the zoo, walking in the park — taking in all the fresh air and scenery he could find. Within a few days, though, he began looking for a job to support himself. But the search was discouraging. Every place he applied to wanted references and a Social Security number, and he could provide neither.

There had been reports from the police that after escaping, Wightman had stolen a motorcycle and led police on daring chases through Roslindale and Hyde Park, but he dismisses such ideas. "I'm not stupid," he says. "I couldn't stay in Boston or anywhere near Boston or Massachusetts." He also says wanted posters that claimed he carried a hand grenade were absurd.

During the six weeks to two months he spent in Queens, Wightman managed to steal a wallet containing identification he could use temporarily, though it was all but useless in the long run. But he was intent on starting a new life, and to do so he needed a new identity. He made efforts to establish a new identity in New York City, but he found the state's laws involving identification too strict. He needed to get to a rural area where becoming a new person would be easier.

He made contact with friends back in Boston who sent him $700 with which to buy a car. He left New York behind and wound his way down through Pennsylvania to New Castle, a city in the western part of the state not far from Youngstown, Ohio.

In New Castle he went to the public library and reviewed microfilm of newspapers from 1956, the year he was born. During his search he found a story about a baby that died three weeks after its birth. The child's name had been Raymond Nicholas Diley (pronounced Dill-y). Now the name belonged to Kenny Wightman.

From New Castle he made contact with a friend back home who told him that the police "were going crazy back in Boston. The cops were gonna kill me. They're just going all hysterical." He felt an urge to get even farther away from Boston, so he drove west, with no destination in mind, and stopped only when his car broke down in Freeport, Texas. It turned out to be a fortuitous breakdown, for in Freeport Wightman found a good job as a mechanic. He started work at M & M Auto in August of 1979 and remained there until June of 1980. Mike Maxey, who owned M & M, remembers Ray Dily as a good worker and a nice fellow. Says Maxey, "He never did get into no problems around here."

While he was working for Mike Maxey, Wightman spent some of his time shuttling cars to auction in Columbus, Ohio. Before one such trip in the spring of 1980, a young woman from Sandusky who was living in Houston asked Wightman for a ride home. After traveling to the auction, Wightman drove her to Sandusky, an old industrial city on the shore of Lake Erie.

Before heading back for Texas, Wightman decided to hang around Sandusky for a few days. The second night he was there, he went to a bar. "It was like a nightclub," Wightman recalls. "It was a real nice place. Not real high class but nice and clean."

It was there that he saw a young woman shooting pool. Wightman played pool with her, told her he was from New York and had just come in from Texas. Her name was Debbie Cole, and he was attracted to her right away. "It was just something — I can't say magical — but she caught my attention right away."

When she first met him, Debbie thought he looked underage, and she wondered how this young kid got into the bar. But she liked him. She liked his voice, his accent. And she liked the way he listened. They talked until late into the night about Debbie's kids and, Debbie recalls, about "things I had been through." She had been married once and had two children by her husband, but it hadn't worked out. She had a third child by a boyfriend, but that relationship, too, had broken up, and she found herself waitressing full-time and raising three children by herself.

Wightman and Debbie got back to Debbie's house late that night, and when they got up the next morning, Wightman took not only Debbie out to eat but the kids as well. That's what got Debbie. "He was different from anybody I ever met," she says. "The first morning we ever spent together he took me and children out to breakfast. No one had ever done that before. Usually you get guys who say, 'Oh, someone with three kids, no way.' "

After living together for only about a week, Wightman and Debbie decided that he would move from Texas to Sandusky. "We got along so well that I sort of talked him into coming back up here," says Debbie. He returned to Texas to gather his few belongings and to say goodbye to Mike Maxey. In early July he drove back to Sandusky to start a new life.

He had always been good with cars. Even as a kid he had taken to engines the way other kids take to baseball. Work in the prison auto-body shop had taught him some more, and back in 1977, before the Mattapan incident, he had been studying mechanics at the ITT Technical Institute in Chelsea, where he was only a month shy of graduating. When he returned to live with Debbie, he immediately went into business for himself. He would buy used cars wholesale, recondition them, steam-clean the engines, clean the exteriors, and resell them.

He made decent money on the sales and would reinvest nearly everything he made in more cars. After a few months on his own, Wightman went to work at an auto dealership where he was in charge of wholesaling used cars to other dealers. He never got rich off the auto business, but among those who dealt with him he gained a reputation as competent and hardworking. More than a few of those who knew Wightman in Sandusky describe him as a workaholic.

During the year he worked at the dealership, Wightman did quite a bit of business at one particular body shop owned by a fellow named Lloyd Bodi. Lloyd worked part-time at the body shop and full-time as a Sandusky police officer. Wightman liked Lloyd a lot; thought he was one of the nicest people he had ever met. They became good friends, and when Wightman went back into business for himself he continued to have his cars' body work done at Lloyd's place. After six or eight months on his own, Wightman sat down and talked with Lloyd and another friend, Jack Butts, about working out a kind of loose partnership. They agreed and afterward bought cars together, reconditioned the exteriors and sometimes the engines, and sold them at a profit. "We started off slow, but within a matter of a couple of months we were doing real well," says Wightman.

Lloyd thought the man he knew as Ray was the best damn mechanic he had ever seen. And Jack Butts was amazed at the little guy's stamina. The business had its ups and downs, but with their two incomes, Wightman and Debbie were okay. "With my job and his job we were doing pretty good," says Debbie. "We weren't struggling. There was always food on the table."

The business relationship he established with Lloyd and Jack was important to Wightman, but it was nothing compared to the value of their friendship. Both men were a good deal older than Wightman, with more life experience. They were wise in a way, and he learned from them. "We used to work 20 hours straight together." he says. "When you work with somebody for so long you get to know 'em real well. Ain't nothin' phony in there."

The mainstay of his life, though, was his new "family." He felt married to Debbie, and he felt a responsibility as father to her three kids. "When they're young, oh, they're beautiful," he says. "I had to toilet train 'em and go through the diapers and all that. Kids are great. I love 'em. They're real. There's nothin' phony about them. It ain't like adults you meet, ah . . . they're two-faced. Kids are just kids. Unspoiled. They ain't corrupted by life yet."

Most of all Wightman enjoyed gatherings with Debbie's extended family. Those were times of nearly pure joy for him, when he felt part of a close-knit family. But he felt some sadness as well. "The only thing I wish was that my family could be there. My mom and dad and sister and brother."

Perhaps the true test of the relationship between Kenny Wightman and Debbie Cole came when Wightman was returned to prison in Massachusetts, nearly a thousand miles away from her. She has remained unwavering in her support of him. She writes to him frequently and recently came for a two-day visit for which she had saved for months. Why such devotion to a man imprisoned for what could be another 20 years or more?

"He showed me that love was give-and-take with both parties participating equally," says Debbie. She had never experienced that kind of love before. They were a family even to the point of having silly nicknames for one another. She says that Kenny was "Daddy dog," Debbie was "Mommy dog," and the kids were the "puppies."

But, of course, something was wrong. Wightman knew that the serenity of his life was fragile and could be shattered at any moment. He didn't think often about being caught, but it crossed his mind now and again. "I'd think about it, but I wouldn't dwell on it. I knew eventually, somehow or some way, I was gonna get arrested. Somewhere down the line, it might have been 10 years or 20 years, but eventually I knew I was gonna come back."

It was that knowledge that caused a brief rift in their relationship. As time passed, their discussion turned more frequently to the subject of marriage, and Debbie says that each time they talked about it, "Ray would say that he didn't want to get married until he was financially secure."

But that wasn't the real reason. The truth was that he simply couldn't commit himself to her knowing that one day he would be taken away and put behind bars. "We both really wanted to get married," he says, "but deep down inside I couldn't, because I knew eventually I was gonna get caught, and there was no way I could stay out for the rest of my life. Basically, I couldn't do that to the girl."

Their situation deteriorated to the point where, in April of 1983, Wightman moved out of Debbie's house and got a little apartment in the back of the house, where Jack Butts lived.

"We had gotten into an argument, and we decided to split up for a while," says Debbie. "We both needed a little time alone, but we were always together anyway." They both liked having the apartment as a kind of refuge, their own hideaway from the kids, friends, the world. Even after he moved out, Debbie would arrange to have a friend look after the kids, and she and Kenny would spend just about every night together.

Throughout his years on the run, Wightman stayed in touch with friends in the Boston area, and it was from one of them that he learned one day in late March of 1983 that his mother had died the day before. The news shocked him and plunged him into despair. He was so far away and had been out of contact for so long. He had seen her the Sunday afternoon before he escaped from Walpole, but that had been nearly four years before. And now she was gone. He cried inconceivably. He thanked God that Lloyd was there to calm him, to talk with him in soothing tones. Lloyd and Jack comforted him and got him through the initial shock. With their help, he pulled himself together.

To even attempt to go back to Massachusetts for her wake or funeral was madness, he knew, for there was no doubt that the police would be lying in wait, hoping for him to show, and ready to pounce as soon as he did. To return would be crazy, there was no question about it, but there was also no question that he would try.

After Lloyd had calmed him down, Wightman went home, packed a bag, and got $600 out of the bank. Jack gave him another $300 in case of an emergency. Debbie wanted to go, but he said no, it was something he had to do alone. She, of course, believed that his mother had died in New York and that was where he was headed. Debbie drove him to the airport in Cleveland, and he flew to New York City. When he arrived, he went to a theatrical store and rented a nun's habit. His plan was to dress as a nun and go to his mother's wake. From New York he called a friend in Massachusetts and found out where and when the wake and funeral would be. The person he spoke with strongly urged him to stay away. The wake was scheduled for that afternoon and evening, and before deciding whether to go, Wightman wanted to have the funeral home checked out to see if cops had it under surveillance.

Later he spoke with his friend on the phone again and was told that the police had blanketed the area. "He came back and told me they were on the roof of this place and vans all parked up the street," Wightman says, "There was no way I could get in there."

The wake was out of the question, but he could still try the funeral. At La Guardia, Wightman chartered a plane and flew to Hyannis, then traveled to the Veterans Administration National Cemetery in Bourne. He arrived at dawn. "I rode all around the area to make sure there was no one there before I was there. There wasn't."

He found some wooded high ground, climbed a tree, and sat, well concealed, to wait. Several hours later, at about 9 o'clock, police cars pulled up to the front gate of the cemetery. He watched as men he assumed were FBI agents along with Boston police and state police talked with the gatekeeper. He saw a police officer put on the gatekeeper's uniform and take the gatekeeper's place so that he would be able to look inside each car as it came through the cemetery entrance. Wightman saw five or six police vans drive into the cemetery and dispense to various corners of the place.

A couple of hours later the funeral procession entered the cemetery. He watched as it crawled along, finally coming to a stop not far from a newly dug grave.

"I seen my family," he recalls, "my dad, my sister, and I seen they brought my brother from, I think he was at Norfolk" (where he continues to serve time for armed robbery).

Wightman watched from his hidden perch as a graveside service was held. After a while his family, other relatives, and friends got back into their cars and drove away. The police remained for another hour or so and then they, too, departed. But Wightman did not leave his hiding place immediately. Instead, he waited, ever cautious, until dusk. He climbed down from the tree and walked down a hill toward the main road outside the cemetery. He wanted to make sure no police had been left behind to trap him. "I was pretty sure they had left. They figured I didn't show, and that was it."

After he had thoroughly searched the area and satisfied himself that no police lay in wait for him, Kenny Wightman walked back across the cemetery grounds and knelt before the grave where his mother rests.

Debbie got off work at the Yacht Club at 5 o'clock on August 5, 1983, went home, changed clothes, and headed downtown to look for Kenny. Often on Friday nights they'd go down to a dock at the lake and listen to bands playing free concerts. She found him right away, and they listened to music for a while until suddenly they recognized the chords of a new song they had heard separately and told each other about. They had never heard it together until this night when they listened as the Police band played "Every Breath You Take".

"We both, like, looked at each other and knew that was our song," Debbie recalls.

After the concert they went over to Debbie's son Donovan's little-league baseball game. (Wightman smiles at the recollection: "Donovan hit a home run that night!") They stayed at the game only briefly and told Donovan that they were headed for the street fair and that he should catch up with them after the game.

Once all three kids had gathered with Kenny and Debbie at the street fair, they decided to go to a 9 o'clock movie. Before they did that Kenny said he wanted to go home and clean up. But when he got home Jack and his girlfriend, Fran Voltz, asked if Kenny would help them move a freezer down to the cellar of their house. The move took longer than he expected, and by the time he was done it was too late to make the movie. Debbie took the kids home and went right back to Kenny's place.

They didn't do much for the rest of the night, just lay around watching TV for a while before going to bed. Then a few minutes before 11, Jack knocked on the door and told Kenny that Lloyd was on the phone and wanted to talk with him.

Earlier that evening, while Kenny and Debbie were at the street fair, Lloyd was in his patrol car when a message came over the radio for him to report at once to the FBI office in Sandusky. Lloyd responded right away. When he arrived, agents showed him two photographs and asked him if he knew the men. Sure, Lloyd said. That's my friend Ray Diley, and the other one's Bob Cooper (with whom Wightman traveled for a short time after he escaped). Lloyd wasn't prepared for what happened next. No, they're not, an agent said. The agent told Lloyd that the name Ray Diley was an alias; that the man he knew as Ray Diley was, in reality, Kenny Wightman, a prison escapee who had been sent away for the attempted murder of two police detectives. And the other one was a fugitive as well, Ralph Petroziello, they found evidence at his home that led them to Wightman. Lloyd was flabbergasted.

"I was in a state of shock," he recalls. "It was like when you found out somebody close to you had died."

Lloyd couldn't work anymore that night. But before he went home the FBI agents wanted him to do something first. The agents had searched around town for Wightman, but they had not yet found him. They assumed he was back at his apartment in the rear of Jack's place, but before they went in to get him, they wanted to be sure. They asked Lloyd to call and see if he was home.

Kenny got up to take the call, and Lloyd asked whether Kenny had left a car in the driveway of the auto-body shop. "Yeah, it's a customer's car," Kenny said. "Do you want me to go down and move it?" Kenny asked Lloyd. "No, no," Lloyd said. "Just wanted to check and make sure what it was." "That's all?" Kenny asked, thinking that something was funny about Lloyd. He sounded real weird on the phone, upset about something.

Kenny went back to bed and wrapped Debbie in his arms. They lay there holding each other, and out of the blue Kenny told her that he felt really content with his life.

At 11:05 p.m., just a minute or so after he had uttered those words, Raymond Nicholas Diley heard a sound that told him he was about to become, once again, Kenneth Ray Wightman. He knew, in the half-second before police burst in with shotguns leveled, that it was all over.

In the second between the time the door was kicked in and when they invaded the room, Kenny rolled over very fast and kissed Debbie. He threw his hands in the air as they came at him, six or eight cops with rifles and shotguns trained on him.

"FREEZE! FBI! DON'T MOVE!" they shouted.

"I looked up, and as soon as I turned my head they were coming from everywhere," Wightman recalls. "There was a window to my right, there was a window to my left, and the doorway was, like, almost in front of me, and they just came charging in. They made me get out of bed, lay on the floor naked, all the guns trained on my head. They asked me who I was. I said I was Ray Diley. I was trying to show them my license in my wallet on the table. They were screamin' at the top of their lungs. They held me down, they cuffed me, and they dragged me right out of the house."

Three or four agents stayed in the room with Debbie, guns still drawn. She lay naked in bed, clutching the sheets as she sat up and asked: "Could you please tell me what's going on?"

"Your little boyfriend, honey," she recalls an agent saying, "is wanted for murder, kidnaping, drugs — you name it, he's done it."

That wasn't true, of course, and Debbie didn't believe it. "I was thinking it couldn't be him," Debbie recalls. "That was my Daddydog." But then she "just more or less went into a state of shock."

The time between when the cops entered the room and when they dragged him out, Wightman believes, was all of about 10 seconds. "They wrapped a bathrobe or towel around me till we were outside, then sent one guy back in to get a pair of pants. They took me to FBI field station in Sandusky. They asked me who I was. I told them Raymond Diley . . . but they knew I was Kenny Wightman."

At the FBI office Wightman was fingerprinted and asked a few questions. He said he wanted a lawyer. He spent about an hour at the office before they transported him, in chains, to Toledo. The FBI was concerned about the possibility he would escape, so during the hour's drive from Sandusky to Toledo, Wightman was required to lie on the floor of the car.

That Ray Diley was not Ray Diley at all, but a fugitive named Kenny Wightman, came as a complete shock to his friends in Sandusky. Fran Voltz said at the time that she saw people who had known Wightman "sit and cry over this. Men included."

"I'm just numb about the whole thing," Lloyd Bodi said at the time. "I don't know what happened. All I ever knew him to be was exactly what he was around here. . . . It's too bad about his past, nobody can change that — but he was a great guy around here."

Bud Sonick, a Sandusky car salesman who had worked with Wightman, said at the time, "If I were in a situation to hire somebody to be a general do-anything type of guy, I'd hire Ray Diley so fast it'd make your head spin."

And Debbie's father, Robert Krueger, said that he considered the man he knew as Ray Diley "an ideal guy that you'd want for a son-in-law."

Debbie went up to Toledo for Wightman's arraignment the following Monday. Before she left, Jack Butts gave her $20 in case Kenny needed cigarettes. In the courtroom, Wightman passed Debbie a note. "Please keep the faith until I have a chance to explain," he wrote. Debbie gave him the $20 from Jack, kissed him, and guards took him away.

Later in the week, Wightman was able to telephone Debbie. He told her about having been sentenced to 25 to 35 hears in prison in Massachusetts. He told her he didn't commit the crime and that he felt he had no choice but to escape. She came away from the brief conversation shocked by the news, but with no doubt in her mind that she would stand by him.

While Wightman was waiting to be extradited back to Massachusetts, some of his friends in Sandusky thought they should appeal to Ohio authorities to set him free. "We were gonna petition the governor of Ohio that I was a workin' citizen, I paid my taxes, I had a family, I had my business, I was a fine member of the community," Wightman says. "We had Lloyd and Jack and all these people comin' to support me.

But it just didn't work out."

"We had a good friendship going," Lloyd Bodi said at the time. "My feelings haven't changed as far as Ray Diley is concerned. This other guy — I have no idea who that guy is. None whatsoever."

Shortly before midnight on August 29, three weeks after he was apprehended, Wightman was shackled and placed in the rear seat of a police car, where he was told to lie down. The car drove for 15 or 20 minutes, and then Wightman was told he could sit up on the seat. When he did so, he looked around and saw that the car had come to a halt in a large field in the middle of nowhere. It was very dark and Wightman was scared. "I thought they were gonna kick me out of the car and shoot me and say, 'Yeah, he tried to escape.' "

But a few minutes later, rows of bright lights suddenly illuminated the ground, and Wightman could see a secluded runway. A few minutes later a small jet landed, and when it came to a stop he was placed on board with several Massachusetts state troopers. The jet took off immediately and flew east, landing at Norwood Airport around 3:30 on the morning of August 30. There were several state police cruisers waiting at the airport, along with a Department of Correction car into which Wightman was placed. With a state police escort, the car drove south on Route 1A until it made a right-hand turn into an unmarked driveway. When the car turned, Wightman saw the dirty white walls, the peeling paint, the vast expanse of cement, the guard towers, the barbed wire. Walpole.

When he was brought into the prison, guards were lined up all along a hallway. It seemed to him that half the night shift was there, waiting. "They wanted to see who I was or see what I looked like, or it was just curiosity or somethin'." He heard a guard murmur, "They're bringin' Kenny Wightman in."

Wightman was placed in 10 Block, a prison within a prison where the worst prisoners are isolated from the rest of the institution's population. Ten Block is Walpole's segregation unit. It is a dungeon that houses 10 percent of the institution's inmates. Prisoners are generally dispatched to 10 Block for serious violations, such as assaulting or murdering an inmate or guard, or for escaping or attempting to escape.

Wightman was placed in a 6-by-9-foot cell. A 45-watt light bulb hung from the ceiling. There were two cell doors. The inner one was barred. The outer one was solid steel that prevented virtually all light from filtering into the cell. In the steel door was a 4-inch-square plexiglass window. It was old and scratched and difficult to see through.

Wightman was confined to 10 Block for nearly two years, and he is reluctant to talk about his life there. But a friend in whom he has confided says that Wightman told him he was beaten, gassed, and hogtied by guards in the cellblock. Further, he says that a guard would occasionally shove his food tray through the cell door, scattering his food on the cell floor. The guard would laugh and tell him to lick it up.

Wightman told his friend that as harassment he was moved to different cells nearly every week. Once, his toothpaste, deodorant, soap, and shampoo were confiscated and classified as contraband. He was confined to his cell for 23 hours most days. His exercise consisted of walking in a small, fenced-in maze.

Matt Feinberg. Wightman's lawyer, says that when Wightman first returned to Walpole he was "totally depressed. Almost suicidal, I thought."

Nonetheless, while in 10 Block Wightman successfully completed a correspondence course through Bunker Hill Community College and obtained his high school graduate equivalency degree. Herbert M. Yood, Walpole's college correspondence coordinator, wrote in a letter that Wightman has earned "high honor grades" in the three courses he has taken. Yood also wrote that "by virtue of his study habits and ability to adhere to a regular schedule of study as well as his general intellectual ability, I would think he could be a very strong candidate for a degree."

In his graduate equivalency degree exam, Wightman scored 313 of a possible 400, one of the highest scores in Walpole. Yood described Wightman's record as a student as "well above average." Since completing his GED requirements, Wightman has compiled 18 college credits and expects to have an associate's degree within a year.

What comes to mind when Kenny Wightman thinks about his future? He considers the question as he leans back against a picnic table in the outdoor visitors' section at Walpole. As he cups his hands over a dying cigarette lighter and lights a Winston, he looks around at the walls, a pale shade not unlike the pallor Wightman has acquired after two years in isolation.

"Bleak. At present I have no appeal. The situation does not look good at this time. It makes me mad. It makes me frustrated. The media and the police don't help. They all put me down as a crazy maniac."

Nonetheless, he has hope. He gets by, day to day, by concentrating on the short-term future. He tries not to think too far ahead. He spends much of his time these days studying. He is currently taking six college-level courses and working on his appeal. His dream, of course, is to have his conviction overturned and to be released. That will be very difficult, and it could be quite expensive as well. When Wightman was captured in Sandusky, Jerry Iovanni, a Hyde Park social worker who has known Wightman most of his life and who is executive director of the Peoples' Task Force, a Hyde Park social work agency, established a Wightman defense fund that so far has raised a total of $4,100 — $3,000 from Wightman, $1,000 from his father, and $100 from Debbie. But Iovanni says few contributions have been received during the past year, and the account's balance is now only a couple of hundred dollars.

If Wightman were to beat the odds and win his freedom, he says he would move to Sandusky and never again return to Massachusetts. "If I got out today, if my case was overturned, within a week you'd be readin' all about how they're chasing Kenny Wightman. They're blaming Kenny Wightman for this and that, and I could have never left your house."

Iovanni agrees. "He can't stay here because he'll never be forgiven. No one will ever forget the history. He should go a million miles away so he can be whoever he really is and not have to deal with any reputation or preconceived notions."

And if he does not beat the odds and his appeal fails? What then? If that happens he says he would live for the day he is paroled. The soonest he could be considered for parole is 1998, when he will be 42 years old. Can he hang on?

Iovanni thinks he probably can, although he says there are "a lot of ifs. If Debbie continues to be supportive," for example.

Wightman says he can survive in prison for another 15 or more years. "If my appeal fails, I have no choice," he says. "I'd have to do it. It ain't a matter of if I can do it; I'd have no choice in the matter." As badly as he wants to get out, Wightman says he would "never escape again. It sounds good and sounds nice. But I want to be free."

BROCKTON ENTERPRISE — MARCH 3, 1987

Bank robbery charge against Wightman dropped

BROCKTON — A Brockton bank robbery charge against Kenneth Wightman, one of the only men ever to escape from the state prison in Walpole, was dropped Monday in Brockton Superior Court.

Assistant District Attorney Joseph Gaughan said he had "no objection" to a defense motion that the bank robbery charge be dismissed against Wightman, 31, of Hyde Park, because Wightman passed a polygraph test in connection with the case.

Gaughan told Judge Hurd that Wightman, formerly of Wareham, scored a "plus 8" on the lie detector test administered by New York Lie-Detection Laboratories. Gaughan said a "plus 6" rating or higher presumes the person being tested is telling the truth.

Gaughan said he was also not contesting the motion to dismiss the charge because Wightman is serving a lengthy sentence upon which he has no avenue of appeal. . . . . .

Prison Graduation Marks Change for New Life for Inmates

Justice Education Program Graduates Largest Class to Date

When Kenny Wightman was growing up in the Fairmount Housing Project in Boston's Hyde Park neighborhood, the only lessons he learned were the wrong ones: how to pop auto ignitions and steal fast cars, how to taunt the police, and elude capture.

His escapades, culminating in armed robbery, briefly made him a local legend, but ultimately landed him in the state's maximum security prison in Walpole — a place where inmates normally earn only heightened qualifications for returning.

It was a different Kenny Wightman who recently strode proudly before a small group of family and friends in the visitors' center at Walpole and received a bachelor's degree from acting Curry Dean Dante Germanotta. Now an English major and dean's list student graduating with a 3.73 grade point average from Curry's Justice Education program, Wightman speaks with a new sense of purpose about his life, and about his desire to "contribute back to society."

Kenny Wightman's resolve to change himself is the latest turn in a life that has been full of bizarre twists. As a youth, he was involved in a series of increasingly serious brushes with the law, and was eventually implicated in an armed robbery in which two police officers were wounded. He has steadfastly maintained his innocence of the crime, which at age 20 earned him a 25 - 35 year sentence in Walpole.

Faced with this stiff sentence, Wightman then added another chapter to his legend by becoming the only person ever to successfully escape from Walpole.

Since he returned to prison [after his escape], Wightman has devoted most of his energy to earning his degree in the Curry program, which he says his given him "a new perspective."

THE FOLLOWING NEWSPAPER ITEMS, POLICE CIRCULARS, AND ANECDOTES FILL IN MORE OF THE EVENTS THAT AFFECTED KENNY WIGHTMAN'S LIFE:

The Boston Globe August 14 1983. Kenneth Wightman — subject of an intensive manhunt the last four years — flaunted authorities by attending his mother's Boston funeral three months ago, his Ohio employer said.

Description White male — 5'5" - 120 lbs. - slim build - green eyes - D.O.B. 11-30-56
Wightman is supposedly dressed as a girl in junior miss blouse and slacks. He has bleached blonde hair, Dorothy Hamil or Afro style, and wearing white earrings and makeup.

Walpole - Despite searching the state prison here twice yesterday with bloodhounds, prison officials failed to find Kenneth Wightman, 23, an inmate who disappeared Tuesday afternoon after being seen jogging on the institution's grounds. McLaughlin said that he strongly doubted that Wightman had left the 35-acre prison grounds. It was unlikely that Wightman would have made it over the wall, which is guarded by armed correction officers in eight watch towers and electrical wire carrying 4600 volts around the prison's perimeter. BOSTON GLOBE - April 19 1979.

"When he was 13 years old, Kenny Wightman used to roam the streets of Hyde Park looking for a car to steal. He was a selective thief — he would bypass old heaps, searching instead for something special, perhaps a Corvette. Above all, the car had to be fast. Once Wightman had popped the ignition on the car, he destination rarely varied. He would cruise down Hyde Park Avenue and pull up directly in front of the police station. There he would let the engine of his new prize idle while he honked the horn. The blasts would bring blue-uniformed officers to the windows of the station house, and Wightman would wave to the cops. It would take them a moment to recognize him. Then, as the police scurried for their cruisers, Wightman would screech away and the game would begin.

It was rarely a fair match. Wightman could drive a car better than many people twice his age. He would race around the corners of narrow side streets, speed along the wide straightaways of the boulevards. The game nearly always ended with Wightman losing the police. Then he would ditch the car and walk home, looking for all the world like a young alter boy." Charles Kenney

UPDATE - CURRY COLLEGE - Vol. 17, No. 2 summer, 1992
Ironically, Kenneth Wightman, a 1989 graduate in psychology and literature, grew up not far from Curry, in a housing project in a low income neighborhood. A "latch-key kid," he was raised by hard-working parents who were burdened with medical debts. Wightman and his friends sometimes went over to Curry's wooded campus, which seemed like a "shiny sandbox". He never dreamed he would some day get a degree from Curry.

"Higher education was not a word in our vocabulary," he noted. "I never believed I had potential—no one from my neighborhood had potential."

What he did have was a talent for stealing fast cars. After minor brushes with the law, he was implicated in an armed robbery and landed in Walpole. He received wide public attention when he became the only inmate to escape the state's top prison for an extended period. Eventually he was discovered and sent back to Walpole.

He took the GED test "out of boredom," and began taking correspondence courses from a local community college to get some practical skills. Encouraged by administrators, he changed his focus to liberal arts and enrolled in Curry's bachelor's program. The result was a new sense of self-worth and purpose.

"I feel I have gone through half my life with blinders on. You have given me a new sense of meaning, value and direction in my life."

As a result of his experience, he has become a tireless advocate of education among his fellow inmates, in an attempt to "give back to others what I have been given." He served as inmate-coordinator of Curry's program, and following his transfer to another facility, of the University of Massachusetts program. He is also working on a screen-play on his life.

Kenny Wightman recives his bachelor's degree from Curry's Acting Dean Dante Germanotta during a ceremony at the Massachusetts State Prison in Walpole.

Kenneth Wightman, 1989 graduate with a double major, Psychology and English, spoke, "As a teen I lived for the moment, with no thought about the future." He grew up in the Hyde Park developments, just outside Curry's back gate. He had always looked up to Curry, never thinking that he would ever enroll there. "Education is the most difficult task I have ever undergone," said Wightman. "It is also the most enriching and achieving one."

Wightman is a subject of a biography by Curry professor of English, Allan Hunter.

"What you have been is not important. What really counts in your life is what you are reaching for, what you are becoming."

LETTER from THOMAS JEFFERSON,

To Mr. WEIGHTMAN, late Mayor of Washington.

Monticello, June 24th, 1826.

RESPECTED SIR:

The kind invitation I receive from you, on the part of the citizens of the city of Washington, to be present with them at their celebration on the fiftieth anniversary of American Independence, as one of the surviving signers of an instrument pregnant with our own, and the fate of the world, is most flattering to myself, and heightened by the honorable accompaniment proposed for the comfort of such a journey. It adds sensibly to the sufferings of sickness, to be deprived by it of a personal participation in the rejoicings of that day. But acquiescence is a duty, under circumstances not placed among those we are permitted to control. I should indeed, with peculiar delight, have met and exchanged there congratulations personally with the small band, the remnant of that host of worthies, who joined with us on that day, in the bold and doubtful election we were to make for our country, between submission or the sword; and to have enjoyed with them the consolatory fact, that our fellow citizens, after half a century of experience and prosperity, continue to approve the choice we made. May it be to the world, what I believe it will be, (to some parts sooner, to others later, but finally to all,) the signal of arousing men to burst the chains under which monkish ignorance and superstition had persuaded them to bind themselves, and to assume the blessings and security of self-government. That form which we have substituted, restores the free right to the unbounded exercise of reason and freedom of opinion. All eyes are opened, or opening to the rights of man.—The general spread of the light of science has already laid open to every view the palpable truth, that the mass of mankind has not been born with saddles on their backs, nor a favored few, booted and spurred, ready to ride them legitimately, by the grace of God. These are grounds of hope for others. For ourselves, let the annual return of this day, forever refresh our recollections of these rights, and an undiminished devotion to them.

I will ask permission here to express the pleasure with which I should have met my antient neighbours of the city of Washington and its vicinities, with whom I passed so many years of a pleasing social intercourse; an intercourse which so much relieved the anxieties of the public cares, and left impressions so deeply engraved in my affections, as never to be forgotten. With my regret that ill health forbids me the gratification of an acceptance, be pleased to receive for yourself, and those for whom you write, the assurance of my highest respect and friendly attachments.

TH: JEFFERSON.

Thomas Jefferson turned down an invitation for a celebration that would take place on the day of his death.

THE MASSACRE OF MARCUS & NARCISSA IN 1847

Marcus Whitman, b. 4 Sep 1802 in Rushville, NY; m. Narcissa Prentiss at Angelica, NY in 1836; d. 29 Nov 1847. He studied to be a physician and practiced medicine for four years. In 1835 the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions accepted him as a medical missionary to the Indians. He married Narcissa and, accompanied by the Rev. Henry Spaulding and his wife, made the wagon trip to the Pacific coast. They built a mission near present-day Walla Walla, Washington. When the American Board of Commissioners ordered a curtailment of missionary activity in 1842, he traveled to Boston on horseback to dissuade the commissioners. He persuaded the board to reverse its decision. He played a great part in making Easterners aware of the value of the lands beyond the Rocky Mountains. On his way back west, Whitman helped guide a train of 200 covered wagons to the Columbia Valley. This was the first great American migration to the Oregon Territory.

Four years later, he, his wife, and twelve associates were killed by hostile Cayuse Indians at their Waiilatpu mission on 29 November 1847. This was the year that a smallpox epidemic had swept through the Cayuse people and many had died. News of the massacre was in part responsible for getting Congress to organize the Oregon Territory in 1848.

Whitman Mission National Historic Site near Walla Walla commemorates these pioneers.

"Marcus Whitman was not a descendant of George Wightman but claimed to have been descended from the same Edward Wightman who was burned at the stake in England in 1612, that we also claim descendancy." From the adventures of Marguerite Belle[9] Wightman during a stop-over on her trip back from Alaska in July 1981

No one will ever get out of this world alive,
Resolve therefore to maintain a reasonable sense of values.

Eva Thompson Wightman was born 1 Feb 1880. She was married to Luther Lee[7] Wightman in 1906. They lived on the original Morton[6] Wightman farm, Pleasant Valley Road near Richburg until "Lee's" death in 1953. Eva continued living there until about 1971 when she went to live with her son John, located in Panama City, FL. She was 102 when this picture was taken.

She was head of the Department of Fine Arts at Central Michigan State Teachers College [now Central Michigan University] from 1896 through 1937. The following story is from the Alumni in Action, Spring 1987.

Wightman House open to visitors

Alumni visiting Mt. Pleasant now have the option of staying in a traditional bed and breakfast inn with two CMU professors.

The Wightman House was built in 1904 by Elizabeth Wightman, an art professor at Central from 1896 through 1937.

The Wightman House, located at 307 E. High St., is open year-around to Mt. Pleasant visitors. The owners, Ken McCleary and his wife Pamela Weaver, live in the house and are both professors of marketing and hospitality administration.

Guests can use the living and dining rooms and kitchen at the Wightman House and share a private bathroom with a sunken tub. The three-story house has seven bedrooms, but only two are used for guests.

McCleary and Weaver, who bought the house five years ago, remodeled both bedrooms, the guest bathroom, and the kitchen in preparing it for guests. The original hard-wood floors still exit throughout the house.

"One of the main reasons we established the bed and breakfast is to interact with people," said McCleary. "It's also a chance for visitors to see a house built by an early faculty member."

Elizabeth Wightman built the house in 1904, and the original blueprints are on display in the front hallway. Wightman, who lived in the house as a single woman, taught in the art department from 1896 (four years after Central Normal School was established) through 1937. Wightman Hall, built in the 1940s, was named after her.

The Wightman House stands in a group of renovated old homes originally built by early CMU educators.

James Lansing[6] Wightman [from page 232](Nathan[5], Abraham[4], Abraham[3], Rev. Valentine[2], George[1]), b. 21 Sep 1828 in Rodman, Jefferson Co., NY; d. 14 Mar 1899 in Lafayette, Madina Co., OH; m. 15 Mar 1855 Clarinda Bisel, b. 15 Mar 1834, d. 14 Oct 1891.

James got the GOLD FEVER during the big California Gold Rush in the middle of the 1800s. He drove four yoke of oxen from St. Joseph, MO to Placerville, a journey that took one hundred five days. He returned to Ohio in August 1852 on the "Pacific" making its trial trip as a mail carrier to New York. He brought with him one hundred 20-dollar gold pieces which he carried in a buckskin belt strapped about him. He married his old sweetheart, and they went to housekeeping in the old log house built by his father in 1833. He became a farmer for the rest of life.

The Mineral Resources Newsletter printed June 1994 by U. S. Geological Survey in Denver, CO has an article about James L. Wightman and his discovery of gold in Summitville, CO. The dates do not correspond with family tradition. Family data states that he returned to Ohio on the "Pacific" in August 1852. This railroad had its start by the Pacific Railroad Act of 1862 signed by President Lincoln. The Golden Spike was driven on May 10, 1869 linking the east and west. If he took the "Pacific", he had to do it probably on the date mentioned in the following story. A person does speculate whether or not it is the same James L. Wightman? Excerpts from this article are as follows:

High in the San Juan Mountains of Colorado, James L. Wightman made the first placer gold strike in the Summitville district. In 1871, the following year, he and two others in his party divided $170 between them—their profits after all expenses were paid. By 1883, Summitville was the third largest gold producing district in the state. Since that time, numerous entrepreneurs have taken their turn at the pick, risked the odds, and excavated gold, silver, and copper ore from this historical site.

More than a century after Wightman staked his claim, another mining company started open-pit gold mining at the Summitville site in 1984. The miners removed ore from the open pit, crushed it, and placed it on a heap leach pad overlying a protective liner. A cyanide-bearing solution was then sprinkled on the heap leach pad. The cyanide dissolved the gold in the ore, and the gold was then chemically extracted from the heap-leach solutions.

GOLD MINERS AT WORK

"Gold from the American River" was President Polk's message to Congress, December 5, 1848 — electrifying news that changed the life of a nation.

Environmental problems started soon after mining began. Acid-mine drainage increased both in volume and content of contaminants. These waters flowed into the Wightman Fork of the Alamosa River. Environmental problems have developed. Fish in a reservoir 17 miles down stream have all died, irrigation waters have dumped heavy metals in San Louis Valley soils, and increased corrosion rates in metal irrigation structure have occurred.

The mining company has gone into bankruptcy and abandoned any cleanup. The U. S. Environmental Protection Agency has taken over operations at Summitville.

The old time miners and residents of this area had guessed that this was not the safest environment. They named their creeks Iron Creek, Alum Creek, and Bitter Creek which are good indications of the dubious water quality that existed prior to mining.

MORTON[6] WIGHTMAN, [from page 227] (Simon[5], Allen[4], Abraham[3], Rev. Valentine[2], George[1]), b. 11 Oct 1824 in Bolivar, Allegany Co., NY; d. 20 Apr 1919 in Wirt, Allegany Co., NY; m. Calista Knapp.

MORTON WIGHTMAN'S LOG HOME

The log house was built by Morton Wightman in 1850. This picture was taken in 1915 when Morton was 91 years of age. At this time, this was the only remaining log house in this region. It was located on the Pleasant Valley Road about 4 miles northeast of Richburg, NY. He cleared the land which was a wilderness at that time upon which his home was built. One daughter and three sons were born in this house: Sarah Arleta[7], John Adolphus[7], Mark Addison[7] and Luther Lee[7]. Luther Lee Wightman remained on the family farm.

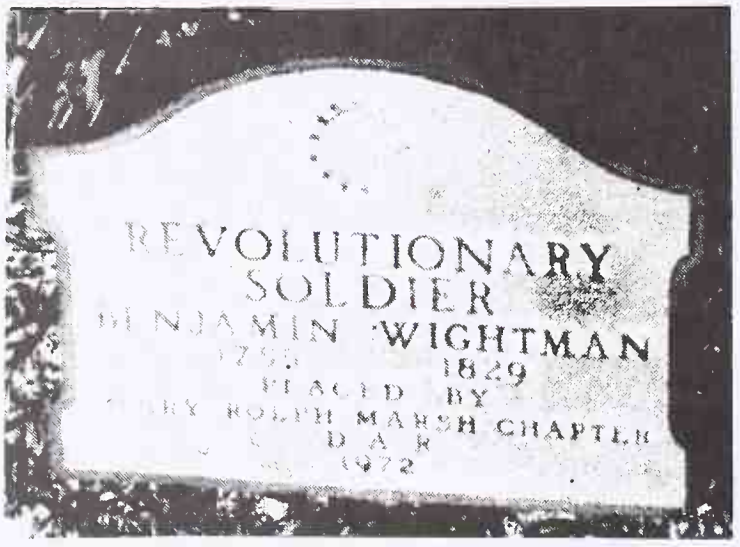
BENJAMIN[4] WIGHTMAN, (from page 89 and 621) [Abraham[3], Rev. Valentine[2], George[1]], b. 31 Aug 1755, d. 1 Aug 1830 in Matagorda, Texas.

Texas Historical Marker at the grave site of Benjamin and Ester (Randall) Wightman in Matagorda Cemetery, Matagorda County, Texas. They were the first to be buried in this cemetery which was given to the town of Matagorda by their son, Elias.

Benjamin[4] Wightman, was the fourth generation of the Wightman family in America. He married Esther Randall, the daughter of Rufus and Margaret (Wightman)Randall. She was born in Cochester, Connecticut, on December 4th, 1758.

The Wightmans emigrated from Montville, Connecticut, to Herkimer County, New York, where the settlement became known as Whitmantown. Benjamin was a Baptist minister, and both he and his wife were lineal descendants of colonial clergymen; among these were Valentine[2] Wightman, Obadiah Holmes, and Roger Williams, the founder of Rhode Island.

During the American Revolution, Benjamin Wightman served as a private in Colonel Willet's Tryon County Rangers of New York. Benjamin Wightman is the only known Revolutionary War Veteran buried in Matagorda County.



The Daughters of the American Revolution Marker for a Revolutionary Soldier was placed on the grave of Benjamin Wightman, June 14, 1972 by his great, great, great, great, granddaughter, Jean Wilkinson Richardson, through the Mary Rolph Marsh Chapter, DAR.

In 1828, a son - Elias Wightman, a surveyor for Stephen F. Austin, brought a group of colonists from New York to Matagorda—including his parents, Benjamin and Esther, and his sisters, Jerusha and Margaret. They traveled down the Mississippi River by flatboat to New Orleans. From New Orleans they sailed on the schooner Little Zoe to Matagorda. The journey was long and difficult as told in Mary (Sherwood) Wightman Helm's memoirs, Scraps of Early Texas History.

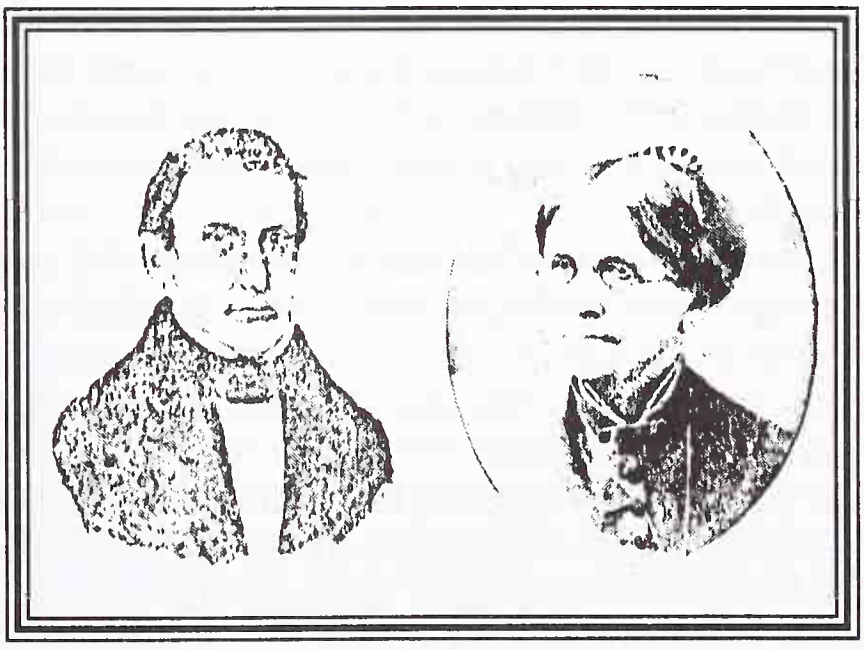
Esther (Randall) Wightman died June 20, 1839, and was the first person to be buried in the Matagorda Cemetery. Six weeks later, her husband Benjamin died and was buried beside her. Their coffins were made of lumber from New Orleans and taken to the cemetery by ox-drawn carts. One league of land from the mouth of Caney Creek and including part of the Matagorda Peninsula, was granted to the heirs of Benjamin Wightman, October 28, 1830.

ALIAS R.[5] WIGHTMAN

Elias R. Wightman, one of the founders of the town of Matagorda and an early surveyor, was born in 1792 in Herkimer County, New York. He was one of eleven children of Benjamin and Ester (Randall) Wightman. He taught school in New York as a young man and later married one of his students, Mary Sherwood.



Elias R. Wightman & Mary Sherwood Wightman Helm
(1792-1841) (1808-1886)

Elias was in Texas as early as 1824 and working with Stephen F. Austin as a surveyor and as an appraiser by July, 1825. In one instance, Austin appointed him to appraise damaged goods on the schooner, Lady of the Lake. His wife, Mary Sherwood, who later married Meredith Helm, included Elias' field notes and a history of Texas from his writings in her book, Scraps of Early Texas History. Parts of her book are reprinted in the account of Elias' life under Tales of an Old Pioneer that follows this introduction.

In August of 1826, Elias petitioned to Austin for permission to build a town at the mouth of the Colorado River on Matagorda Bay. Upon receiving approval, Wightman and another early settler, David G. Burnet, left Texas for the United States to gather colonists. As one of Austin's "Old Three Hundred," he received title to a sitio of land in present Matagorda County on May 25, 1827.

In 1828 Elias returned to New York in search of settlers for the colony, and signed up some 39 persons (most of them relatives) to make the journey to Texas and the proposed town of Matagorda. The trip began in November, 1828, at the head of the Allegheny River, then down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers to New Orleans. They reached New Orleans just before Christmas, and chartered the schooner Little Zoe to carry them to Texas. On January 27, 1829, they reached the mouth of the Colorado River.

Austin commissioned Wightman as a surveyor in December, 1830, and on December 6, 1830, he was appointed municipal surveyor for the District of Mina. Elias' land on which he lived was on Matagorda Peninsula to the east of Caney Creek. In his field notes, the map shows the town of Manhattan at the mouth of Caney Creek and what is known presently as "East Bay" was shown as "Manhattan Bay."

Two interesting artifacts or documents have survived over these 160 years—his compass and field notes dated 1838. The field notes with neat accurate maps are in a bound volume in the Matagorda County Clerk's office and at the Matagorda County Museum. The compass is in possession of a descendant in Matagorda County.

The field notes written by Elias R. Wightman during the year 1838 consist of surveys and notes of practically all land in Matagorda County. The note is made that these records were "returned to the General Land Office prior to closing by the Consultation of 1835."

The compass is in good condition and in working order. A picture and information about the compass is in the Engineering Department of the University of Texas. Robert D. Polson, an engineer, made a study of the compass in 1970, and had this to say: "I believe the Compass came to Texas with Elias Wightman. It is thought to have been used in surveying Marion (now East Columbia) in 1829 and also to survey Matagorda in 1832. A lot of Matagorda County was surveyed by one of the Yeamans who was a brother-in-law of Wightman, and it is presumed that this compass was used by Yeamans.

Compass used by Elias R. Wightman to survey the town of Matagorda and Matagorda County

This historic compass was on display at the Institute of Texas Cultures in San Antonio during the American Bicentennial in 1976. Wightman lived in Matagorda County until 1841, serving as a surveyor of the county and taking part in the life of the young Republic. He died in Covington, Kentucky in 1841. Elias and Mary did not have any children.

The Colorado Gazette and Advertiser, Matagorda, December 18, 1841, told of his death:

"We regret to learn that our old friend, Elias R. Wightman, Esq. died a few weeks since, in Covington, Kentucky, whither he had gone to take possession of an extensive property, for which he had sold his residence in this county. Judge Wightman came to Texas as a surveyor to the first band of colonists brought out by Stephen F. Austin, and continued a resident of this county until within a month or two of his lamented death. He has left a large circle of relatives and friends among us, who feel this sad dispensation of Providence most sensibly."

STORY OF AN OLD PIONEER

Scraps of Early Texas History
1828 - 1843
By Mary (Sherwood) Wightman Helms*

CHAPTER I

Fifty years ago the writer had the pleasure of a visit in the State of New York, from her old teacher who had been absent in the far west six years; the last three in Texas as surveyor for Austin and DeWitt's Colony. Six years is a long time in the life of a school girl, not realizing that Cupid would dare interfere to add to, or detract from the pleasure of the visit which was anticipated with the most ardent longings, merely to see again and hear the recitals of his travels from the man I had revered as my senior in years and knowledge, in fact in all things good, as I had always fancied when I was his pupil. Not for a moment imagining that I should breathe the prayer "that Heaven had made me such a man;" but so it was. I had changed in six years; he was more than my teacher now. I had hoped only to see my teacher who would commend all my advancements in "book lore." I was no longer the girl of twelve years; I admired a something more than my old teacher. He had improved in knowledge, in his manners. His very voice was all in all to me; but he, of course, knew not the change in my feelings, and so I made free to encourage him to tell his strange experience of wild life; days without food—at best, living by the good luck of the hunter on wild game; meandering crooked rivers preparatory to laying them off in leagues; perhaps one hundred miles from the nearest white settlement; or his story of interviewing a Mexican trader to get the course and distance to certain points, for material for Austin's map of Texas; or his danger of high water, or wild beast, or poison viper; or his story of a verbal bargain with a few military men who would be on hand near the mouth of the Colorado river, where he had laid off a future city, when he should return year with a colony to protect them from cannibal Indians; and the story of sending a military company to protect him and his surveying party, as they passed down toward the coast through the country (a suspicion being rife that they were going to unearth gold buried by Lafitte the Galveston pirate), so as they went the company increased, and the eyes of white men saw Matagorda in 1827 for the first time, when it was surveyed by E. R. Wightman. Colonel Austin had secured the location, and become a partner in the league and city. While the laws of Mexico forbade granting lands to settlers within three leagues of the coast, lest individuals should monopolize town sites, yet Colonel Austin gained in a petition to the Governor, that it was necessary to keep up a military post to protect emigrants landing from sea, as the consideration for this exception to the rule and law. So without having the benefit of mails to know that the military condition had been complied with, fifty persons were landed early in 1829, after a route of three months, already told in the "Texas Scrap Book." In my next I will tell of some of the dangers of our voyage, our going over a mill dam on the Allegheny River; of our leaky schooner; of stress of weather; of being repeatedly blown out to sea when our port was in sight, and finally, running before the wind into the Bay of Aransas: of our visitation by hostile Indians while the men and guns were all gone to surround deer; of our great scare; of our intense anxiety to know if we should find protection at our have; of the absence of our boat, as we lay at anchor four miles distant, in Matagorda Bay, fearing our military might not be there, and fearing that the Indians might capture the boat, and leave us without means of communication with the land for water or anything else. Six hours of terrible suspense were relieved by seeing two boats in the distance. The sad story of our sufferings had been told and relief was approaching.

It would take a whole chapter to describe the surroundings of our new home, a large shelter fifty feet square without a plank or nail. Fortunately we found horses to carry messages to the settlements, the nearest being thirty miles distant. There were said to be three hundred families in the whole country, every man knew each other and scores traveled long journeys to visit us, and prepare homes on land which they would give to those who would settle near them, but many came to spend the summer for their health and build a log school house. At no time were we without large herds of deer in sight in every direction, fish and fowl in the greatest abundance, eggs on the islands and in the bay, could be gathered by the bushel, oysters without stint, of the largest size. Our Indian and worse troubles will be told in another chapter, as well as our shipwreck and fire at sea, and the retreat before the Mexican army, where more women and children found graves than soldiers.

CHAPTER II

"Blessings brighten as they take their flight." So thought I as I left the scene of my childhood, bade adieu to my brothers and sisters and parents, left all that I had held dear in life, even the Protestant religion, to go beyond the bounds of my own country, beyond the reach of our own mails, to contribute to that boundless empire (yet in embryo) hemmed in by savages, and almost unknown. But "Love moves the world," and love was the inspiring agent, when on November 2d, 1828, a young bride, I joined a party who, in mud wagons, through foul weather, traveled some eighty miles to Olean Point, the head of navigation on the Allegheny river, to meet a colony of fifty immigrants bound for Texas.

My first chapter introduced to the reader my husband, Elias R. Wightman, who together with David G. Burnet, had left Texas early in the year on a mission to the States to drum immigrants for Austin's Colony. Having reached Cincinnati, he halted waiting for warmer weather to go farther north, and spent his leisure time in making a draft of the first map of Texas, from field notes which he had obtained from actual surveys and from travelers and traders. He had spent the three previous years in collecting this data and also in writing a history of all the contracts made by the Mexican government with Austin, together with a digest of all the Mexican laws that concerned immigrants.

At Olean Point we found waiting for us two large flat boats, some twenty feet long by twelve wide, each boat having one end square or perpendicular, thus fitted to be lashed together by boards being nailed on the outside. The sixth day found us on the north shore of the Allegheny river in an Indian village, cold and wet. Here we remained over the Sabbath. The Indians seemed to commiserate our discomfort, and offered us the use of a good log hut in which they had spread pea vines, but which they said could be gathered in a corner, and we be made comfortable before a large fireplace, they in the meantime preferring to live in their tents. Here we took in a pilot to guide us to Pittsburgh, who professed to know all about the river and its dangers. Ere long, a loud, roaring noise was heard, but we depended on our pilot, and when too late saw that we were being drawn over a mill dam several feet high, while near the bank a secure pass was left for boats. I was in the back end of the forward boat, and as we descended, my corner broke loose from its fastening, at the same time nearly filled with water. The hind boat being separated and slightly held by one corner, did not float away from us, but enabled the men to reach out and hold up the forward boat just as it appeared to be sinking. Now all hands went to bailing; vessels for those who had none; some resorted to the hats from their heads; anything to get the water out. As my corner parted a little from the other boat, I found I had been bailing between the boats. It was doubtful, for some time, which boat would go under first, but by balancing and holding each other up, and industriously working, we managed to get all the water out. The weather having moderated, we did not stop at once but floated on until a pile of lumber invited us to camp for the night. Here we found comfortable quarters, dried our clothes by a large fireplace. .....

.....E. R. Wightman, who had surveyed Matagorda the year before, was now at the masthead all the way up the Bay, taking notes and bearings of the lands which had never been trod by feet of white men. Not having time to take soundings that night, we dropped anchor four miles off the coast opposite the mouth of the Colorado river, and late in the evening Mr. Wightman with two men took their rifles and started in the skiff to explore and ascertain whether Colonel Austin had planted his military post with shelter for our sick and sea-worn company. It was with sad hearts we saw them depart, not knowing but that Indians were lying in wait for them, and even before they landed might be shot by arrows from an unseen foe, and no means left us of ascertaining their fate, for we had no other boat, and really no means of leaving the country, for our schooner was not sea-worthy. Language cannot describe our feelings when just before dark two boats came in sight; our hoping and fearing till we found that they contained white men; then our great joy at the assurance that we were really with friends. They brought good things for our sick. It was voted that I should have the honor of being the first white woman to ascend the mouth of the Colorado river and return with the boats that night.

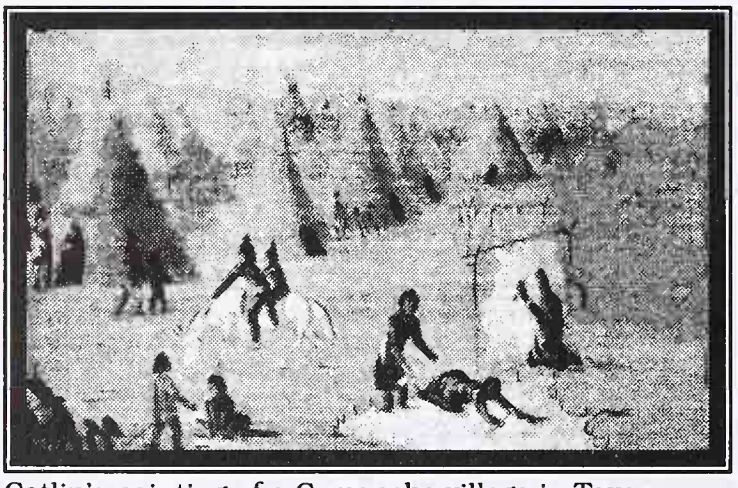
After our city of Matagorda had grown to quite a size many of our settlers still refused to have any dealings with the Indians, who were now so reduced in numbers as not to be dangerous, yet when the Indians would come to those settled on farms around the town offering to trade venison for corn or articles of clothing, the people refused to have anything to do with them, or even to be friendly.

Finally, an expedition was planned against them without Mr. Wightman's knowledge or consent, and the very day that I had fed a poor old Indian, covered with scars, he met his death at the hands of our settlers, who fell on them by surprise, and seemed that each warrior claimed the honor of his slaughter, as he stepped forward to be a target while the women and children could have time to escape to the thicket. Of course all their goods and weapons fell into the hands of their conquerors.



Catlin's painting of a Comanche village in Texas, done in 1834, shows women preparing buffalo hides for making tipis.

After a few years a small party, evidently remembering who had fed them on the day of the fight, came to us. My husband became responsible for their good behavior, and set them to picking cotton, but before this they dared not venture into the town, only when they saw our boat coming down the Bay. There were no white settlements on the Peninsula, and the Indians had it all their own way there, but they were evidently afraid of another attack and so came and offered to work for us for protection.

I felt no fear whatever from these neighbors, but would sleep with all our doors open, with twenty-five or thirty Indians within call. It was amusing to see them parade the streets of Matagorda with their long plaid, red, blue, garments, which I had made for them, the tails tipped with ornamental feathers. One of the young women learned to speak very good English; I dressed her in my clothes, and one day thought to have some fun with her, invited her to take tea with me. But the joke all turned to my own expense, for she not only used her knife and fork properly, but her cup, saucer and plate like it was an every day affair. I asked her how they made out when our folks drove them off without anything. She answered that they traveled for days without food and no place to sleep, as the ground was all covered with water—which I recollected was the case. They had no means of fishing, but they kept close to the coast and at last the "Great Spirit" sent them a small vessel, after killing the crew they appropriated everything to their own use, and thus their lives were saved.

After a while they frequently had noisy nights, and upon enquiring what all this noise and dancing meant, with so many rude instruments of music, she replied that they were going west, as they had better health than with our way of living, and they were importuning the Great Spirit to give them success in stealing horses and other stock from the Mexicans.....

Mary Sherwood, b. 3 Jul 1807; d. 10 May 1886 in Connersville, Fayette Co., IN; m. (1) Elias Wightman; m. (2) Merideth Helm.

I was born in Herkimer county, New York, July 3d, 1807. My parents were New England born, but raised in Eastern New York, My father's name was John Hutchinson Sherwood; he married, before he was twenty-one years of age, Janet Henderson, before she was nineteen. My father was born in Berkshire, Mass., my mother in Bennington, Vt. When I lived with them I had an opportunity to learn about their forefathers, but had no curiosity until it was too late, and then I had a great desire to know all about them. I find the name Henderson in almost every State, town and county, and have never met with any one who could tell me why, or who was so prominent as to perpetuate the name. I know, however, that it is a Scottish name. My grandfather and one brother were left orphans early in the last century, and the brother was taken by some family that went to a Southern State, and that was all he ever knew of him. The Henderson's, to the third generation of my mother's family, in New York State, are all very intelligent men. The first medical college in Herkimer county was founded by two of her brothers. My father lost his father when quite a small lad. He was born in Massachusetts June, 1775. His mother was born June 3d, 1776. The Sherwoods were from England. We read of Sherwood Forest, etc. Two or three of my father's brothers were interested in Sarsfield "Medical College." Said college was famous for more than fifty years, till the great Professor Willoughby died, when other colleges superseded it—Geneva, of New York, and Willoughby of Ohio. The buildings were of wood and went to decay, but I think Herkimer is still a seat of learning. One of my brothers, born in 1798, left home from Steuben county, New York, the 2d day of November, 1818, to study medicine at Tamfred Academy. He never returned, but died in June, 1821, leaving a great many writings showing that he was a very precocious youth. I am the only one alive now that ever saw him. I hope to have his memoirs published. My father bought a farm in Seneca county, in 1812. I remember when he was called up in the night to meet the enemy on the Canada line. He did not serve at that time, but, in 1814, he served on the lines through the winter months and left this brother, only sixteen years old, to see to the family—mother and nine children—and found time to teach a private school, besides providing wood, by chopping it, till my father returned, when peace was made, in 1815. The winter of my brother's death I was the pupil of the man who, in 1828, became my husband. Little did I dream or think of such a thing as ever having a husband. He was born in 1792, so he was my senior some sixteen years. He was a graduate, I think, of this Herkimer seminary, and a very precocious youth. An only son, he had embarked in the mercantile business before the war of 1812, when only at the age of nineteen or twenty, and of course, when peace came they found themselves insolvent, and so he joined his father on a farm, a few miles from my father's, and taught our district school. English grammar was never taught at that time in common schools, but Mr. Wightman persuaded my father to let me study it and promised to put me through in four weeks. He gave me much praise, and spent some time in teaching me Class Elocution. My older sisters got no praise in that direction, but complained to my mother that Mr. Wightman was teaching me to declaim just like a boy, in imitation of his own declamations in elocution. He was not happy, tied down in a country place, quite new and uncultivated, and often said he intended to go west and make his fortune. For three or four years his family reported to us where he was, but for the last three years when he had been absent six years not the least intelligence came. The day I was sixteen years of age, old Mrs. Wightman called at our house to inquire if she could procure my services to teach a private school for her grandchildren, having heard her son say that I was competent. She complained that there was no enterprise in the district trustees. I had not supposed for a moment that I was old enough to assume the responsibility of the woman, but so it was. I taught a small school in a private room in the Wightman mansion. Before I was seventeen I was invited to teach a grammar school in the same room as some young ladies, ten or fifteen years my senior, had taught school, and intended to teach again, but had never had an opportunity of learning English grammar. The Wightmans told that their son had said I could teach grammar just as well as he could himself. So I taught these ladies and several granddaughters and grandsons of the Wightmans. One of these ladies was a member of the Presbyterian church, whose minister I had walked a long mile to hear preach, but had never made his acquaintance, though I took in all he said and remembered it all to my sorrow. The following summer said minister sought my acquaintance, to teach his district school in the country. His lady member had bragged of what a good grammarian I had taught her to be. Hence, he had sought my acquaintance, for he had never had any teacher in grammar. All this time my associates were my seniors, and as my father was a farmer with six daughters, I saw very plainly I could not depend on him for support. At that time no ornamental or fancy work could be bought in the store. I had learned to embroider at school, at eight years of age. I took up painting in water colors. I never spent an idle moment. I was taught to spin and weave, and put in all my time, when not teaching, with my needle and my paint brush. As all the farmers among whom I taught had woolen rolls from their own sheep, I soon earned enough to make a long piece of flannel, and so manufactured cloth for sale. So I only enjoyed with my family without making expense for my father. My first interview with my old teacher is told in these Scraps in Chapter I., written for the Clarendon News, in 1878, as well as my strange life in Texas. In 1841 we sold out in Texas, so as to make a change of climate, to try to improve Mr. W.'s health. We exchanged for property in Covington, New York, We arrived in August, 1841. He died on October 26th, the anniversary of our wedding day, just thirteen years before. Another strange coincidence; all the years of my childhood and youth, I had vague presentiment that I should not spend my days among the hills and beautiful valleys and lakes of Western New York. I was sure I had never seen the man I would marry. .....

VETERANS OF TEXAS

CONNERSVILLE, April 14th, 1880.

To the Veterans of Texas—Greeting: Again, I am with you in spirit. Forty-five years have not effaced from my memory the stirring times of 1835-6, when more lives were jeopardized by the hardship of leaving comfortable homes, without animals to carry the infirm, the sick, and the helpless, and the absolute necessaries of life, than fell by the sword of the enemy. When groceries had to be left behind to make room for breadstuffs; when despair was on every face; when no communication was kept up between the fleeing multitude and our weak army — themselves refugees in the wilderness in the then Brazoe bottoms; and even the few who essayed to fortify at the mouth of the Brazos, had a suspicion that the army had been annihilated. So supreme was the suspicion, that the steam of the only boat was kept up when all but seven had gone to try and find the so-called army. My former husband, E. R. Wightman, was among the seven with one cannon to defend the steamboat, in which some had essayed to make their escape, when the match was lit to fire the cannon, which demonstration caused the boat to return to its moorings, and thus matters stood a few days, when the news of the battle of San Jacinto changed the face of everything. This suspense to know the true state of things was more painful than defeat, especially to those in the so-called fort. General Fillesota, who headed the retreating Mexican army, had to write and publish a pamphlet to defend himself, and it was translated into English. He stated that his spies had discovered that there were 500 American soldiers at the mouth of the Brazos, and it was not safe to make an attack. This I read myself after my husband's story, as told to me as above. Of course no blame can be attached to our feeble army, when it is remembered that many of them had to return to their families, long distances, to help them to a place of protection, even to the eastern border of the State, where I was myself, and where such a multitude as might be compared to the Israelites when fleeing before Pharaoh's hosts. To add to our consternation, false reports greeted us that the Indians from the north would attack us, Mexicans on the west, water south and east, which made it seem more like our Hebrew brethren's retreat, only we lacked the Moses. Our Negro servants were our protectors, for very few able-boded white men were to be seen, but all kinds of conveyance, with poverty and want and despair on all sides, and thus we opened an empire to civilization and Chrisianity, which was born of blood and suffering. Will future generations remember and be thankful for this blessed land, the glory of all lands. And when you cease to get your annual greeting, you may know that one more veteran has passed to the promised land and been gathered to her fathers.

INTRODUCTION TO APPENDIX

E. R. Wightman, from whose field notes and other writings the following Appendix has been compiled, arrived in Texas about 1824, and was one of Stephen F. Austin's original colony of three hundred and one of his first surveyors. He wrote the first history of Texas, corrected former latitudes and longitudes of the coast regions, made field notes of all the rivers and their branches, and compiled the first map of Texas in 1828, from which all subsequent maps obtain their basis. Mr. Wightman was the first husband of Mrs. Mary S. Helm, author of "Scraps of Early Texas History."

FROM THE WRITING OF

ELIAS R. WIGHTMAN

The publication of the following general description of that part of ancient Louisiana known as the province of Tejas, between the Sabine river and the Rio Grande del Norte, ceded to the Spanish government by the Florida treaty, may not be un-interesting to some of your readers.

It now composes one of the departments of the free, sovereign and independent states of Coahuila and Texas, bounded east and west by the said rivers, Sabine and Del Norte, on the south by the gulf of Mexico, and on the north by the territory of the general government of Mexico, separated by the 33d parallel of north latitude and situated between the 25th and 33d parallels of north latitude and 93 deg. 15 min. and 102 deg. west longitude; containing about 165,000 square miles.

It may be divided into four divisions, of different descriptions: The first division was described as follows:

"That bordering on the coast of the Gulf of Mexico, extending from thirty to forty miles back, is, in general, different from lands along the Atlantic coast, being of rich alluvial bottom lands, of great depth near the rivers, covered with cane, wild peach, haw, persimmon, mulberry, hackberry, pecan, walnut, ash, cypress, cedar, cottonwood, box elder, sumach, liveoak, Spanish water, postoak and overcap oak."

A heart to conceive,
A hand to execute—
Angels could no more."

BALAKLAVA is a seaport village in the Crimean region, Southwest of USSR, and the site of a Crimean War battle on October 25, 1854. It was commemorated by Alfred Lord Tennyson's poem, The Charge of the Light Brigade, which he wrote and published in 1854. A Wightman fought in this battle.

Half a league, half a league,
Half a league onward.
All to the valley to Death
  Rode the six hundred.
"Forward the Light Brigade!
Charge for the guns!" he said.
Into the valley of Death
  Rode the six hundred.

"Forward, the Light Brigade!"
Was there a man dismay'd?
Not tho' the soldier knew
  Some one had blunder'd.
Theirs not to make reply,
Theirs not to reason why,
Theirs but to do and die.
Into the valley of Death
  Rode the six hundred.

Cannon to right of them,
Cannon to left of them,
Cannon in front of them
  Volley'd and thunder'd;
Storm'd at with shot and shell,
Boldly they rode and well,
Into the jaws of Death,
Into the mouth of hell
  Rode the six hundred.

Flash'd all their sabres bare,
Flash'd as they turn'd in air
Sabring the gunners there,
Charging an army, while
  All the world wonder'd.
Plunged in the battery-smoke
Right thro' the line they broke,
Cossack and Russian
Reel'd from the sabre-stroke
  Shatter'd and sunder'.
Then they rode back, but not,
  Not the six hundred.

Cannon to right of them,
Cannon to left of them,
Cannon behind them
  Volley'd and thunder'd;
Storm'd at with shot and shell,
While horse and hero fell,
They that had fought so well
Came thro' the jaws of Death,
Back from the mouth of hell,
All that was left of them,

When can their glory fade?
O the wild charge they made!
  All the world wonder'd.
Honor the charge they made!
Honor the Light Brigade,
 Noble six hundred!

The following is the personal account of the part that James W. Wightman took in The Charge of the Light Brigade. He was in the Calvary unit as a member of the 17th Lancers. The best remembered episode in the whole war was this futile self-sacrifice charge made by Wightman and the other five hundred ninety-nine men in the brigade. During this Crimean War, the number killed in action was small compared with those who perished of disease in transit, in the camps or in the hospitals. There had been little provision for the first winter and the men suffered miserably.

1892 BALACLAVA & THE RUSSIAN CAPTIVITY

ONE OF THE "SIX HUNDRED" ON THE BALACLAVA CHARGE

by James W. Wightman (late 17th Lancers):
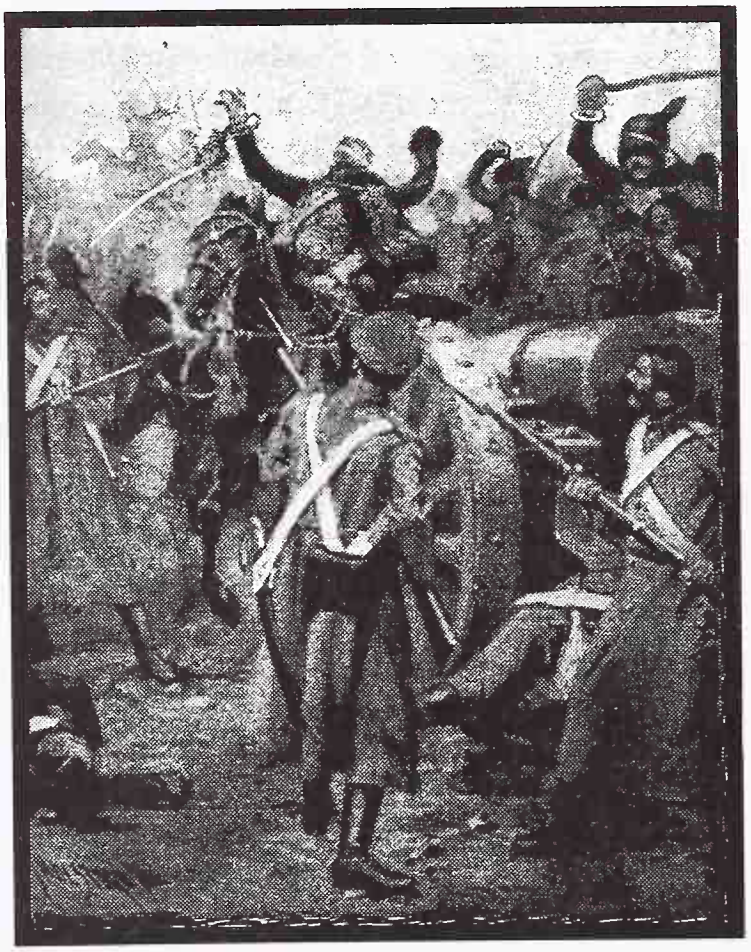
Secretary, Balaclava Commemoration Society

I wish to tell of what I, as a private soldier in the ranks of one of its regiments, saw of the doings of the Light Brigade in its memorable and glorious charge, and what befell in our Russian captivity my comrades and myself who had the ill-fortune to become prisoners of war. Of the manoeuvring of the early morning I shall say nothing, and but little of the glorious charge of the Heavy Cavalry, a good deal of which, with muttered anger at being restrained from striking in on the Russian flank, we Light-Bobs witnessed from our position near the hither end of the Causeway Ridge. We saw the straining gallop of the red-coated troops and their sword-flashing in the air; we heard the wild shout of the Inniskillings, and the hoarse roar of 'Scotland for Ever!' from the throats of the Greys; and we, envious yet admiring, gave back a cheer and the brotherly shout of 'Good old Heavies!' Trumpet-Major Joy, of the 17th Lancers, was Lord Lucan's field-trumpeter, and we men of that corps envied him his good luck, for we made sure he had charged with the Heavies; but this was not so, and, tied as he was to the divisional commander, he had the misfortune also not to share in the charge of the Light Brigade; wherefore we had been obliged to exclude him from our commemorative banquets ever since, as no man can take part in them who did not actually ride the charge down the valley.

The 17th Lancers had been unfortunate in regard of their commanding officers. Colonel Lawrenson, who had brought us out, went sick the day after the Alma, during which battle he rode almost doubled up, as we thought, with cholera. We did not greatly regret him, for we considered him a little too extra-dainty for the rough-and-ready business of warfare. When after the battle we and the 11th Hussars were sent forward after the retreating enemy, he called many a good soldier a coward for roughly handling Russian soldiers who resisted capture. An officer I tackled fired a pistol-shot at me point blank, which carried away one of the rings of my horse's bit. I pulled quick upon him and felled him with the butt of my lance, for doing which Colonel Lawrenson called me a coward--a word hard to stomach even from one's colonel. His successor, Major Willett, was a good soldier, but a tyrant. Shortly before the day of Balaclava, the Cavalry had to turn out and stand to their horses all night in every bitter weather. Major Willett would allow neither officer nor man of his regiment to cloak, and to do him justice he did not do so himself. This needless and wanton exposure--the other regiments were comfortable cloaked--wrought his own death; he was a corpse before sundown of the following day. Captain Morris, who had been on staff duty and who had seen much war service in India, then took command as next senior officer, and it was he who led the regiment in the charge. When he came to us from the staff, many of the fellows did not know him, dressed as he was in blue frock coat and forage cap with gold-edged peak. 'Who is he?' was their question. 'Why, Slacks!' was the reply. This was the nickname he brought from the 16th



The Charge of the Light Brigade

Lancers; no man of our corps ever knew the significance or origin of it.

When the Heavies and the Russians were having it out, Captain Morris moved out and spoke very earnestly to Lord Cardigan in front of the Light Brigade. We heard nothing of the short conversation except Cardigan's hoarse sharp closing words--'No, no, sir!--where-upon Captain Morris fell back, uttering the words as he wheeled his horse in front of the right squadron--'My God, my God, what a chance we are losing!'--at the same time slapping his sword sharply against his leg, as if in anger. I among others distinctly heard the words and marked the gesture, and we were not slow to believe that he suggested to Cardigan that now was the time to strike the flank of the Russian Cavalry, and that Cardigan had rebuffed him.

After the Heavies' charge the Light Brigade was moved a little way 'left back' and then forward, down into the middle of the upper part of the outer valley, and fronting straight down it, the Heavies remaining a little in advance to the right about the crest of the Causeway Ridge. We stood halted in those positions for about three quarters of an hour, Lord Cardigan in front of his brigade, Lord Lucan on our right front about midway between the two brigades. I may here describe the composition of the first line of the Light Brigade, and my own particular place therein. On the right were the 13th Light Dragoons (now Hussars), in the centre the 17 Lancers, on the left the 11th Hussars, which latter regiment before the charge began was ordered back in support, so that during the charge the first line consisted only of the 13th Light Dragoons and the 17th Lancers. All three regiments were but of two squadrons each; the formation of course was two deep. I belonged to the right troop of the 1st (the right) squadron of the 17th Lancers; my squadron leader being Captain (now General) R. White, my troop leader Captain Morgan, now Lord Tredegar. On the extreme right of the front rank of the squadron rode Private John Lee, a grand old soldier who had long served in India and whose time was nearly up; I was next to him, and on my left was my comrade Peter Marsh.

As we stood halted here, Captain Nolan, of the 15th Hussars, whom we knew as an aide-de-camp of the head-squarer staff, suddenly galloped out to the front through the interval between us and the 13th, and called out to Captain Morris, who was directly in my front, 'where is Lord Lucan?' 'There,' replied Morris, pointing--'there, on the right front!' Then he asked, 'What is it to be, Nolan?--are we going to charge?' Nolan was off already in Lord Lucan's direction, but as he galloped away he shouted to Morris over his shoulder, 'You will see! you will see!' Just then we had some amusement.

Private John Vey, who was the regimental butcher and had been slaughtering down at Balaclava, came up at a gallop on a troop horse of a Heavy who had been killed, and whom Vey had stripped of his belt and arms and accoutered himself with them over his white canvas smock frock, which, as well as his canvas trousers tucked into his boots, were covered with blood-stains. His shirt-sleeves were rolled up above his elbows, and his face, arms, and hands were smeared with blood, so that as he formed up on Lee's right shouting--he had some drink in him--that 'he'd be dammed if he was going to be left behind his regiment and so lose the fun,' he was indeed a gruesome yet laughable figure. Mr. Chadwick, the adjutant, ordered him to rein back and join his own troop in the 2nd squadron, and I saw no more of him, but I afterwards knew that he rode the charge, had his horse shot, but came back unwounded, and was given the distinguished conduct medal.

I cannot call to mind seeing Lord Lucan come to the front of the Light Brigade and speak with Lord Cardigan, although of course I know now that he did so. But I distinctly remember that Nolan returned to the brigade, and his having a mere momentary talk with Cardigan, at the close of which he drew his sword with a flourish, as if greatly excited. The blood came into his face--I seem to see him now; and then he fell back a little way into Cardigan's left rear, somewhat in front of and to the right of Captain Morris, who had taken post in front of his own left squadron. And I remember as if it were but yesterday Cardigan's figure and attitude, as he faced the brigade and in his strong hoarse voice gave the momentous word of command, 'The brigade will advance! First squadron of 17th Lancers direct! Calm as on parade--calmer indeed by far than his wont on parade--stately, square and erect, master of himself, his brigade, and his noble charger, Cardigan looked the ideal cavalry leader, with his stern firm face and his quiet soldierly bearing. His long military seat was perfection on the thoroughbred chestnut 'Ronald' with the 'white stockings' on the near hind and fore, which my father, his old riding-master, had broken for him. He was in the full uniform of his old corps, the 11th Hussars, and he wore the pelisse, not slung, but put on like a patrol jacket, its front one blaze of gold lace. His drawn sword was in his hand at the slope, and never saw I man fitter to wield the weapon.

As I have said, he gave the word of command, and then turning his head toward his trumpeter, Britten of the Lancers, he quietly said 'Sound the Advance!' and wheeled his horse, facing the dark mass at the farther end of the valley which we knew to be the enemy. The trumpeter sounded the 'Walk;' after a few horse-lengths came the 'Trot.' I did not hear the 'Gallop,' but it was sounded. Neither voice nor trumpet, so far as I know, ordered the 'Charge;' Britten was a dead man in a few strides after he had sounded the 'Gallop.' We had ridden barely two hundred yards and were still at the trot, when poor Nolan's fate came to him. I did not see him cross Cardigan's front, but I did see the shell explode, of which a fragment struck him. From his raised sword-hand dropped the sword, but the arm remained erect. Kinglake writes that 'what had once been Nolan' maintained the strong military seat until the 'erect form dropped out of the saddle;' but this was not so. The sword-arm indeed remained upraised and rigid, but all the other limbs so curled in on the contorted trunk as by a spasm, that we wondered how for the moment the huddled form kept the saddle. It was the sudden convulsive twitch of the bridle hand inward on the chest that caused the charger to wheel rearward so abruptly. The weird shriek and the awful face as rider and horse disappeared haunt me now to this day, the first horror of that ride of horrors.

As the line at the trumpet sound broke from the trot into the gallop, Lord Cardigan, almost directly behind whom I rode, turned his head leftward toward Captain Morris and shouted hoarsely, 'Steady, steady, Captain Morris!' The injunction was no doubt pointed specially at the latter, because he, commanding the regiment one of the squadrons of which had been named to direct, was held in a manner responsible to the brigade commander for both the pace and direction of the whole line. Later, when we were in the midst of our torture, and, mad to be out of it and have our revenge, were forcing the pace, I heard again, high above the turmoil and din, Cardigan's sonorous command, 'Steady, steady, the 17th Lancers!' and observed him check with voice and outstretched sword Captain White, my squadron leader, as he shot forward abreast of the stern disciplined chief leading the brigade. But, resolute man though he was, the time had come when neither the commands nor the example of Cardigan availed to restrain the pace of his brigade; and when to maintain his position in advance, indeed, if he were to escape being ridden down, he had to let his charger out from the gallop to the charge. For hell had opened upon us from front and either flank, and it kept open upon us during the minutes--they seemed hours--which passed while we traversed the mile and a quarter at the end of which was the enemy. The broken and first-thinning ranks raised rugged peals of wild fierce cheering that only swelled the louder as the shot and shell from the battery tore gaps through us, and the enfilading musketry fire from the Infantry in both flanks brought down horses and men. Yet in this stress it was fine to see how strong was the bond of discipline and obedience. 'Close in! close in!' was the constant command of the squadron and troop officers as the casualties made gaps in the ragged line, but the order was scarcely needed, for of their own instance and, as it seemed, mechanically, men and horses alike sought to regain the touch.

We had not broke into the charging pace when poor old John Lee, my right-hand man on the flank of the regiment was all but smashed by a shell; he gave my arm a twitch as with a strange smile on his worn old face he quietly said, 'Domino! chum,' and fell out of the saddle. His old grey mare kept alongside of me for some distance, treading on and tearing out her entrails as she galloped, till at length she dropped with a strange shriek. I have mentioned that my comrade, Peter Marsh, was my left-hand man; next beyond was Private Dudley. The explosion of a shell had swept down four or five men on Dudley's left, and I heard him ask Marsh if he had noticed 'what a hole that b------ shell had made' on his left front. 'Hold your foul-mouthed tongue,' answered Peter, 'swearing like a blackguard, when you may be knocked into eternity next minute!' Just then I got a musket-bullet through my right knee, and another in the shin, and my horse had three bullet wounds in the neck. Man and horse were bleeding so fast that Marsh begged me to fall out; but I would not, pointing out that in a few minutes we must be into them, and so I sent my spurs well home, and faced it out with my comrades. It was about this time that Sergeant Talbot had his head clean carried off by a round shot, yet for about thirty yards further the headless body kept the saddle, the lance at the charge firmly gripped under the right arm. My narrative may seem barren of incidents of the charge, but amid the crash of shells and the whistle of bullets, the cheers and the dying cries of comrades, the sense of personal danger, the pain of wounds, and the consuming passion to reach an enemy, he must be an exceptional man who is cool enough and curious enough to be looking serenely about him for what painters call 'local colour.' I had a good deal of 'local color' myself, but it was running down the leg of my overalls from my wounded knee.

Well, we were nearly out of it at last, and close on those cursed guns. Cardigan was still straight in front of me, steady as a church, but now his sword was in the air; he turned in his saddle for an instant, and shouted his final command, 'Steady! steady! Close in!' immediately afterwards there crashed into us a regular volley from the Russian cannon. I saw Captain White go down and Cardigan disappear into the smoke. A moment more and I was within it myself. A shell burst right over my head with a hellish crash that all but stunned me. Immediately after I felt my horse under me take a tremendous leap into the air. What he jumped I never saw or knew; the smoke was so thick I could not see my arm's length around me. Through the dense veil I heard noises of fighting and slaughter, but saw no obstacle, no adversary, no gun or gunner, and in short, was through and beyond the Russian battery before I knew for certain that I had reached it.

I then found that none of my comrades were close to me; there was no longer any semblance of a line. No man of the Lancers was on my right, a group was a little way on my left. Lord Cardigan must have increased his distance during or after passing through the battery, for I now saw him some way ahead, alone in the midst of a knot of Cossacks. At this moment Lieutenant Maxse, his Lordship's aide-de-camp, came back out of the tussle, and crossed my front as I was riding forward. I saw that he was badly wounded; and he called to me. 'For God's sake, Lancer, don't ride over me! See where Lord Cardigan is,' pointing to him, 'rally on him!'I was hurrying on to support the brigade commander, when a Cossack came at me and sent his lance into my right thigh. I went for him, but he bolted; I overtook him, drove my lance into his back and unhorsed him just in front of two Russian guns which were in possession of Sergeant-Majors Lincoln and Smith, of the 13th Light Dragoons, and other men of the Bridgade. When pursuing the Cossack I noticed Colonel Mayow deal very cleverly with a big Russian cavalry officer. He tipped off his shako with the point of his sword, and then laid his head right open with the old cut seven. The chase of my Cossack had diverted me from rallying on Lord Cardigan; he was nowhere to be seen, nor did I ever again set eyes on the chief who had led up down the valley so grandly. The handful with the guns, to which I momentarily attached myself, were presently outnumbered and overpowered, the two sergeant-majors being taken prisoners, having been dismounted. I then rode towards Private Samuel Parkes, of the 4th Light Dragoons, who supporting with one arm the wounded Trumpet-Major (Crawford) of his regiment, was with the other cutting and slashing at the enemies surrounding them. I struck in to aid the gallant fellow, who was not overpowered until his sword was shot away, when he and the trumpet-major were taken prisoners, and it was with difficulty I was able to cut my way out. Presently there joined me two other men, Mustard, of my own corps, and Fletcher, of the 4th Light Dragoons. We were now through and on the further side of a considerable body of the Russian cavalry, and so near the bottom of the valley that we could well discern the Tehermaya river. But we were all three wearied and weakened by loss of blood; our horses wounded in many places; there were enemies all about us, and we thought it was about time to be getting back. I remember reading in the regimental library of an officer who said to his commander 'We have done enough for honour.' That was our humble opinion too, and we turned our horses' heads. We forced our way through ring after ring of enemies, fell in with my comrade Peter Marsh, and rode rearward, breaking through party after party of Cossacks, until we heard the familiar voice of Corporal Morley,* of our regiment, a great, rough, bellowing Nottingham man. He had lost his lance hat, and his long hair was flying out in the wind as he roared. 'Coom 'ere! Fall in, lads fall in!' Well, with shouts and oaths he had collected some twenty troopers of various regiments. We fell in with the handful this man of the hour had rallied to him, and there joined us also under leadership Sergeant-Major Ranson and Private John Penn, of the 17th. Penn, a tough and old warrior who had served with the 3rd Light in the Sikh war, had killed a Russian officer, dismounted, and with great deliberation accoutered himself with the belt and sword of the defunct, in which he made a show. A body of Russian Hussars blocked our way. Morley, roaring Nottingham oaths by way of encouragement, led us straight at them, and went through and out at the other side as if they had been made of tinsel paper. As we rode up the valley, pursued by some Hussars and Cossacks, my horse was wounded by a bullet in the shoulder, and I had hard work to put the poor beast along. Presently we were abreast of the Infantry who had blazed into our right as we went down; and we had to take their fire again, this time on our left. Their firing was very impartial; their own Hussars and Cossacks following close on us suffered from it as well as we. Not many of Corporal Morley's party got back. My horse was shot dead, riddled with bullets. One bullet struck me on the forehead, another passed through the top of my shoulder; while struggling out from under my dead horse a Cossack standing over me stabbed me with his lance once in the neck near the jugular, again above the collar-bone, several times in the back, and once under the short rib; and when, having regained my feet, I was trying to draw my sword, he sent his lance through the palm of my hand. I believe he would have succeeded in killing me, clumsy as he was, if I had not blinded him for the moment with a handful of sand. Fletcher at the same time lost his horse, and it seems, was wounded. We were roughly used. The Cossacks at first hauled along by the tails of our coatees and our haversacks. When we got on foot they drove their lance-butts into our backs to stir us on. With my shattered knee and the other bullet wound on the shin of the same leg, I could barely limp, and good old Fletcher said 'Get on my back, chum!' I did so, and then found that he had been shot through the back of the head. When I told him of this, his only answer was, 'Oh, never mind that, it's not much, I don't think.' But it was that much that he died of the wound a few days later; and here he was, a doomed man himself, making light of a mortal wound, and carrying a chance comrade of another regiment on his back. I can write this, but I could not tell of it in speech, because I know I should play the woman.

*Morley took his discharge in 1856, because he was not awarded the Distinguished Conduct medal, which certainly should have been given him. He went to America, fought on the Northern side all through the Civil War, was twice taken prisoner, and spent a year in 'Libby' prison, retired with the rank of captain, and was employed in the War Department at Washington, D.C.

The number of men killed in action was small compared with those who perished of disease in transit, in the camps or in the base hospital. Inefficiency created chaos and the men suffered miserable. All supplies arriving had to be delivered the hard way.

When we reached the Tehernaya, the Russians were as kind to us as the Cossacks had been brutal before. We found there a number of comrades; for some of us water was fetched, to others was given vodka. We were soon conveyed in bullock-carts to a village a little distance in rear, where our wounds were attended to. I placed on the window ledge the bullet which had been extracted from my knee. The Russian sentry took it and asked by signs if it had wounded me. I nodded, whereupon the Ruski spat upon it and threw it out of the window, exclaiming, 'Sukin sin!'--son of a female dog. A strange thing happened this afternoon. Private John Bevin, of the 8th Hussars, had been having his wounds dressed. A Russian cavalryman who was lying on the opposite side of the hut, and who had two desperate sword-cuts on the head and three fingers off, had been looking hard at Bevin for some time. At last he got up, crossed the floor, and made Bevin understand that he it was who had cut the Russian abut so severely. Bevin cheerfully owned to the charge, and, pointing to the fragment left of his own right ear, gave the Russian to understand that it was he who had played the part of St. Peter. Whereupon the two fraternised, and Bevin had to resort to much artifice to escape being kissed by the battered Muscovite.

About four the same afternoon, when we were all very stiff and sore, General Liprandi, the Russian commander, was so good as to pay us a visit. He was very pleasant, and spoke excellent English. 'Come now men,' he asked, 'what did they give you to drink? Did they not prime you with spirits to come down and attack us in such a mad manner?' William Kirk, of the 17th Lancers, an unwounded prisoner who had lost his horse, was leaning against the door when Liprandi spoke. He had been punishing the Russian vodka a bit, and he stepped up to the General and said, 'You think we were drunk? By God, I tell you that if we had so much as smelt the barrel, we would have taken half Russia by this time!' Liprandi looked at him with a smile and remarked quite humorously, 'Indeed, then to be sure we should have had a poor change!' Sergeant-Major Fowler, of the 4th Light Dragoons, had been run through the back by a Cossack lance, and was sitting in a corner. He was a fine dignified soldier, a gentleman born I believe, and one of the handsomest men in the Light Brigade. To give more room in the carts to his comrades, he walked every step of the fifty miles to Simferopol; his wound mortified, and he died within the week after his capture. Raising himself with great pain and difficulty, for his wound had stiffened, he stood upright and severely checked Kirk for his impertinent forwardness; then coming smartly to 'attention' before Liprandi and saluting the General, he said with great earnestness: 'On my honour, sir, except for the vodka that your men have given to some of them, there is not a man of us who has tasted food or drink this day. We left camp before daylight, and were continuously in the field until we became prisoners of war. Our uncooked rations are still in our haversacks. Our daily issue of a mouthful of rum is made in the afternoon, and, believe me, sir, we don't hoard it. I wish all the men who have gone to their account this day were as free of sin as they were of drink!' Liprandi was moved. 'You are noble fellows,' said he, 'and I am sincerely sorry for you. I will order you some vodka, and will send you also some pens, ink, and paper, for some of you at least have parents, wives, or sweethearts; so write and tell them that they can rely on your being well treated.'

Soon after the General had gone, the surgeons entered and set about amputating a leg of each of four men. They did not use chloroform, but simply sprinkled cold water on the poor fellow's faces. It seemed a butcherly job, and certainly was a sickening sight; nor was any good purpose served, for each of the sufferers died immediately on the removal of the limb. At night we were served out, instead of blankets, with the greatcoats which the Turks had left behind when they evacuated the redoughts. They swarmed with vermin, but the night was bitterly cold, and we found them very acceptable. Next morning General Liprandi paid us another visit to tell us that a flag of truce had been sent to him from the English camp, requesting permission to bury our dead; and that he had replied that the Russians were Christians, and would undertake the decent interment of the English dead. He then asked whether we had any idea how many of our horses had been killed. Of course we had not, and he informed us that the number was 404. As he was leaving, he again denounced the charge as 'sheer madness,' but repeated that we were 'noble fellows.'

That same night we started for Simferopol, in one-horse carts, two men in a cart lying on straw. We travelled by night, covering the fifty miles in four marches. At the halting-place at Livadia a Russian officer annexed my spurs, but was civil enough to give me twenty copecks for them, which coin the Russian orderlies stole from me when carrying me into Simferopol Hospital. When we were stripped there, most of our uniforms were so stiff with blood that they could have stood on end of themselves. After a week's rest, it was found that the wounded limbs of several poor fellows were mortifying, and amputation in those cases was resorted to, but with very bad results, for of nine men operated on, only one survived. On the 3rd of November the Grand Duke Nicholas and Michael, sons of the Russian Emperor, came to Simferopol on their way to Sevastopol, and paid us a visit in the hospital. They asked us whether we were comfortable, and if they could do anything for us. We laid aside shyness in the presence of so great personages, and bluntly complained of the food served to us, which consisted of black bread*, each loaf weighing from

* Mr. Kinglake errs in stating, on the authority of General Todleben, that the Russian soldiers subscribed of their pay to buy white loaves for the English prisoners. They were very friendly and kindly, they gave us of their vodka, and did buy for us milk with oil and vinegar, fruit, &c., but it was not until we reached Kharkoff that we saw white bread, and then it was supplied, not by soldiers, but by citizens.

thirty to forty pounds, cabbage, small lumps of meat, with garlic, after which the pot was brought into the ward, and the order of the day was that we should sit round it with great wooden spoons, and dip into it for luck. He was indeed a fortunate man who chanced to fish out one of the sparse morsels of meat. The Grand Duke Nicholas said he was aware that it was not English soldiers' diet, but that it was exactly the same ration on which the Russian soldiers were marching and fighting; and he asked that as we got further into the interior of Russia we should find our food improve. He said it was a great pity to see such fine men knocked about as we had been; and before leaving, told us that any complaints we should desire to make we were to repeat the same just as if were with our regiments, and we might rely that they should be inquired into. Plenty of visitors came to see us daily. A kind French lady, Madame Jacquemire, frequently brought us wine, grapes, and biscuits; she would go down on her knees by the bedside of the poor fellows who were waiting for death, and pray with them. The wounded Russians brought here after the battle of Inkerman died like flies; every morning five or six carts piled high with dead bodies passed our windows on the way to the dead-pit. Every hole and corner of the great hospital was crammed with wounded men, three out of four of whom were the victims of bayonet wounds, so that the fighting must have been very close. They looked anything but pleasant at us Englishmen, and indeed there was one row. William Kirk of the Lancers, lying sick in the next ward to me among a number of Russian soldiers, was spit on by two of them. He up like a shot, and went at the crowd of them with his fists. After a struggle he was overpowered, thrust by the orderlies into something like a strait-jacket, and tied down on his bed, where he remained till the evening, when the surgeon released him, threatening him with severe punishment if he used his fists again. He died very soon after, and our suspicion was that he had been poisoned that same night.

I felt greatly relieved when we became so far convalescent as to be able to quit this hospital and be sent on the march further into the interior. Each man received an outfit of long boots, a sheepskin coat, two tough shirts, pieces of rug for socks, and a fur cap with flaps. It was on Christmas afternoon (1854) that we were removed from the hospital to the prison. The sergeant of the guard sold for us the Turkish greatcoats we had no further need of, and bought vodka for us with the proceeds. We kept our Christmas sitting round a big fire, passing the bottle till the vodka was all gone, the Russian guard sharing with us as boon companions. Next morning, in a blustering, freezing snow-storm, we began our march, in company with a gang of convicts in leg-irons and each handcuffed to a long chain. They were soldiers who had misbehaved at Inkerman; most of them were Poles, and we were told that they were bound for Siberia. My knee was still bent, and I walked with a crutch, so that I soon fell behind a long distance. Two men of the escort were sent back for me, and the good fellows, pitying my painful condition, made a seat for me with their muskets, and in this 'king's chair,' with an arm round the neck of each, they carried me to the end of the day's march. During the rest of the long journey, which lasted for days, I travelled in a bullock-cart by the officer's order. Our men and the escort were very friendly together: they used to march along singing and laughing linked arm and arm. We were billeted in the filthy huts of the Russian villages we passed through, and it must have been in the foul air of those stinking hovels where three of us, of whom I was one, caught a violent fever, raving in which we were left behind in the hospital of Alexandrovska, where we were well treated, and received the greatest kindness. Poor Brown died two days after admission. Harris and myself at the end of a month were well enough to resume our march. At Ekaterinovslow, a large and fine city, we were joined by three French soldiers, two of whom were prisoners of war, one a deserter, and by two English infantrymen who were deserters. The Russian soldiers hated deserters, and they always got the roughest of treatment; while the prisoners of war were billeted and were regarded by the escort as comrades, the deserters were shoved into the prisons and we saw them only during the march. At the daily roll-call before starting, when a prisoner's name was called, he would be patted on the back and called a 'good man;' when a deserter answered to his name, he would be pushed rudely to one side, spat on, and called a 'Sukin sin.' Of course we English prisoners never spoke to our two disgraceful countrymen; but I felt great pity for the French deserter when he told me his story. When in the advanced trenches, he said his party was much annoyed by the fire of a Russian sharpshooter in an adjacent rifle-pit, and the officer exclaimed that he wished to God some one would kill the fellow. Presently this man, by his own account, crept forward in the darkness, shot the sharpshooter and run in under a heavy fire from both sides. On his return the officer asked where he had been, and when he answered, instead of being praised as he expected, he was ordered into arrest. In his passion he ran at the officer, knocked him down, leaped out of the trench, and ran to the Russians under fire. I was told that soon after he left us he died broken-hearted at Tamboff.

During our three weeks' march from Ekaterinovsldow to Kharkoff, we from time to time met very large bodies of reinforcements going toward Sevastopol, consisting for the most part of old men and young lads, scarcely able to carry their guns. They would point their guns at us and shout, 'Engleski! Seevastopol!' We used to advise them to make haste, because for the present the English had not got many Russians to shoot at. At Kharkoff we were quartered in the prison, but were under no restrictions. Soon after our arrival a lady came into our room and asked us, in our own language, whether we were the English prisoners. When we told her we were, she took us all to her own house, and treated us with great kindness. When the time to leave came, she got permission from the Governor of the place for me to remain behind until the spring weather should come, and she furnished me with an outfit of cloths and linen. I was very comfortable under her roof, and I spent my time in making her a little flower garden with a pretty border. The good lady promised that it should never be destroyed or altered. At Easter came the fine weather, and I rather reluctantly had to start for Veronesch with a fresh relay of prisoners. There I was heartily welcomed by my comrades, who had quite given me up for lost. Our Veronesch quarters were very comfortable; we had a large house assigned to us, specially furnished for the occasion; we had the liberty of the whole town, and received many invitations to Russian houses. We lived well on white bread, beef, mutton, and plenty of eggs and milk; and we had one rouble each every five days for spending money. We resolved among ourselves that if any man disgraced the English good name by bad conduct, we should take the punishment of him into our own hands; and I am proud to say that only twice during the three months we spent in Veronesch did this infliction become necessary. At the end of that time we got the route for Odessa, which we knew meant restoration of liberty. One fine August morning we left Veronesch, with the good wishes and regrets of its inhabitants, who crowded around us wishing us God-speed with great cordiality and earnestness. We returned in very different style to our upward journey--travelling in comfortable spring carts at the rate of fifty miles a day. But when near Odessa a very unpleasant incident occurred. Arriving one night at a village where there was nothing to eat, we commissioned three of our number to go and buy provisions in an adjacent village on the other side of a river. On their way back, while waiting for a boat, they were suddenly attacked by six men with heavy clubs, who felled and all but stunned them. Recovering themselves, they went vigorously at their assailants, who had made a bad selection, for there were not three finer men in the British Cavalry than Bird (8th Hussars), Cooper (13th Light Dragoons), and Chapman (4th Dragoon Guards). Setting to business in the good old English style, they severely punished their antagonists, who bolted, but not before damaging our men considerably. Next morning, the three cavalrymen recognised their antagonists among the soldiers of the port. Their faces, indeed, would have betrayed them, battered and bruised as they were. Bird and his two comrades, savage at the unprovoked attack of the night before, were for taking further satisfaction, when the soldiers fixed bayonets and kept them off. The officer came up and gave the order to march, but we demanded that he should put the six men under arrest. He refused, and struck Bird in the face. Bird knocked the officer down with a straight one from the shoulder; some of us grasped the muskets of the soldiers, others ran to a hut and armed themselves with stakes pulled out of its roof. Discretion, however, was thought the better part of valour when the officer ordered his men to load with ball-cartridge; but on our arrival at Odessa, Bird, Cooper, and Chapman reported the affair personally to the Governor, who placed the officer and the six men under arrest, and, as we were told, punished them severely. Two days' march from Odessa we met a large batch of Russian soldiers who, taken at the Alma and Inkerman, had been prisoners of war in England, and, having been exchanged, were on their way home. They greeted us with great warmth, and evidently had found England a very pleasant country. 'Very good stout! very good beer! very good beef! Brighton very good! Russia got no Brighton! Russia no good! sorry to come back!' were their exclamations.

We were not allowed to enter the town of Odessa, as it was being fortified, but were quartered in a fine house on the outskirts standing in beautiful grounds. Here we got up theatricals, dancing, and all sorts of amusements, and used to have our large room full of Russian visitors laughing at Private Warren's ground and loftily tumbling, and joining in the chorus of our songs. But ten days after we reached Odessa, H.M.S.

'Agamemnon" came in under a flag of truce to take us off. A good many of us were rather sorry to have to go, for we had enjoyed on the whole a very good time and had received most kind and friendly treatment. Our Odessa friends rigged us out in underclothing and crowded to the wharf to bid us farewell. There was much handshaking and not a few attempts to kiss us; but we could not stand that. As we left the wharf we gave our friends three hearty British cheers. Thirty-six men of the Light Brigade had been taken prisoners of war on the day of Balaclava. Of those only fifteen came out of captivity. Of twelve men of the 17th Lancers taken, their came back three, Privates Thomas Marshall, James McAlister, and James W. Wightman. We reached the camp of our regiment to all appearance perfect Russians, and were not at first recognised; but when we were, we received a hearty welcome from officers and men. But, alas, what a mortality among the old 'Deaths'!

These wounded men arrived in England and were rewarded personally by Queen Victoria. J. Wightman could have been in this group.

To my great delight, however, my old comrade Peter Marsh was still to the fore, having weathered it all through without a scratch or a day's sickness. A few days after rejoining we three were tried by court-martial for being absent without leave for twelve months; of which charge we were honourable acquitted and returned to duty. My comrades and I saw some tough scenes in the Indian Mutiny, but on them I will not now enlarge.

My two steadfast chums Marsh and Mustard and I are now for some years settled down near to each other, and at our Annual Commemoration Banquet, and on Christmas Days and Bank Holidays, we three old comrades fight our battles o'er again, and thank God that we are alive to do so.

J. W. Wightman (late 17th Lancers):
Secretary Balaclava, Commemoration Society.

The above account of the battle left out many of the details that faced James W. Wightman and his comrades when they were waiting for the charge. Sir William gives another and broader overlook of the obstacles that this brigade had to overcome. Sir William Howard Russell, a British journalist, was a war correspondent in the Crimea War. He published in 1856, in LETTERS FROM THE CRIMEA, an account of The Charge of the Light Brigade.

"The whole brigade scarcely made one effective regiment according to the numbers of Continental armies; and yet it was more than we would spare. As they rushed toward the front, the Russians opened on them from the guns in the redoubt on the right, with volleys of musketry and rifles. They swept proudly past, glittering in the morning sun in all the pride and splendor of war. We could scarcely believe the evidence of our senses. Surely that handful of men are not going to charge an enemy in position! Alas! it was but too true. Their desperate valor knew no bounds; and far indeed was it removed from its so-called better part -- discretion.

They advanced in two lines, quickening their pace as they closed toward the enemy. A more fearful spectacle was never witnessed than by those who, without the power to aid, beheld their heroic countrymen rushing to the arms of death. At the distance of twelve hundred yards the whole line of the enemy belched forth, from thirty iron mouths, a flood of smoke and flame, through which hissed the deadly balls. Their flight was marked by instant gaps in our ranks, by dead men and horses, by steed flying wounded or riderless across the plain. The first line is broken; it is jointed by the second; they never halt nor check their speed for an instant.

With diminished ranks, thinned by those thirty guns, which the Russians had laid with the most deadly accuracy, with a halo of flashing steel above their heads, and with a cheer, which was many a noble fellow's death-cry, they flew into the smoke of the batteries; but ere they were lost from view, the plain was strewed with their bodies, and with the carcasses of horses. They were exposed to an oblique fire from the batteries on the hills on both sides, as well as to a direct fire of musketry thought the clouds of smoke. We could see their sabres flashing as they rode up to the guns, and dashed between them, cutting down the gunners as they stood. We saw them riding through guns, as I have said. To our delight we saw them returning after breaking through a column of Russian infantry, and scattering them like chaff, when the flank-fire of the battery on the hill swept them, scattered and broken as they were. Wounded men and dismounted troopers flying toward us, told us the sad tale, demi-gods could not have done what we failed to do.

"At the very moment when they were about to retreat, an enormous mass of lancers were hurled on their flank. Colonel Shewell, of the 8th Hussars, saw the danger, and rode his few men straight at them, cutting his way through with fearful loss. The other regiments turned and engaged in a desperate encounter. With courage almost too great for credence, they were breaking their way through the columns which enveloped them, when there took place an act of atrocity without parallel in the modern warfare of civilized nations. The Russian gunners, when the storm of cavalry passed, returned to their guns. They saw their own cavalry mingled with the troopers who had just ridden over them; and, to the eternal disgrace of the Russian name, the miscreants poured a murderous volley of grape and canister on the mass of struggling men and horses, mingling friend and foe in one common ruin.

It was as much as one heavy cavalry brigade could do to cover the retreat of the miserable remnant of that band of heroes as they returned to the place they had so lately quitted in all the pride of life. At thirty-five minutes past eleven not a British soldier, except the dead and dying, was left in front of these bloody Muscovite guns.[+]

Eliphalet Gustin (son of John and Mary Gustin) was born at Stonington, New London County, Connecticut on 18 Dec 1724. He married at Bozrah Congregational Church, Norwich, New London Co. on 11 Mar 1754, Freelove Wightman/Whitman, daughter of Daniel and Katherine (Westcott) Wightman, born between Groton and Norwich, New London Co., on 2 Feb 1733/4. Both husband and wife died during the American Revolution about 1777, while on their way to Canada.

Eliphalet Gustin's father John Gustin, was born at Lynn, Massachusetts on 5 Nov 1691, a son of immigrant Augustine Jean (Gustin) and his wife Elizabeth Browne. He removed to Stonington, New London County, Connecticut on the shore of Fishers Island Sound, an arm of the Atlantic Ocean. John Gustin was baptized as an adult at Stonington on 7 Jul 1714.

Freelove Wightman's father, Daniel Wightman, was born at North Kingstown, Washington County, Rhode Island on 23 Sep 1703. While Daniel was a child, his father Reverend Valentine Wightman removed his family to a farm located on the River Road between Groton and Norwich, New London County, Connecticut. This was located about ten miles west of Stonington near the mouth of the Thames River opposite the county seat of New London.

Eliphalet's father John Gustin moved to Hebron and then to Glastonbury, Hartford County, Connecticut where he was a large land owner. During the late 1740's and early 1750's, he sold several properties to his sons, among them Eliphalet and his brothers John Jr., Alpheus, and Amos. The family disposed of most of their land at Glastonbury about 1754. Weaver included a list of family transactions on page 162-163 of her book. [The Gustine Compendium by Gustine Courson Weaver. Powell & White, Cincinnati, OH: 1929].

The next Gustin family residency was a Florida, Orange County, New York in the Catskill Mountains west of the Hudson River about ten miles north of the New Jersey state line. They moved finally by 1762 southwest to Frankford near Augusta, Sussex County, New Jersey, the final resting place of Mary (1762) and John Gustin (1777).

During the American Revolution, the John and Mary Gustin family were divided in their loyalties. On the Patriot side stood Eliphalet's brother, Colonel John Gustin Jr. Weaver wrote of him quoting The History of Sussex and Warren Counties, New Jersey:

'The Gustin family formerly conducted extensive business interests at this point. The Colonel having been a man of intelligence and influence, in politics, he was an autocrat of the neighbourhood and exercised an imperious sway over his followers. A post-office was early established here with the Col. as P.M., and a tavern offered hospitality to travelers . . . A mill was successfully managed during the career of Col. Gustin, and an ashery is also remembered by early residents . . .

'Colonel Gustin having been Sheriff of the County, member of the Legislature, etc., was looked up to as a leader of the Federal Party in the county. His house was then a great resort for all of the noted men of that region, who came to consult with him on politician interests and public improvements. Among his guests was DeWitt Clinton, Governor of New York and the father of the Erie Canal Scheme.'

On the Loyalist side, Eliphalet and Freelove (Whitman) Gustin. settled at Sussex County, New Jersey, sometime prior to 1763. The story of their disappearance during the American Revolution was recorded in The Gustine Compendium, p. 195.

THE ENTIRE FAMILY OF ELIPHALET & FREELOVE (WIGHTMAN) GUSTIN WERE SUPPOSED TO HAVE BEEN MASSACRED BY THE INDIANS.

'About the year 1777, during the Revolutionary War, Eliphalet and his wife (nee Whitman), in company with some other persons, started overland from Sussex Co., N. J., for Canada with a view to locating there. They were never again heard of. The entire party is supposed to have been massacred while en route by Indian allies of the British, who during that period infested portions of the intervening region and trails.'

The author's supposition that the party was massacred by Indian allies of the British is difficult to fathom. The Gustins and their fellow travelers were going to join the English. The allied Six Nations Indians were being encouraged by the Colonial government's Indian Department to guide loyalists to the British forts where the men augmented the loyalist forces. Be that as it may. it is apparent that the Gustins never arrived at their destination and their two young sons were left in New Jersey, orphaned.

When Eliphalet and Freelove prepared to leave for Canada, they left their two youngest sons with Eliphalet's brother, Benajah Gustin and his wife, Anna who had no children of their own. John was the older. His younger brother, Eliphalet, Jr. was born on Feb. 2, 1766. The two grew up in their uncle's household at Sussex. After the American Revolution, John, his wife, and young family set out for Upper Canada in search of John's parents. Weaver wrote:

'The search was fruitless and the fate of the entire party has ever remained shrouded in mystery; no trace or tidings of any member thereof having divulged the secret of the forest to account for their tragic ending. For some years, after their disappearance had become manifest, diligent search was likewise made by others who were interested, but with results entirely barren.'

After a few years of wandering through New York State on their fruitless quest John and Abigail Gustin came into the Niagara Peninsula to join Abigail's father and step-mother, Abraham and Rachel Smith, the year of arrival being 1787 according to John's later 1795 land petition (G1/7). . . located at Charloteville . . . At the outset of the journey, they had two horses, but on the road, one of these was stolen by the Indians.

THIS BRIEF BIOGRAPHY OF SERGEANT FRANK A. LAUTERBACH, THE FATHER OF ANNA AND MARGARET, WAS WRITTEN BY MARGARET C. LAUTERBACH IN 1994. HIS MEMOIRS OF WORLD WAR I FOLLOW HER BIOGRAPHY.

Looking back over time, . . . thinking about the memories we have of "our dad," my sister and I find we have more questions than we have memories. We now know the questions we should and could have asked when both our parents were still with us. It has been said, "a lost opportunity is no opportunity." True.

In a home with three female members, a wife and two daughters, one might think the one male member "wouldn't have a chance." But in our home he was, to we three, very special, and for good reason. For one thing, he was very personable and rather handsome. Also, he had a clear strong speaking voice, well modulated and was easy to talk to, plus a good listener. He was a thoughtful husband and father and a good provider. Most of all, he was a very courageous individual. I could continue, . . . but this will make it clear why he was special to us. Mom and he met while she was serving as a Lieutenant at the Naval Hospital in Pelham Bay Park, New York, in 1918, . . she was a nurse.

Again, looking back, Anna and I have agreed that we were not, as very little children, aware that "our Dad" had a disability of any kind. At some time, and at fairly early ages, we did finally become aware that his right arm was shorter than his left arm; and that there was a large scar on the inside of the upper arm and part of the forearm. Much of the muscle tissue was gone, and he could not open his hand completely. All this seemed not to handicap him in any obvious way. We began to realize that this had happened in a war in a place called France, and that he had been in the "Marines."

Sergeant Frank A. Lauterbach
United States Marine Corps
80th Company, Sixth Regiment
A.E.F., 1917-1918

Who can resist a parade? . . . . . One of the most wonderful of memories was the "grand" parade, on what was then called, Decoration Day. It was all very colorful with flags flying and bands playing and people all excited and expectant. Our village, New Hyde Park, would join with other villages and towns on Long Island at Mineola, the county seat, and parade along the main boulevard. Mom, Anna and I, would choose a good spot along the line of march anxiously waiting for our first view of the parade, and the sound of a Sousa march . . . . . Dad's favorite was, "Under the Double Eagle." It was all so exciting! And there was Daddy! He looked so fine in his uniform, better than anyone else and we were so proud of him, ... all three of us. Anna and I surely hoped in our hearts that everyone would notice him. Then he was right in front of where we stood passing on up the road and the moment was gone. But not lost. Memorable moments for two little girls.

Dad was born on November 15th, 1891 at home, Elton Street, East New York, in Brooklyn. Our grandparents had three children, John, Dora and Frank. After my grandmother died, I believe that he and my grandfather lived with Dora and her husband at 30 Canal Street, Jamaica, New York. It was from my Aunt's home that Dad left to join the Marine Corps and later to leave for France.

For two years Dad had served in the Coast Artillery Corps, local unit number 13. He procured a discharge from the C.A.C., and on the 19th of May, 1917 joined the United States Marine Corps in New York. Two friends of his joined the Corps also, Harold Carman and Gil Hodges. They were all active baseball players as semi-pros. Dad and Carman were catcher and pitcher, in that order. We think Hodges played first base. Without a second thought, the three of them made the decision to enlist for the duration, and in Dad's case maybe longer.

They left for Port Royal, South Carolina, and the Marine Base. He spoke to us of Paris Island, and Camp Lejeune. Then they were sent to Quantico*, Virginia, for "overseas training" in the tradition of the Marine Corps.

After some months past, they went north to the city of Philadelphia. There they boarded the U.S.S. Henderson bound for the city of New York and then for France. Dad said, referring to New York harbor, they "lay there for one day and one night." The next day they sailed for France. They watched "The Old Girl" in the harbor disappear. A journey begun. There was a very heavy storm on the way over and the sea was so rough that the fully loaded ship listed so badly it was feared that an untimely wave would send them to Davey Jones' locker, as Dad put it. The convoy and the ship all made it through the storm; and they did not encounter any German U-Boats the entire voyage, for which they were grateful. Fifteen days later the ship docked at St. Nazarre, France.

Dad was among the first 500 Marines to disembark and became the proud owner of a gold colored star pin. The pins were worn on their uniform sleeves and they were very proud of them; so much so that they had to eventually take them off because some unpleasant incidents occurred with other Marines, . . . who were not so blessed.

In Brigadier General A. W. Catlin's book, With the Help of God and a Few Marines . . . on page 20, he says, "We sent over one battalion of the Sixth in September; most of the others went over in October and November." Later he says, "The last battalion, under Major Holcomb, came in February, completing the Sixth Regiment of Marines." I have drawn the conclusion from this and Dad's star pin that he must have been in the first group that went over in September.

As youngsters, Anna and I were familiar with many names, songs and personalities from the First World War period. Of course we heard many names spoken by our parents, and they had Victrola and some recordings of the times. Some of the songs were sung by famous people of the day, such as John McCormack. We knew some songs well enough to sing them too! "Over There", "Tipperary", "My Buddy" and "Mademoiselle from Armentiers", plus a few others not unfamiliar to our ears. We knew names like Marshall Petain and Foch, and others such as Pershing and "Hike'em" Holcomb, and places such as Belleau Wood and Chateau-Thierry. We were told about the Lafayette Esquadrille because Dad had a friend who was an air plane mechanic who had joined this French unit. Mom and Dad had gone to see, . . . "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "What Price Glory" at the movies. We knew so much and yet so little, . . . now that we think about it.

One thing that we had "drilled" into us was, never to buy anything but a "Buddy" Poppy for Memorial Day because they were made by the Veterans. The "Vets" were having competition. He never gave to the Red Cross because they charged "the boys at the front" for coffee and donuts but the Salvation Army did not charge. In school Anna learned to recite, "In Flanders Field" and still remembers doing so. With one parent a U. S. Marine Sergeant and another a Navy Lieutenant, both having served during the years of the GREAT WAR, I suppose it is not unnatural that we feel linked to their era through more than just memory. It is to us something like an indefinable aura of feeling.

Dad had an old cigar box in which was kept various memorabilia of his. When rummaging through the closet where it was kept, invariably I/we would open it and look at the contents. In it there were old uniform buttons, chevrons, some old rifle shells, a letter opener shaped like a scimitar with Chateau-Thierry engraved on it. The blade had separated from the handle.

Then there was a bullet clip with shells in it still, and a dent. . . .and . . the star pin awarded to the first 500 of the Second Division Marines to set foot in France. As years went by it was not opened as much but was always of interest to us.

"A sound of battle is in the land, and of great destruction. Je.50:22

In France, in the vicinity of the Somme, the German Spring drive was about to commence. It started on March 21st, 1918, and it swept across the Somme and "engulfing the plains of Picardy in a huge wedge, and carrying discouragement to the hearts of the allied nations." At first, Marshall Foch was unable to check the advance. But "at last the tide was checked." The German Command tried another spot. Rheims was the "logical area." It was a sharp thrust. The date was May 27th. On they pressed passing Soissons forming a U-shaped salient all the way down to the River Marne at Chateau-Thierry; and the Paris-to-Metz Road! Paris was in danger! It was only 35 miles away from the Marne and Chateau-Thierry. The rallying cry went out, ... "They shall not pass!" "The Hun was not through." On the 1st and 2nd of June the Germans tried to find a weak spot to break through. The French had become exhausted. But the Germans were in for a surprise on June 1st.

The Second Division was west of Paris. They grew anxious to get into the battle. They wanted action. They were well prepared and ready to go. Somewhere . . . anywhere. On May 30, the call came finally. The Germans expected to sweep west of Chateau-Thierry, cross the Marne and be on its way to Paris. The Marines were all set. Where was the transportation? They waited all night. Waited and waited. At 4:00 a.m. on May 31st camions arrived. They piled in and off they went. The Sixth was the last to leave. The trucks skirted Paris. On they went. Some trucks broke down and the roads were clogged with refugees, animals, lorries. There were mixups. Orders were changed several times. More delays. The only ones going toward the front . . . were Marines. Many people in the towns along the way threw flowers and cried, and cheered. When they reached Montreuil-aux-Lions, four miles from the front, they had traveled nineteen to thirty hours in the worst conditions. Some had to walk part of the way and came in late. Few got any sleep that night, and many had not gotten any sleep until the morning of June 1st; and on that day the Marines went into line in front of Lucy-le-Bocage; it ran for six miles. At the left extreme, north of Chateau-Thierry, were the French and the 23rd Infantry, then to their right, a battalion of the Fifth. Next, in front of and past Lucy to just south of the Wood, the First Battalion of the Sixth; and joined to their right was the Second Battalion of the Sixth-- Holcomb's--extending down to the Metz to Paris road, where it met the Ninth Infantry. The Sixth Machine Gun Battalion supported the line at various points.

Belleau Wood was the "fly in the ointment." The hot spot. It was a nest of machine guns, a huge one at that. A monster problem. For the Germans, who were "holed up" in there it was a natural fortress. For the most part it was surrounded by wheat fields with patches of trees here and there, but few of those.

Sibley's Third Battalion of the Sixth was in support position south of Lucy, a mile and a half to the rear. Two Battalions of the Fifth were also in reserve. Three French regiments were in front of the Sixth, and one in front of the Battalion of the Fifth. They waited . . . . on the morning of June 1st.

The German attack started at 5:00 a.m. "The French met the attack and then fell steadily back."

The Marines waited, "steady and confident." At the right moment the Americans opened fire. Twice the Germans were stopped on the Marne, withdrew and reformed. Their third attack was the last. The Germans were broken.*

The French withdrawal had left gaps in the line and the reserves moved up and filled them. The French had suffered heavy losses for months. They were worn out from the heavy fighting, gas warfare and for the most part, disorganized and demoralized. It was impossible for them to counter attack on the next morning. The Americans took over; plugged the line and prepared themselves. The Wood was shelled with a heavy barrage. The fighting went on for several days. On both sides there were many dead and wounded. But the battle raged on . . . and on June 5th the line was shortened. On June 6th Berry's Battalion of the Fifth and Holcomb's Battalion of the Sixth was in support. At 5 p.m. the Marines were ordered to attack. Belleau Wood must be taken for strategic reasons, . . . and by the end of the day a third of the Wood was taken, and also in the town of Bouresches. On the seventh day, they were ready for another attack in the Wood and around the Wood; and across more of the wheat fields to the south. The Germans increased their resistance in the area. It was like a "hornet's nest." The hostilities lasted through the night, and the line was extended to the north past Bouresches.

* On June 1st the 23rd Infantry saw the first action. There were two strong attacks. Both were repulsed.

June 7th they were ready for another push. General Catlin said, "Between June 6th and the 12th they (Germans) were fought to a stand-still on that narrow front. . ." Then came the 8th. On this day Holcomb asked for both the chaplains. The dead needed to be buried . . . in a hurry. Each regiment had a Catholic and a Protestant chaplain. "The casualties were terrible; . . . " (Catlin)

Dad was severely wounded on the 8th day of June 1918. [see memoirs] The war raged on, but for him it was all over. Where to now? (His official records show the date to be the 11th. On page 403 in General Catlin's book it is given as the 6th!)

After more years went by, Dad loosened up a bit and told us how he had been wounded; his account being substantially the same as he described in his memoirs. He added to his story in telling it to us, that not only did a machine gunner hit him in his arm with six bullets but one had hit the bullet clip which he kept in his left uniform pocket right over his heart. That was the dent!

A Corporal took command,*. . . Dad ran down a ravine to the First Aid Station and blacked out. He said he thought he lost his arm and was afraid to look.

We do not know if the following incident happened at the First Aid Station or later. Our impression is that it happened right there. I must backtrack a little. Just before our nation entered the war, Dad had applied to become a professional fireman. He had to have a physical examination. He had a hammer toe. The powers that be required that he have it corrected! Seems ridiculous, but he did go to see a doctor about it. War was declared and off he went! . . . to war! I guess the hammer toe did not bother the Marine Corps, . . . or was it the powers that be, this time Uncle Sam.

The doctors on the scene were trying to decide what procedure to follow; should they try to save the arm or amputate immediately, when another doctor looked at him and said, "I know this young man, and we have got to save this arm because he wants to be a fireman." What a blessing in disguise was that hammer toe!! My aunt verified this episode

*"Dad had been made Field Captain while he was in France. We never asked any questions about this; it would have been nice to know more. Also, Dad, while in France had been cited for the Medal of Honor but never received it. The reason given was that all his war records were Lost. Having some recent conversations with a Marine who has researched historical data about WWI told me that our government destroyed all the records from that war [as far as the men who served!]." Margaret C. Lauterbach.

many years later when Dad was no longer with us. She also told us that because the scar on his arm had healed in such a way that it gave the appearance of an eagle with outspread wings, that she exclaimed, "The Kaiser shot an eagle right into your arm!" He had years earlier told us what she had said. And it was true. A perfect eagle. An American eagle.

When convalescing and still in France, he was sent from one hospital to another. While in a Paris hospital, he heard the infamous German cannon known as "Big Bertha." The Germans were still at it somewhere, but the Second Division had made the big difference at the vicinity of Belleau Wood. The line had been held at that point. To quote from General Catlin's book (pg.158): "The action which centered around Belleau Wood and Bouresches, and which had for its object the relieving of the menacing German pressure northwest of Chateau-Thierry, may be said to have been brought to a close on July 1st, when the men of the Ninth and Twenty Third Infantry of our Division took the town of Vaus behind a barrage of American artillery fire." Chateau-Thierry and the Bois-de-Belleau, were no longer menaced and the Metz-to-Paris Road "was relatively safe." Their work was completed; in that sector. Dad liked the French people very much and said he would fight next to a Frenchman anytime. He tried some French wine however, and got so sick that he never touched a drop of anything alcoholic again!

He was in Paris on the 4th day of July watching the French parade on the boulevard. He was in Brest on the 27th of September. Then on the first day of October he left France on the Matsonia to return to the States. He must have thought about his two buddies at that time. Of course Dad had been wounded and ended up in the hospital, out of combat. And out of a military career.* At this point I am sure he did not know what became of Hodges. Later he heard that he apparently escaped uninjured, but I believe they lost contact when Hodges moved out of state. His best friend was killed in battle, and worse yet, Dad saw it happen. It may have been the same day Dad was wounded. Carman's family was devastated. Dad took it hard.

Upon returning to this country he was sent to Pelham Bay Park, New York. In the meantime, my Mother, who had been preparing to go to France, was instead sent to Pelham Bay to assist at the hospital there because of the

* Dad never said it in so many words, but it was obvious that this would have been his choice . . . if he had one.

flu epidemic that was very bad at that time. So her trip to France had been postponed, indefinitely. She never made it to France. At the time she joined the Navy Nurse Corps she was the night supervisor at St. Luke's Hospital in Philadelphia. Prior to her leaving St. Luke's for the Navy, when she was on duty one night, she saw a huge flash of light on the horizon to the East and the whole building trembled. It was the spectacular Tom's River explosion; known at that time as "the Black Tom." Ammunition ships from Europe were constantly coming in empty to the ports in New Jersey, and going out loaded. It was conjectured that it was sabotage. It turned out it was about as close as Mom got to the actual war.

The hospital had a continuous stream of Naval personnel arriving for medical care. . . and Marines. Mom said that the Marines were the most high strung and the most difficult to handle.* But the nurses understood the situation and handled it well. One night a group of them came in very late. It was a Friday night and they were too late to get leave for the weekend. They raised the roof. She said Dad was the worst one. Being the nurse "on duty" that night she told them she would see what she could do. Which she did. They got their wish and out they went. Of course they thought she was a peach. Over time they all calmed down, and so did Dad. She thought he was terrible for a little while longer, however, because he was obstinate about clearing off the tables when asked to do so . . . but she sort of liked him despite his attitude at that time. Having been in New York awhile, Mom having become acquainted with the theatre there and restaurants, the two of them were soon "stepping out." They often walked two miles from the hospital to spend the evening dancing to the music and with the style of Irene and Vernon Castle until 1 or 2 in the morning, . . . and walked back two miles!

At a formal ceremony, Mom saw Dad receive the Croix-de-Guerre. After many years had passed by, Mom would tell me this with tenderness and pride. How wonderful for him to have met her at this particular time in his life, when he needed someone to help "heal the wounds." Dad had left from Philadelphia, and came back to find a lovely lady from Philadelphia. One could say, "Just what the doctor ordered." And a nurse too at that!

There was one problem. Dad's wounded arm was not healing. There was a decision to be made. The physicians at the Naval Hospital felt that there was nothing more that they could done for him. They thought that the inevitable

* She also said that their language was "terrible." If Dad used such language after the war it was never around us.

"drastic step" should be taken. Dad said no to that, . . . so he asked for his discharge and left the service officially.

Mom and Dad were married at this point in time and they went off to Philadelphia to see a surgeon who Mom considered the best. A Doctor Romaine. He examined the arm and took an X-ray. On the next visit he administered a local anesthetic and removed a thin piece of bone like a fine needle. It was a success. The arm healed. In France the doctors had removed two inches of bone saving his arm, and back in America the work was completed. I could end this trip along memory lane right here, but there are a few things of interest to add.

Anna and I had much to admire in our Dad. He expressed many admirable qualities, which Mom said had attracted her in spite of his "bad act" in the hospital, due to the rigors of war. He was stalwart, but tender. One incident that stands out to me, even now, occurred after we declared war again in 1941: Anna was in college and I was just finishing high school. On a day when all four of us were home, we heard the heavy sound of Army trucks going by on the main highway out to Yaphank on the east end of Long Island, so we all stopped whatever we were doing and dashed out of the house and up the street; others were doing the same thing. Several miles of trucks went by, and the "boys" in them were cheering and waving, and we were all doing the same thing. They were heading out for "overseas training." Then I heard Mom say something quietly to Dad. She was always calm. I turned and looked. He had tears in his eyes and with a soft sob he said, "They don't know, they just don't know." Mom said, "Let's go home." And we did. When we got in the house the trucks were gone on their way and it was very silent.

We saw him many times handle difficult situations, emergencies and such like with perfect ease "taking charge" and bringing "order out of chaos." Always was willing to help in any situation.

He wanted to join the Merchant Marine Service during the Second World War. Mom didn't think that was such a good idea. He did not do it. But I think he really would have liked to.

He was a good story teller and had a talent for making people burst into laughter. Even if they had already heard the story several times invariably they would want him to "tell it again."

Dad loved his country. When we were little kids, he told us in a rather dramatic fashion about the time "Teddy Roosevelt" sent the White Fleet around the world, . . . he did it to impress the world. In the telling Dad sure impressed us. He would shade his eyes with his hand and pretend he was scanning the horizon, as the people of the world would do, and say, 'What's that!"

He took us to New York City to see the fleet when the ships were anchored in the Hudson River. (Around 1934-1935)

COURAGE:By trade Dad had been a steam-fitter. Today that would be called a heating engineer, or installer. He was receiving from the Government about $48.00 a month, for an 80% disability rating. Because his records were lost in transit from France there was back pay that Dad never received. During the Hoover Administration, there was a problem about the veterans getting a bonus. This I well remember. It was unpopular with the general public. General Douglas MacArthur was called to chase the veterans out of Washington, D. C. who had gathered there to demand the bonus. Finally, they did get it. It was very little compared to the many sacrifices made during the war years. I do not know what Dad received but I do know it was not enough to make up for his "back pay," which was never given him. So the government still owed him. I mention this to show how the times had changed! Also, . . . when he went off to fight for "Uncle Sam" his employer wished him well and told him nothing would be too good for him. Dad always said that is what he got, "nothing." When he went back for a job, that is what they had for him -- nothing. But no need to worry because he was resourceful. He did some plumbing work. It was paying well at that time. He was out of work for over a year prior to Oct 29, 1929 and went from door to door selling can openers. At the Naval Hospital for therapy he had learned to make decorative pillow tops and he sold those too. Then before October 1929, he heard of a job opening at Kings Point, New York. He applied for it and became a policeman. I mention this because I think his courage in doing this was never more evident. He had been right-handed and had to learn to write with his left hand. He did so, and I might add . . . very well. He had to learn to shoot accurately with his left hand to qualify for this job, . . . no hammer toe problem! And he had to learn to ride a motorcycle too. All of these things he did. In this instance, he got veteran's preference. His time in the military and his record was taken into account by the Village Board. He never complained about having to do these things. No complaints, except the back pay! Eventually the Kings Point Police Department had patrol cars instead of motorcycles, for which Mom, Anna and I, were very grateful. It seems that he was always destined to wear a uniform, even though it was not a fireman's but a policeman's.

Around 1948-49, the Veterans" Administration was trying to cut back expenses. They called in the veterans from the First World War. Dad went in to the office in New York City. It was hard for him because he knew what they wanted to do. When he came home that afternoon, he was rather upset, but I never knew what happened to him at that time, but I did well understand they were trying to cut back on his monthly $48.00. Some time later he was called back. This time he told all of us, with tears in his eyes, that they had tried to make him open his hand, . . . which of course he could not do. So they subjected his arm and hand to electrical shocks to force him to open his hand. Needless to say, we were shocked. They never did succeed. He was never quite the same after that experience. He left us in the Fall of 1950. I always thought that he died of a broken heart.*

A GOAL REACHED

Our Mom's name . . . Before she married was Emma May Clemmens.Her sister Maggie had a son named Frank. When our parents went together to Philadelphia to see a surgeon about Dad's arm, he also met her family. Frank, Mom's nephew, was very young at the time and was excited about seeing a real submarine! He liked Dad from the start and the feeling was mutual.

Many "moons" later he would drive to New York with his Mom to visit us on Long Island. On one of his visits the two were sleeping in the upstairs bedroom when during the night the firehouse alarm broke the night hours like a tremendous wailing. Frank said to Dad, "What's that?!? Dad said, "A fire alarm!" Frank asked, as Dad was grabbing for his clothes, "Ya going?" Dad said in reply, . . ."Gotta!" ---"Come on!" They raced out of the house, ran six blocks and they jumped on the Hook and Ladder. He told Frank to hang on to the bar. Someone Said, "Who's that?" Dad said, "He's with me!" They hung on for three miles, sirens blowing, horns blasting, wind tearing at their hair . . . a wild ride. Frank and Dad came home hours later. A large old hotel in Mineola burned down. Frank never forgot it, . . . and the other Frank, my Dad, became a fireman after all! A volunteer! His nephew loved to tell that story.*

* This experience was more than I/we can describe, but I will say, speaking for myself, I never felt the same about our country again.

In the early years of 1970's my sister got a phone call from a lady who knew our Dad when he was a young baseball player. It seems that her sister had just passed on and had a few things of Dad's that she had always kept. The lady wanted us to have them, but she specially wanted to see us. We obliged. Her father had been the baseball coach for the team Dad and his friends enjoyed playing on. Romance?

Dad had wanted to get married before he left home, but she was afraid to because she feared serious injury to him. It seems everyone was afraid he would lose an arm or a leg. So he went off and . . . she was left behind.

Her sister told us that she never married; that she always loved him. She was the young lady his family wanted him to marry, so we understood. "Faint heart never won fair lady," but in this case, "faint hearted lady didn't win Marine."

WAR . . . "Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth! . . . Ja. 3:5

One incident that is hard to relate that Dad told to Anna was about the time he and some Marines saw happen . . . at a French village . . . Germans trying to entice them to engage in a confrontation; which they were not prepared for; and also were outnumbered when they were out on patrols or raiding parties.

All the people in the village met a horrible fate -- men, women, and children . . . all were murdered. It shook the Marines up who witnessed it. I don't know just when or where this happened exactly. It was one of those terrible things that happen in war. It has been truly said that this war was the end of "the age of innocence" for America . . . and some Americans too. Dad for one.

". . . be at peace among yourselves." I Th. 5:13

* The nephew was Frank Staub. He, too, was a good storyteller like our Dad. He had a dance band and played for "Supper Clubs" in Philadelphia; also was employed by the Reading Railroad. He was the youngest son of Maggie (Clemmens) Staub.

MEMOIRS OF SERGEANT FRANK A. LAUTERBACH, UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS, 80TH COMPANY, SIXTH REGIMENT, A.E.F., 1917-18.

When we left Philadelphia, we came into New York harbor. We lay there for one day and one night. I thought I would take a look at the old girl Statue of Liberty, which was my last look at her for fifteen months. Fourteen days later we pulled into St. Nazaire, France; and stayed aboard two days and then went ashore.

We got in box cars that were no bigger than a match box and away we went somewhere in France. We rode three days and nights arriving in the town of Danblane, and got off the train and pitched tents, and stayed there for the night.

The next morning we started our first hike in France to a town named Rubicourt; which was fifteen miles away. We enjoyed the hike. When we got there we were billeted in houses and barns. We lay in this town of Rubicourt for a month, drilling pretty hard, and getting new tactics of war.

Then, we used to go to the trenches to be broken into shell fire and exposure. This was alright, but when winter set in it sure was hell.

A few of the boys had their feet, ears and hands frozen; but they didn't mind that as they wanted this war to be over with.

It was on the seventeenth of March we started for the trenches. I mean the real trenches, and we got our taste of real war, and the real shell fire. We stayed in these lines the rest of the month; [and] that made us sore on Jerry [Name given to German soldier]. Everybody wanted to put a new notch in his rifle. My rifle was my best friend and I kept him pretty clean. Now those trenches were pretty muddy and full of water. We always wore hip boots, and to walk on the duck boards, which are on the bottom of the trenches, one would wear off his toe nails to get a hold on them and keep from falling in the mud. So that went on for thirteen days and nights till one night the French relieved us and we were going out for a five day rest; but I preferred staying in the first line trenches. If you call digging trenches a rest, well, "I'm through." We would dig trenches for eight hours and have sixteen off, but would have to go on guard duty at night, so you see everything wasn't peaches for us; and I don't think there is one who regrets what he did over there.

Now, a time of rest was up and back to the trenches once again. This time it was a hike. We thought we were going to Berlin, but instead we wound up in Verdun. We sure had some time there as the French put a raid over the night before, and we just came in time for the return raid. The French never told us about this so it came as a surprise for us, but I think it was just as big a surprise for Jerry. The reason I say so is from the way no man's land was spread with their dead, . . . as every shot was fired by a Marine it went to its mark.

Well our relief came and out to rest camp once more, . . . I mean digging trenches. We were out for five days and our time was up again, . . . back to the trenches. This time it was up to Houdemount, and it sure was pretty quiet there. We stayed there fourteen days. This place was just like home, only there were a few shells that came over in the morning, and the night, all the time we were up there. We hated to leave this place. We would pull off a few raiding parties and Jerry would do likewise, and we were always ready to receive them. Our time was up. Our relief came and out of the trenches as usual to our rest camp. This time, instead of digging trenches, we were getting the latest tactics of war, which the French found more successful than any.

Well our time was up on this drilling as you know how time flies when you have something new on hand. Back to the trenches again. This time it was in a different place. I think the name was Bonne Chame. This place was pretty lively for awhile, but that quieted down very soon . . . as every time Jerry would send one over he would receive ten in return.

Now I will tell you how we worked our mess men. They would go out in the morning about 4:30 a.m. for chow, and 6:00 p.m. at night. There was no dinner to it. If we would send them out for noon chow there would be a sniper who would pick them off.

We were in the trenches until Easter, and spent a very quiet day for I think there wasn't a shell fired the whole day long; but the next day you would think all hell broke loose.

Our time was up and out again we went. Out to a camp called Jolre. This time we had a real rest. Nothing to do but eat and sleep and keep your clothes clean.

Then came the day when we hiked to a town named Siren, and were there for a few days drilling eight hours. This was in May when orders came up for us to go to a town named Maries. The French evacuated this place some time that night, or early in the morning, for they had their eatables on the table, and they left all their livestock like cows, chickens, pigs, and pigeons, and plenty of wine. They left all this for Jerry to have. Instead of Jerry, the U. S. Marines used it up. The French came in this town and helped themselves to a few pigs which they killed for their galley. It wasn't long after when an aeroplane came over this town and dropped a note which was for us to stand by; and then came over the lines and came back dropping the second note which sent us on our way to Chateau-Thierry. We all got into the trucks and rode quite aways, and got off covered with dirt and dust, tired and hungry, but ready to fight for the French told us Jerry was due in Paris by June the sixteenth ready to parade on the boulevard by July 4th. This, we said could not be done as you know there are rumors in the army no matter where you go. Some would say we are going to the Somme Front, some would say somewhere else. We didn't care. We weren't over there for our health. Well anyway, we arrived at a town named Lucy, which is east of Chateau-Thierry, directly in back of Belleau Woods. We stayed there a day and a half and then moved through the town of Lucy which was gassed pretty heavily; for that morning they were shelling it for about four hours with high explosives and mustard gas. That was where I got a slight touch of gas. The north of Lucy, the 75th Company, U.S. Marines, was holding a trench and we relieved them, and took that section over. The next day being June 2nd, we lay all that day till about 4:45 p.m. We noticed the 82nd Company of Marines came up in the rear of us. The officers were standing up and I called to them to get down as there were German snipers all around. One of the officers came up to me and said there was an attack to come off that afternoon, and asked me if I knew about it. I said, "No." As I was second in command and had charge of the section west of Lucy, this report I forwarded down in the trench to the platoon commander that the 82nd was going over, and we had to follow them up. While we were talking, a French aeroplane came over and dropped two lights indicating - U.S. - . . . as that was our instructions. And that was just a minute to five. Then he dropped five lights indicating the hour to go over, and when we went over (this being the 82nd Company) we were kidding one another and some were singing. Some never even got the chance to go over. There were some snipers picked them off. From the way the machine guns were cutting loose the fellows were falling all around. We had to wait for orders to follow. I went down the trench for a platoon commander and told him what was coming off. He went down to the [company] office and on his way back a sniper shot him in the left shoulder. That left me in charge till he came back from the dressing station. While we were waiting the final word came for us to go over, and it was up to me to pass the word down the line. Now to go over the top at that time, would have cost me a number of men which I judge half of the platoon. Jerry was playing the parapet with machine gun fire and impossible for anybody to go over. You couldn't put your finger up for Jerry would take it right off. Some things came to me quick as you can't [stop to] think in a position, and you have to know or you don't know, so I passed the word up the trench to fall out in the road in front of Lucy for an assault the "four way," which was the formation of the newest attacks . . . without losing a man. So up the ravine we went and on the alert for the least move you would see, as Jerry was full of tricks. And it has always been said that two can play the game. We went a short ways and lay in this wheat field. We hear someone shout, "Don't shoot." and wondered who and what was coming off, and we all looked at once. There we saw forty-nine Jerrys being led out of the woods by a few Marines and this made my company go wild. All you could hear from everyone was, "Get those yellow mutts." When we got into the woods, we supported the 82nd Company, 6th Regiment, and relieved them, and took up a line half way in the woods. The reason we relieved the 82nd Company [was] because they sure were shot up by Jerry; but I guess they paid the price stronger than we did.

Well we were all raving to get this over with and see how many notches we could get in our rifles. I mean new ones, as we had quite a few old ones. We stayed there for a day holding the line against some awful machine gun barrages. And then finally we got relief. I mean not to go out for a rest, but to change our position, which was Belleau Woods, now known as, "Boys de Brigade les Marines." It sure was tough going all the way. There were roses for none of us as it was him or you. We had no time to worry as this job had to be over with in a short time as you could see Jerry coming over in mass formation. That was on June 6th. We went in with 8000 men strong and came out with 1800, so you can see what we were up against. Well, that night we lay in the woods and posted a few lookouts so there wouldn't be anything put over that would surprise us. The next morning, being June the 7th, we went in to get him, I mean Jerry, out of his nest. While we were advancing I was hit in the left shoulder. It was not serious. I went to the dressing station just to have it covered and to keep the dirt out, and back up the line. These machine gun nests were as thick as the hair on your head and the bullets were flying all around us, but they did not stop us. That night we dug ourselves in by digging in, I mean your own grave, as there was no one else in this hole with you. The next morning we went in again, 3:15 a.m. We took 41 machine guns and were advancing pretty fast. I saw Jerry crossing the wheat field and Pvt. Cottington said to me, "Make sure." I raised my rifle to my shoulder and was going to ease off my trigger, when Jerry and his machine gun hit me six times in the right arm, which made my arm paralyzed, . . . and I was through. We lost pretty heavily in this charge. Our Lieutenant was bumped off, and one of the Sergeants went "west" and two other Sergeants including myself took a trip to the hospital; this leaving Corporal R. Chase in charge of the Company. Later he was decorated with the D.S.C.

We arrived in the hospital in Paris. We thought we were in Paradise. And to hear a nurse speak the same language you did you thought she was an angel from heaven. Then we saw the beds with white sheets and didn't know what to make of it. We thought they were ornaments, and when they lay us in them we were off to dream land. I stayed in Paris one month; [and] seeing the Americans marching down the boulevard on July 4th, when the Jerrys would have been coming up.

Then I went to a number of hospitals and wound up in Brest on the 27th of September [1918], and stayed there till the 30th of September, and got on board the Matsonia on October 1st. And ten days later I was back in God's country; which I never thought I would see again. So here I am, never to leave her again.

The indigent and poor in the early 1800's were auctioned off by the local government to the highest bidder for their board and upkeep. It is apparent from the following that the destitute had nothing to say about arrangements. Was the system a form of slavery? For the small fee paid, the bidder would probably want some labor from them to help compensate for their keep.

This picture of Elija C. Wightman was taken about 1930 with a box camera at the home of his granddaughter, Willa Wightman. Elija lived a quarter mile west of her home in Plymouth, Carroll County, MO. It was his daily custom to check on farm duties at her father's place.

Elija was a true pioneer arriving in Missouri in the 1860's. Looking back to the days on the farm, Willa, now 81 years old [b. 16 Oct 1913], still has fond memories of her early life in the country and the experiences and events related to family members by her grandfather. She tells the fond memories of those summer evenings on their farm. The family gathered in the evening on the front lawn, kids on blankets and parents in chairs close by. As darkness covered the gently rolling prairie land of North Central Missouri, her parents would entertain them with stories of happenings in their younger years — "the olden days" we called them — but to them, they were exciting and amusing to kids who had never seen a movie, radios had not come to their area yet, and TV was farther along in the future. A warm bond of caring was formed on those summer evenings that kept their family ties close and meaningful.

An Early Adventure

WILLA WIGHTMAN HARDY
RFD # 4 BOX 154
FREDONIA, KANSAS 66736

I remember one summer morning, walking down our country road with my younger brother, Vern. We were on our way to Grandad's house. This was quite an adventure for two small children. A lark sang to us from the hay meadow as we trudged along. We passed by the wild grapevine along the south fence. I could almost smell the ripening fruit that sent out its fragrance in late August in a most tantalizing way. Mama used the fruit to make grape jelly and jam that was so good on hot biscuits on a frosty morning.

Farther along the dusty road was the low water crossing where a small stream left a wooded pasture to cross the road and finally disappear around the bend. Sometimes after a quick summer shower it would look like a small river. We stopped to watch the lazy flow of water over the rocks and pebbles, hoping to see a frog or a fish swimming by. Oh, how good it felt when we dipped our feet in that cool water, then we continued on our way.

A gentle slope led up to the main road where our mailbox sat on a post waiting patiently for the day's delivery of mail. A short distance south on the right side of road, stood a tall two-story house at the end of two rows of maple trees. The shade seemed to cool after our walk through the warm sunshine. Grandad himself came to welcome us into the big living room with its wide south window, filled with plants and flowers. I always remember him standing straight and tall, as if proud to be who he was, a man named Elija. But we always called him "Grandad". He wore a mustache, and had a certain dignity that seemed to set him apart from other men. Grandad loved the land, and he was fond of raising good horses. One day a rider going down the road caught his attention and he watched that horse until it disappeared behind the elm grove south of the barn.

When he came to Missouri in the late 1860's , he drove his team and wagon from North Henderson, Mercer County, Ill. A severe cold spell in January had left the waters of the Mississippi covered with a thick coat of ice. Driving down the river bank, he was probably saying to the horses, "If that ice will just hold up until we reach the other side, we will soon be on our way to Missouri." They did reach the other side safely, and he drove on to cross the Iowa line. Out ahead lay the gentle rolling prairie land of North Central Missouri, and the small town of Plymouth in Northwest Carroll County. A year earlier, his mother, Anna Roy and a younger brother, Horace, had settled on a farm near the land he later chose to make his home.

As we followed Grandad into the kitchen, I caught a glimpse of two very shy children peeping into the tall gold-framed mirror hanging on the north wall. In the pie safe he found a jar of sugar cookies grandma had waiting for our visit. There always seemed to be something good, like pumpkin pie, applesauce cake, or cookies waiting in that pie safe. It had a fragrance all its own. As he settled down in the big oak rocker, Grandad took a child on each knee and as we ate the cookies to the last crumb, he sometimes told us stories, or sang little rhymes to entertain us. One song we especially like was:

A sheep and hog, walkin' in the pasture,
Sheep says to hog, "walk a little faster."

His knees kept time to the rhythm of this jaunty song until we seemed to be trotting along with the sheep and the hog.

But on this particular day, he had an adventure story to tell from out of the past. The story as I remember it went like this:

Back in the early days when his mother Anna Roy was a young woman, the middle west was still virgin land. The Indians lived in the forests. They roamed the prairie lands hunting buffalo and fished in the streams and rivers. She was one of a company of pioneers who left the populated areas to build a home on the new frontier. Out in the wilderness, they had cleared the land for space to build their cabins and surrounded them with a fort for protection from unfriendly Indians. The ample supplies they had brought along eventually gave out. The nearest settlement was a long day's journey through wooded areas and over rough trails to the trading post. When the time came to go, a few of the older men stayed behind with the women and children. As the men and wagon left the fort that morning, many pairs of dark eyes watched from a hiding place in the underbrush nearby until they were out of sight. This was the chance they had waited for!

The women had kept busy through the morning with the many chores of pioneer life. The cows they had brought along had to be milked and milk stored away in a cool place. This was the day to churn the cream that had been skimmed from the milk and saved. Two big brass churns with sturdy dashers were used to "bring the butter." After the butter had been worked with a wooden paddle to remove all the whey so that the butter would stay "sweet", it was stored in a shady place. The churns were washed and set out to air after placing the dashers inside and turning them to catch the morning sun. They moved on to the next chores.

The Indians watching through the cracks between the logs had never seen brass churns. They thought the white squaws were loading cannons! One by one they quickly disappeared into the deep shadows of the forest.

For those hardy pioneers, another day would dawn. And for Great-grandmother Anna Roy, a new life awaited her coming to the gentle rolling prairie land of North Central Missouri. More adventures were to follow, but that would be another story for another day when we went to visit Grandad.

The following appeared in THE BRAYMER BEE, Braymer, Missouri on Thursday, May 16, 1974. Willa Wightman Hardy wrote this poem for the Centennial of her church.

A Tribute to My Early Church

This is the land where our family was raised,
Where in 1871 Grandfather settled to farm.
Putting down roots in the virgin soil
Where winds blow free and the sun shines warm.
I remember my feet on the sun-warmed soil,
And the kinship I had with earth at three,
As my father followed the team and plow
While bird songs flowed from shrub and tree.
Mother Nature walked by my side each day,
Unfolding the mysteries of God's plan,
Opening buds through the springtime hours;
The seeding and tilling, then harvest by man.

On Sundays we drove to this country church,
We sang the hymns and heard the prayers,
Then the pastor's message lifted our minds
From the past week's toil and daily cares.
In God's house He has planned for men
A sacred place for worship and rest,
Where Love may have its perfect way,
Inspiring His children to live their best.
Sometimes our grandmother came for us
In a buggy drawn by her black mare, Kit,
Sister and I sat beside her on the seat
For the two mile ride, treasuring every bit.

At Grandfather's knee I heard of the days
When the church wasn't here, just a village small
On the rolling prairies, where autumn winds
Drove fires through the tall brown grass each fall;
Of the day when his mother walked two miles
To a neighbor's home to attend the birth
Of a baby - doctors lived so far away,
Only coming to aid at the time of death.
Going home near the ending of that day,

She saw a prairie fire on the plain
Racing as fast as a horse could run,
Devouring the tall grass as it came.
She looked about for a place to hide
From the dreaded foe of the Pioneer,
Down near a seep was gopher's home
Where she hid her face as the flames drew near.
With cool, damp earth she had covered herself,
So the fire raced on in its ruthless ways,
Leaving great-grandmother scorched but safe,
To live through one hundred and one birthdays.

Once he told of taking a wagon and team
And driving with others to Utica one day
For lumber to build a "house of God,"
This very house where we worship and pray.
It was a social center for all to meet
For good times, or sad farewells to a friend,
Or a dear one, departed for that distant land
Where Life is eternal and joys never end.

So the tribute we bring to this century old house,
Which is more than a church, it's a gift from the Lord,
A shrine to be treasured by true sons of God,
Who gain faith and freedom believing His word.
Let it stand forever, steadfast as the rock

Of faith on which each church must stand,
A beacon of light through all the dark hours,
A haven of Peace and love in our Land.

- Willa Wightman Hardy

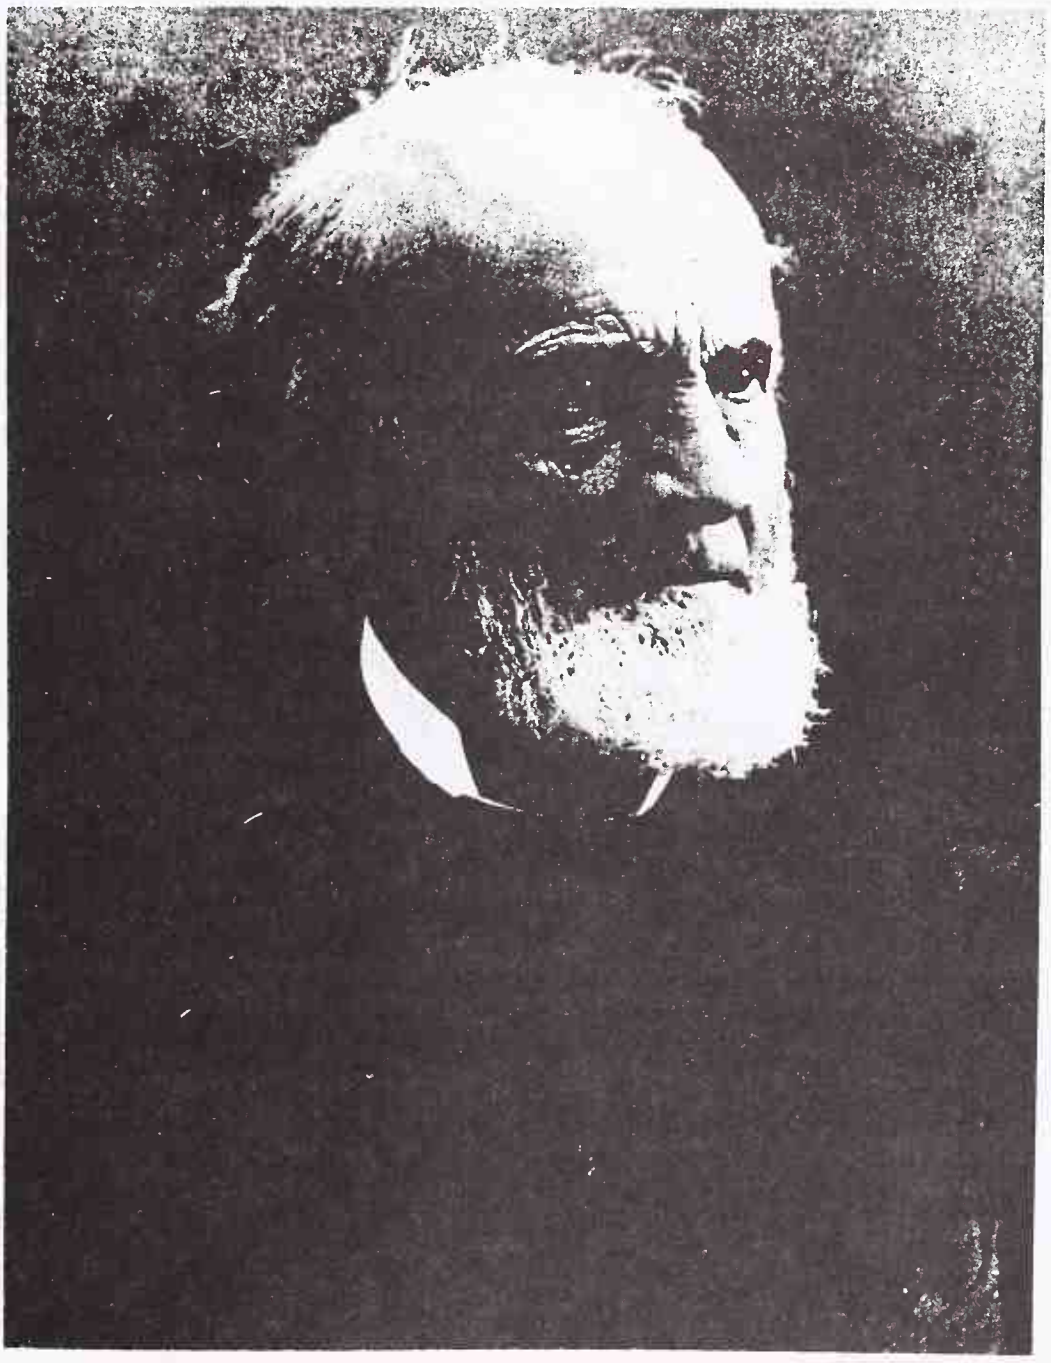
The words of St. Paul seem to add a perfect ending to this poem: "Unto Him (God) be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen."

"When I am gone, I hope it can be said of me that I plucked a thistle and planted a flower wherever I thought a flower would grow."

— Abraham Lincoln

"WIGHTMAN'S CASTLE"

Wightman's Castle was the Cuyahoga County Jail in Cleveland, Ohio. David Long[6] Wightman [see pages 152 & 238] was a sheriff of Cuyahoga County from the late 1850's until after the Civil War.



DAVID LONG[6] WIGHTMAN, 1817-1887

•Data & pictures were taken from The Town That Started the Civil War by Nat Brandt, Syracuse University Press, n.d.

The prison, a severe-looking edifice, consisted of two abutting stone sections, one slightly higher than the other, but each three stories high. Small, narrow, and barred arched windows ringed the top floor of the main section. Below them were a lesser number of tall, slender arched windows. The roofs of both buildings were crenelated, with medieval-like watch towers at the corner of the main building—hence its nickname: Wightman's Castle.

This photograph of the Oberlin martyrs was taken between May 13, 1859, after the last of the Wellington Rescuers was released, and June 1, when Charles Langston completed his sentence. All in the photograph, aside from the sheriff and jailer, are from Oberlin. Standing from left to right are Sheriff David L.[6] Wightman, jailer John B. Smith (note the keys dangling from his little finger), Richard Winsor, Simeon Bushnell, David Watson, William E. Lincoln, Charles Langston, Wilson Bruce Evans, John H. Scott, Ansel W. Lyman, Henry E. Peck, and James M. Fitch. Seated are Ralph Plumb, James Bartlett, John Watson, and Henry Evans. Jacob B. Shipherd and Orindatus S. B. Wall had been released on April 25 because of misnomers in their indictments. From the Oberlin College Archives

The incident that brought a lot of publicity to David Long Wightman and Wightman's Castle happened in Oberlin, Ohio which was very anti-slavery. A runaway slave was captured in Oberlin. The folks rose up and rescued the man from jail. The rescuers were then charged with violating the Fugitive Slave Act of 1850 and were jailed themselves in the Cuyahoga County Jail. At least they describe the sheriff as "sympathetic." The roster of inmates at the time was described by one of the rescuers as "horse thief, 1; counterfeiting 1; murder 1; drunkenness 1; assault and battery 1; grand larceny 7, petit larceny 8; burglary 3; and believing in the higher law 20.

The Oberlin Rescuers tried to make themselves at home. They were given free run of the third floor of the prison, and no restrictions were placed on the number of visitors they received. The family quarters that jailer John B. Smith turned over to them included a "commodious" twelve-by-eighteen-foot sitting room whose doors were kept "wide open" and two sizable bedrooms. They also had at their disposal three cells about the same size as the bedrooms, twelve by ten feet. Although an "old friend" of one Rescuer who visited the jail found the Rescuers "scattered" through "gloomy halls and hateful cells," the lodgings, one of Rescuers professed, were "kept as neat as they can be" and the food "is good and served with neatness which challenges our constant gratitude." Those who could afford the expense were permitted to send out to restaurants for meals. Both Sheriff Wightman and jailer Smith, the Rescuers said, were treating them with "fraternal kindness." The sheriff's daughter Lucy and Smith's wife and his sister-in-law were performing household chores for the Oberlin men.

There were, of course, inconveniences: vermin and rats, for one thing — "occasion for quicksilver and mouse traps." Moreover, there was a tendency for "bad air" to gather quickly if one of the cells was occupied by more than two persons.

The Rescuers were offered their release until their appearance in court if they would put up a bond of $1000. They turned the offer down. The Rescuers felt that they had been mistreated by the authorities who inflicted a "personal malice and a determination to humble them." They wanted to enter a most emphatic protest against the insult and legal injustice which they had suffered so they refused bond and remained in custody. It was raining on their way from court to jail. Sheriff David L. Wightman was hesitant to take them into custody without written orders from the county commissioners. This took a long time to accomplish. To rescue them from the bad weather, the sympathetic sheriff said, "Gentlemen, I open my doors to you, not as criminals, but as guests. I cannot regard you as criminals for doing only what I should do myself under similar circumstances."

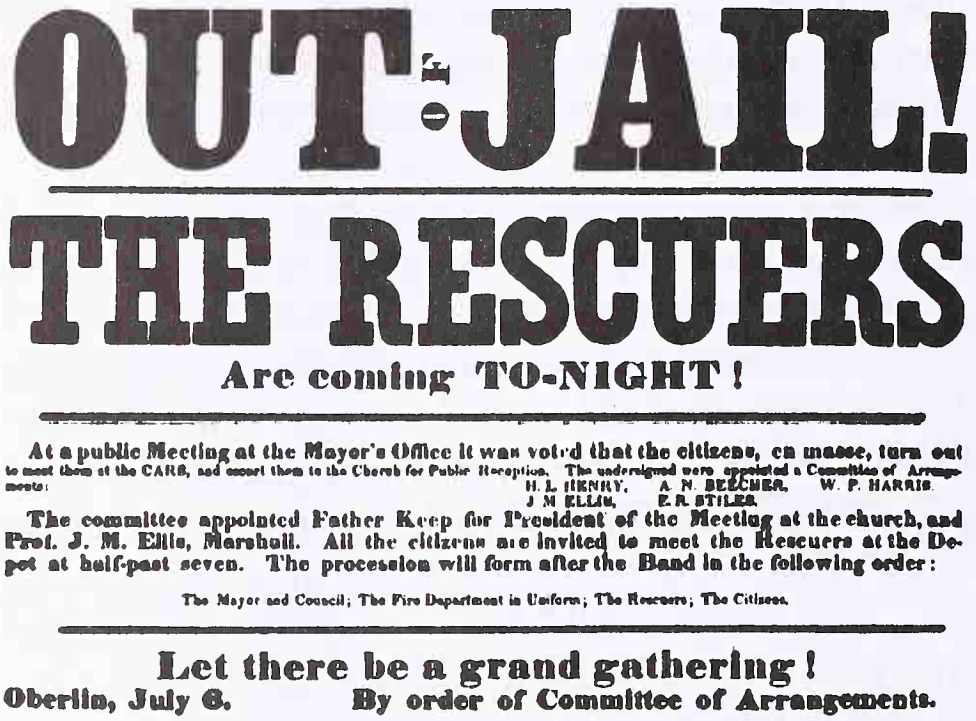
The Rescuers' imprisonment began, as might be expected, with the twenty of them gathered in prayer during their very first hour that night. The men received world wide support for their beliefs. Almost three months later, a settlement was determined and their release began with a lot of fanfare. Outside hundreds of people had gathered to escort them to the railroad station. A few blocks away, along the lakefront, a hundred cannons fired a salute. The Rescuers and their supporters marched down Superior and Water streets. In the lead was a band playing "Hail Columbia," "Hail to the Chief," and "Yankee Doodle." At the depot, there were a parting speech and three cheers as their train pulled away to return the men to Oberlin, OH.

The entire town, nearly three thousand people, was out to greet them when it came to Oberlin. As the men looked from the train, there was a "sea of heads," and everyone was cheering and shouting.

The celebration ended with speeches, even one by Sheriff Wightman who was on the train, and a resolution that was adopted to express the community's "greatly increased abhorrence of the Fugitive Slave Act" and to reaffirm its citizens' "determination that no fugitive slave shall ever be taken from Oberlin either with or without a warrant, if we have power to prevent it." The whole nation heard about the episode and Sheriff David Long[6] Wightman was definitely one of the heroes of the story. He was one of the few people involved in the whole affair who was admirable—honest, had his convictions, yet did his job professionally, knowledgeable of the law, shrewd . . . everyone seemed to respect and like him. He signed an autograph book and even received gifts: a very nice gold-headed ebony cane with an inscription. He appeared in the Rescuers group pictures. They had a great respect for him, even asking him to accompany them back to Oberlin on the train, and was given a seat on the stand with the Rescuers.



OUT TO JAIL!

JOSEPH BENEMA[9] WIGHTMAN, [from pages 346 & 649] (George S.[8], William C.[7], Samuel[6], George[5], Daniel[4], George[3], Rev. Daniel[2], George[1]), b. 11 Oct 1908 in Parkland, WA. Now retired (1975). He served with the 51st General Hospital in WWII. He worked as Island Electrician and was known as "Uncle Joe". unm. Address: 11522 Wightman Lane, P. O. "Uncle Joe" ready to roll

One of the most familiar scenes on Captiva is the sight of Santa Claus bearded "Uncle Joe" Wightman zipping along on his motorized tricycle wearing a pith helmet complete with chin strap. All of the islanders know who he is and tourists gape in astonishment as "Uncle Joe" putt putts on by. He looks the part of a living legend and that's precisely what he is. No history of Captiva Island, Florida could be complete without the Joe Wightman story. As we shall learn, "Uncle Joe's" roots go back to a time few Captivians recall. Joe Wightman is one of the few survivors of the era when Sanibel and Captiva grudgingly afforded a hard earned existence to a handful of stubborn pioneers.*

"Uncle Joe", so-called out of respect of his age and standing in the community, was born in 1908. His father, George Wightman, had relatives in Fort Myers who told him about the beauties of the islands. Joe said, "They neglected to tell him about the negatives; about the hurricanes, the lack of amenities, and the mosquitos." Ah Yes, the mosquitos. I can personally attest to the millions of those critters in the sixties.

Well, mosquitos or not, George Wightman moved here in 1917 with his family just in time to experience the great hurricane of 1919. Citrus groves were killed and a stern life became all the harder. In 1921 a second hurricane created Red Fish Pass which now separates Captiva from Upper Captiva. Joe remembers attending a school located on land now occupied by South Seas Plantation. There were 17 students in that school probably mostly Wightmans since Joe had six brothers and two sisters. One brother and one sister are presently alive in Idaho and Indiana, "Far enough away so we can't fight," Joe said with a mischievous chuckle. Joe remembers another school located at the site of Chapel By The Sea. The schoolmarm there was Capt. Finley. She insisted upon being called Capt. because she was indeed a licensed captain.

While young Joe attended school, his father George was eking out a hard earned existence for his large brood. Like many of the early settlers he was a homesteader and made his living by farming, making fish nets and fishing. "We struggled for existence." Later in the interview I asked Joe why he never married (he was a very dashing young man as evidenced by pictures he showed me. He still is nice looking when you penetrate the forest of whiskers he sports). He replied wistfully "I didn't want to marry and be guilty of bringing up kids in a hard environment. I felt we had enough poor people and didn't need anymore." Speaking of matters matrimonial in those early days, Joe estimates that there were four times as many men as women in this area in 1930. As a result there were lonely hearts clubs and variations of the mail order bride routine. Of course, today there is a dearth of men. Or so it seems.

Joe did not have a great deal of formal education and he soon became a part of the labor force. He tried fishing but "there were often more fishermen than fish." Everyone fished in those days, men and women alike. Most were commercial fishermen. The fish not consumed at the family were sold to the packing houses in the area. "Top fish" such as trout, snook, and sheephead fetched six cents a pound, jewfish, etc. caught in deeper gulf water were sold for 2-1/2 cents a pound (that's after removing heads and tails). When there weren't enough sales of fish, the fishermen gradually began to hire themselves as guides to tourists who had begun to discover the islands. People whose names are steeped in the early history of the islands became the first fishing guides; the Futches, Belton Johnson, Andy Rosse and Esperanza Woodring (a lady person) to name a few. Of course, "Uncle Joe" knows all of these people in addition to all the other early birds. Our streets are named after them, Chapin, Dickey, Binder, Rosse, Wightman. A constant and permanent reminder of Captiva's past.

"Uncle Joe," appropriately enough, lives on Wightman Lane not far from island store in the heart of Captiva. He built the first house on Wightman Lane's southeast corner. This house was completely thatched, a sort of immense hula skirt with a few apertures. Later, Joe moved into the modest home he now occupies on Wightman Lane, a home which has all the character of a unintentioned museum. Ancient fishing gear, old nets, fated photos; here is a man living amongst his memories. Although elderly in appearance, Joe is surprisingly sprightly, wiry, and endowed with almost total recall of the past. However, he admits that he has trouble remembering what he had for lunch the day before. He has a great sense of humor which I'm sure served him well during trying times which visited him aplenty. I could literally sense the flood of memories unleashed by the interview. I had trouble keeping up with his disjointed tales. He talked about postage at two cents, about the mailboats serving the post office sited at what is now Jensen's at the S-curve, going (infrequently) by boat to the mainland, the hurricanes of 1919 and of the twenties, of Mrs. Price's "American Style Hotel" (now Tween Waters Inn), about C. B. Chadwick who owned the plantation and who would buy up farm cottages, move them on his land and rent same for sixty dollars per month (this is of course the site of the present day South Seas Plantation complex).

JOE NEAR HIS THATCHED HOUSE

Back to "Uncle Joe". As a youth he took correspondence courses in electrical engineering and diesel engine maintenance. He then hired out as a "grunt" or apprentice installing electrical equipment for a local electric utility. He remembers that the cardinal rule for linemen was "no drinking until the last "hot wire" connection was made." Joe said that those who violated this rule did not live to tell about it. Because of his adherence to this rule, Joe only commenced drinking late in the day and could lay claim "to being sober half of each day." How he relished telling this story! Along came World War II and Joe went off to war in the Pacific. Three of his brothers had served in World War I and his grandpappy served with Sherman in the Civil War. "My momma didn't raise any 4-F's," said Joe with a bit of pride in his voice. After the war, Joe wired many private homes on Pine Island, Sanibel, and Captiva, retiring at the age of sixty-seven ("I worked two years overtime").

"Uncle Joe" Wightman's storehouse of memories, not unlike his home, is cluttered beyond belief. No single interview can do his story justice. One would have to have the patience of a Heinrich Schliemann or a Howard Carter to properly reconstruct the life and times of a most remarkable man whose life encompasses the era of J. B. Chadwick and the Lindberghs to the Captiva of today. When you see him on his bicycle remember the old adage, "You can't tell a book (or what's in it) by its cover."

"Uncle Joe" Wightman, a long-time islander, who has witnessed phenomenal changes to Captiva through the years, was bestowed the honor of being one of the first to cross the new bridge in the Captiva fire truck.

Dear Wade.
Dear Cousin,

Being part scotch I dis liked seeing my neighbor throw away good stationary. I stil have & will send to you one of ths papers that I cut my Picture out of.

You asked about my midel name Benema so I sepose you want my story from the very begining them folow the yellow brick read. My father wanted a name to co insid with Joeeph'e coat of many collere, So he pointed to the raimbee. and asked what do you call that ? The axcent ie on the last silebel same as in Tacoma &Yacama.

I do not remember Firet hand what hapened at parkland but the etorys teld me by older members of the famly. My older brothers tel me that I did not craul, That I bent forward at the hipe then scuted my self to where ever I wanted to go. My father said they had to be careful & get the dipers on so I would not get slivers in my botem. Thirteen years later I got working away from home and found out that there wo more toeating fried chicken than wingf and neck, when I had erned a littel mon y I thaught I would treet the famly tosomthing we dad never eaten so I baught a big bag of potato chips took them home put them in the center of the diner tabel and turned my Mother'S stumock. Then I got the story of what had hapened when I wos a babey. My uncle Ray Wightman shot a fat seal on the litel squaley river he had the hide made into a jacket (sence that time lumber jacks baught Macanaw jackets.) My Grand Pa. Richey preserved the liver to cure spring fever,(now days no one gets spring fever that keeps their vitemen level up.) back then whale oil wos as cooking oil & also to burn in lamps. While my folks told me these things we were burning Karoceen in our lamp eomthing John D. Rockeyfello had invented. At that time there wos a gold rush too the Ucon, Arich gold discovery had bin made at Dossin creek. To keep fools froma rushing in then starving to deth the Canaden Covernment pased a law alowing no prospectors to enter the taratory with less than eight hundred pounds of dry food per person & each person must have a partner sworn to take care of each other. Yacama potatoes cut with a julean blade then cooked in oil made potato chips one of the most nurishing dry foods known to sientest at that time. Potato chips cooked in whale oil becomes ransit with age, not so with seal oil. So as long as the seal oil held out my motner sold potato chips to the men preparing to go to Canaden gold rush. and the ones I braught home wos so inferer

When ever I would hurt My self as a babey One of my older sisters would say "Dont you cry or the mone bar's will come out of the woods and try to nurse you." after I grew up I asked where they got enough idea My Father said it reley haped nd to famley fiving in the park. A jury wos caled to deside what shuld be dun about it The bare wos so gentel it had not hurt the babey & wos baren & would soon go into hyburnation never to awaken. They ahvised the mother of the child to take beter care of hur brat and let nature take its course.

My uncle Ray Witnessed three huskey yung men drab a American Indian man two of them held him helpless between them while the third drenched the helpless man with a botel of whiskey. Ray Wightman reported what he seen to the nearest law inforcing office. The peple in the law offace just laughed at him and said what you witnessed wos a hasing into a club. A cupel days later the body of a rduaken indian wos found on a branch line whw ere it apeared he fell of a logen train. When the widow wos interveued she told the same old story . (Seattles relastate had made them a offer for their property hur husben had a good job in Tacoma so they did not want to sell.) But now she had to sell becaus she cant pay rising Taxes and feed hur famly by hur self. My folkes property bordered Puget Sound an the botem side and littel Squoley river on one side arele good place to live.

Home sted land wos opened im Dugles County. Home stedr Life is not easy but safer than living near Seattle where some one very apt to plan his fatel acadend.

All of what is ritten this far is remembersce of what the famly told me.

My Fathers home sted in Dugles County wos on Foster creek Six miles east of

By now you can see that I am Too poor at speling to rite good reading.

All the articels writen about me wos taken froom intervues on easet tapes.

As mild & nonexciting as my fife has bin I would leak miley tapes the story of my life on tape then not be able to sell it for enough to pay for publication and the easet tap's wasted.

Harold E. Boyce & Irene Mae Wightman

Children born in New Berlin, NY:

i. Irene Mae[10] Wightman, b. 29 Dec 1915 at her grandparents' home, Joseph & Alice (Lewis) Backus; m. 14 Oct 1937 in Oneonta, NY to Harold Ernest Boyce, b. 8 May 1914 in Colesville, NY; d. 8 Jun 1993 in Binghemton, NY; s/o Ernest Lloyd [1883-8 Jul 1970] & Lottie May (Bennett)[1886-1970] Boyce and the grandson of Sylvanus C. [1860-1940] & Jane E. (Burhyte)[1863-1893] Boyce and John Ezra [1861-1948] & Effie Ella (Graves)[1864-1945] Bennett. Irene was born and raised in New Berlin on a farm near Chanengo Lake. She attended a one room school by the lake. When she was 15, she went to Florida, NY where she went to school and worked for two women—one the principal of the school and the other a gym teacher. These were not easy years for her. She had to come home at noon from school and make lunch for her employers. She had to eat her lunch in the kitchen. The work was not what she had expected it was going to be. Indeed, seldom was she allowed to go out. Even on her prom night, she had to be home by 9:00 p.m. It was a real Cinderella story but she felt that she had made the commitment and had to follow through. After graduating from Florida Central High School, she went back to

Chenango County and lived till she was 18 and old enough to enroll in Binghamton State Hospital School of Nursing. Here is where she met Harold "Bill" Ernest Boyce who would become her husband, friend, and companion for over 56 years. This was a period of time when you could not be married and be in nurses training. After two years of going together, Bill [Harold] and Irene got married the day after her graduation. After their marriage, they lived at the Binghamton State Hospital where they both employed. Irene worked as a nurse and Bill worked as an electrician for about three years when Irene was expecting her first child, Frank. Placing the responsibility of motherhood above all else, mother left nursing to become a full time homemaker. She helped supplement the family income by babysitting until the children were in school. At that time she went to work at the Windsor School in the cafeteria. This was a job where she was always home when the children were out of school. They lived in Binghamton and Harperville for a period of time. In 1948 they moved to Windsor, NY and have resided there every since. A year after they moved to Windsor, while taking the traditional Sunday afternoon drive in the country, Bill and Irene talked about the number of poor people in the countryside. It was in the fall and they discussed how it would be nice to make Christmas special for some of the children of these poor families. This was how "White Christmas" was started in 1949 and continued until 1963 on the second floor of their garage which was a carriage barn. What started as Christmas boxes of food and toys, became a free store for the needy in the garage. Bill was the outgoing one and went to his friends, fellow Masons, churches, etc. and got contributions such as turkeys or hams from a man who owned a meat packing company, candy from a candy manufacturer, toys from department stores, and the list goes on. The Saturday before Christmas these boxes would be distributed to about 50 families. Every inch of the floor in the house would be covered with boxes. Those that could come to the house to get their box would do so. Bill, Irene and volunteers would deliver the boxes for those that could not get their presents. The rest of the year clothes would be delivered to the house, sorted by size and hung in the "garage store" which was kept unlocked at all times for people to come and get what they needed. We must remember that this was before the VOA and Salvation Army stores and was very much needed. Bill and Irene's little daughter, Rita, would complain about having to work in the unheated "store" sorting, sewing and lacing. Today she realizes how little time she spent there compared to the time her mother and father spent on the project and she is very proud of their service to the community. Back in the 1950's, the Windsor Lions Club decided to give an award to the group or individual who gave outstanding service to the community. The award went to the Windsor Volunteer Fire Department — the second year to Harold "Bill" Boyce. Today this project still exists. It has changed to meet the needs of today. It has become a joint venture by the churches and run as a used clothing store and food cupboard.

This is but one of many projects that this loving and community oriented couple have been involved in throughout their adult lives. Their daughter, Rita, is often told by people on her frequent trips home, stories of how her parents effected their lives for the better. These are usually stories that she has never heard as her parents often helped people and never mentioned it.

After retiring Bill and Irene spent a few wonderful years traveling and exploring the United States in their RV. They finally settled in Edgewater, FL where they spent their winter months — coming back to Windsor, NY in May for garden planting. Irene continues going to Edgewater in the winter where she has wonderful friends and can do her daily 6:00 a.m. walk and golfs. She does less shrimping then she has done in the past. She attends the Edgewater Methodist Church. In the summer, she is in Windsor going golfing, 6 a.m. walks, aerobic classes, and gardening. She is a member of Old Ouaganga Historical Society and the Windsor Methodist Church. Irene is a warm, loving, self-disciplined, modest, wise and fun-loving woman who is a lady to her very core.

Children born in Binghamton, Broome County, NY:

1. Frank Joseph[11] Boyce, b. 29 Jun 1941 in Binghamton, NY; m. 21 Jan 1961 at Our Lady of Lourdes, Windsor, NY to Helen Firsching. Upon graduating from Windsor High, Frank attended and graduated in 1963 from Morrisville then he attended and graduated from SUNY at Otwego in 1966. After teaching for one year, he went back to college and in 1970 he took classes at Texas A and M in mechanical engineering. His wife, Helen, graduated from Windsor in Frank's class (1959). She has her degree in chemistry from Broome Community and in her mid-thirties went back to college and received her degree in history from SUNY Binghamton. She remains actively involved with local historical societies. Frank and Helen live in Windsor where they own a company that manufactures automotive gauges. Their son, Alex John, has recently gone into partnership with them. A few years ago Frank got his pilots license.

Along with flying, his interest are vintage cars, old clocks [an interest that he shares with his wife], and flyfishing. Their only child, Alex John Boyce was born 3 Aug 1962. He is a graduate from Clarkson with a degree in computer design. He, like his father, has excellent aptitude for design engineering. Alex is engaged to be married on 17 Jun 1995 to Alicia Terry, a charming woman from New Hartford, NY.

2. Rita Kay[11] Boyce, b. 7 Mar 1943 in Binghamton, Broome County, NY; m. 2 Feb 1963 at St. Thomas Catholic Church, Binghamton, NY to Thomas Louis Campion.

Rita's story:— "I was raised from the time I was six in Windsor, NY and experienced as near a perfect childhood as I know. Small towns in the 1950 with a loving family was a world of exploration and fun with the only requirements being to go to school, which I enjoyed as it was another time to be with my friends, and to be home at 4:00 to set the table. I graduated from Windsor Central in 1960 and not being interested in academics, I chose to go to Elmira to Pauldines School of Cosmetology. I graduated from there in May of 1961 and went to work as a hairdresser. In the fall of 1961 I bought a working-partnership in a beauty shop in Windsor—the name changed to Rita Kay's. Fortunately, I was very successful; the unfortunate part of it being that I worked an average of 60 hours a week, but I was young and energetic and my parents worried about my long hours more than I did. In Feb 1962, I met my future husband, Thomas Louis Campion, son of Thomas Vaughn and Rita M. (Gomer) Campion. We were married a year later on Ground Hog Day, 2 Feb 1963. In June of that year, Tom changed jobs and we moved to Ithaca, NY. I, of course, had to sell my business, which saddened me. The following spring we moved back to Binghamton and shortly thereafter built our first home and had our wonderful son, Brian Thomas, born 15 Dec 1965 while living there. The following year after Brian's birth, Tom was transferred to Columbus, Ohio and I remained a homemaker and volunteer for the majority of the balance of my life. In 1967 we moved to Erie, PA where our beautiful daughter, Michelle Leigh was born. I became even more involved with volunteer work: was President of the Newcomers Club, sat on the Board of Directors of the YWCA (a job that I continued to do when we moved to Buffalo and to Rochester, NY), I have chaired a number of seminars particularly around women's issues, and for the last 9 years I have been the librarian for the Irondequoit Chapter NSDAR which has been my main love as we are a genealogical library open to the public. In my mid-thirties I decided I wanted to go and get my college degree. So, scared to death I enrolled at Monroe Community College first as a part-time student but after two semesters, I realized it would take forever to finish on a part-time basis. I started full time and got my A.S. in Business Administration and to my surprise graduated with honors with a 4.0 average, something that I doubt that I could achieve today. I applied and was accepted to R.I.T., Brockport, Geneseo and Cornell but after finding no scholarship money available coupled with the fact that we had just bought a cottage and I questioned whether I was really interested in going back to the work force, I decided that I was happiest following my mother's footsteps and remaining a homemaker. This I have never regretted. My interests are genealogy and New York State history, gardening, cooking (now low-fat), music, canoeing and anything else that has to do with the cottage, travel and most of all spending time with our children, family and friends. I volunteer at the DAR Genealogical Library and Meals on Wheels, and I'm a member of the DAR, Colonial Dames, ST. Thomas Episcopal Church and various historical and genealogical groups. In a few years we will be retiring and hope to spend our winters in the south first by traveling and later by selecting a spot to winter. The apple doesn't fall far from the tree.

Children:

A. Brian Thomas[12] Campion, b. 15 Dec 1965 in Binghamton, NY. He was baptized at Church of the Good Shepard Episcopal. Brian graduated from Brighton High School. He goes to school part time at Monroe Community College working on his degree in Business Administration. He is also working on an AAS degree in electronics through his work. He works for the local cable company and has a love of fiberoptics. His other interests are skiing, both water and snow, auto racing, and sports particularly football and basketball. He enjoys going to the family cottage and is still looking forward to being a homeowner so that he can "have his own garage to tinker in".

B. Michelle Leigh[12] Campion, b. 7 Oct 1968 in Erie, PA. She graduated from Brighton High School and was planning a career as a nurse. While working as a nurse's aid, she injured her back, which necessitated a career change. She is now (1994) going to school full time at Monroe Community College getting her degree in office management. She also works full time. Michelle Leigh is interested in art and music. She is quite proficient at playing the piano.

3. Gary Wayne[11] Boyce, b. 24 Nov 1946 in Binghamton, NY; m. 12 May 1973 in Binghamton, Broome Co., NY to Diane Lee Welliver (divorced in 1990). Gary graduated from Windsor Central High in 1965. He went to Delhi College until June 1966. That summer he went to work for the New York State Department of Transportation and has worked for them at various jobs since 1966. Gary is also a real estate broker and owns Boyce Realty which he works at part time. Like his brother, his main interest is and always has been cars. Frank and Gary are best friends as well as brothers and have worked as a great team. Frank oversees most of the mechanical and Gary is the driver. Gary started racing when he was 21, driving a 3/4 midget that he and Frank had built. He has since driven stocks, sports cars, formula VC and classics. He won in 1988 the New York State Road Racing Championship in the VC class as well as being voted most likeable. In 1987, as a talented carpenter, he started to build his "dream house." He lives in West Windsor, NY. He is a man that every one calls their friend. No children.

ii. Earl Russell[10] Wightman, b. 31 Jan 1918 in New Berlin, NY; m. Susan "Sue" Lamphere, b. 11 Oct 1921, d/o Henry Lamphere of Holmesville, Chenango County, NY. Earl was an auto mechanic. He owned an auto repair shop outside of Norwich until the late 1960's when the onset of blindness caused by macular degeneration forced him to sell his business and retire. During the summer when he was 14 or 15, his nephew, Frank Boyce, went to work for him. Frank grew up and got his B. S. Degree in Mechanical Engineering from Oswego. No doubt that the summer spent with his uncle sparked the beginning of Frank's interest in all things mechanical. Earl is a man of sweet and gentle ways. In disposition and in facial features, there is no mistaking that he and his sister, Irene (Wightman) Boyce were siblings. Never will you hear an unkind word from either and both have faces that are a map of smile lines, inner strength and peace. After retirement Uncle Earl and Aunt Sue moved to the city of Norwich near the downtown so that Uncle Earl is able to walk to places. Despite his disability, he has never given up on the joy of life.

In colonial New England some 200 years ago, sleigh bells were to a horse what a horn is to a car today. There were no traffic lights and a sled traveling over the snow made little or no noise, so laws required bells on sled and sleighs and horses, for safety. In Massachusetts, there was a fine of 10 shillings for sleds without bells.

EXONERATED HIS FRIEND

"It Was All My Fault," Was the Feebly Penciled Last Message of James L. Wightman, Who Accidentally Shot Himself. Thinking Only of Blame That Might Attach to Comrade.

NORWICH, Dec. 26.—When James L. Wightman and his wife left their home on Plymouth street Sunday morning and drove to the town of Plymouth for a day's outing among friends there was no hint of the tragic accident that was to enter their lives and shatter their happiness ere the night shades fell.

The day was ideal and while Mrs. Wightman went to the home of her father, John Wilkes, to spend the day her husband went rabbit hunting with William Blackman, a well-known Plymouth farmer.

About 3 o'clock in the afternoon the hunters were in the vicinity of Round pond near Kirk. They were walking about 40 rods apart when Blackman's attention was attracted by the report of his companion's gun. Looking in the direction of the sound he saw Wightman fall prostrate. By the time he could reach the side of the unfortunate man the latter was nearly unconscious.

JAMES L. WIGHTMAN

By his side lay a leaf which he had torn from his diary and written in a legible hand: "It was my own fault. James Wightman."

Blackman hurried to the home of William Cobb, the nearest farmhouse over a half-mile distant, and telephoned to Dr. T. B. Furnald, of Norwich. Securing help, he took the wounded man to the farmhouse. On the way Wightman was able to assist himself and his companion in climbing a wire fence. An automobile, driven by D. C. Doolittle, was dispatched from the Lathan garage and the injured man hurried to the Norwich Hospital. Meanwhile Wightman had lost consciousness.

In the early evening an operation was performed by Drs. Fernald, Gibson and Manley for the removal of the shot from the young man's body. He had received the full charge in his stomach. The gaping wound was believed to be fatal from the first, but later in the evening he regained consciousness and lingered for about 18 hours from the time of the accident before death intervened. The stricken wife, who came to him as soon as she learned of the accident, was with him until the last.

The accident is believed to have resulted from Wightman laying down his gun on a log over which he then may have stumbled and accidentally discharged the weapon.

The brief message he penciled on a leaf torn from his diary in order it is thought, to protect his companion from any unjust suspicion of being responsible for the shooting is all that is known of the circumstances.

The unfortunate young man was about 25 years of age and son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Wightman, of Plymouth street, with whom with his wife and little son, Lyle, he resided. Another small boy died about a year ago from accidental poisoning. Mr. Wightman formerly worked with his father at the trade of carpenter, but during the past year had had charge of the poolroom at the National Hotel.

The deceased was born in Norwich August 17, 1888. He married Lois Wilkes, of Plymouth, November 20, 1907. Besides his wife and son he is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Wightman; one brother, William Wightman; three sisters, Mrs. Martha Phetteplace, Mrs. Florence Warner, Miss Dora E. Wightman, all of Norwich, also seven nieces and one nephew.

Funeral services were held from the residence on Plymouth street on Friday afternoon, Rev. A. R. Burke officiating. Amicus Aerie of Eagles, of which deceased was a member, had charge of the burial services in Mount Hope Cemetery.

Thomas[4] Wightman [from page 75] (John[3], John[2], George[1]), b. 30 Jul 1750 in Stonington, New London Co., CT; d. 25 Apr 1824 in St. Armand Center, Quebec, Canada.

The Wightman family of Bedford, Mississquoi, Quebec, Canada had its beginning on Canadian soil on a tract of land given to Thomas, a United Empire Loyalist, in 1794. He served under General Burgoyne from 1777 to the end of the conflict. In May 1800 he presented a petition to the Governor General of Lower Canada for "he and his four children". His wife, Mary Tripp, born about 1773, had died on May 1, 1800 in St. Armand, Mississquoi, Quebec, Canada. On September 1, 1801 he received a grant of four hundred acres on Stanbridge Ridge. The farming community of Stanbridge Ridge is located 2-1/2 miles southwest of the Village of Stanbridge East, and four miles southeast of Bedford. Meantime, he purchased property at Cook's Corner, which he ran as an inn.

The Ridge Baptist Society was formed in 1809 by Thomas[4] Wightman who was a lay preacher as well as a farmer. Meetings were held in the old schoolhouse near the cemetery. Wightman was joined in 1819 by William A. Arthur, school teacher and father of Chester A. Arthur, who would later become the President of the United States.

On March 18, 1842 plans were made to construct a church building. The first Board of Trustees consisted of Thomas[6] Wightman, Lyman Johnson, Hiram Corey, Nathan Manly Blinn and Asa Martindale.

The land was purchased from Benjamin Casey for approximately $8.00 in today's currency. This land is next to the property that is now owned by André Allard. The church was paid for by popular subscription so construction was started at once. It was built of stone in the classic Revival style. The interior boasts a full gallery across the back where the choir was situated and led by Fayette Corey, who used a tuning fork in order to get the correct vocal pitch. The auditorium has numbered box pews, each with a door, and three family pews at the front of the Church where the Sunday School Classes were held. The pews and the altar were built by Thomas[4] Wightman in his workshop. The lovely coloured panes of glass in the long rectangular windows reflect the multicoloured rays of the sun.

There have been many changes over the years. The horse sheds are gone. The original lectern has been retired to the Gallery and a more modern pulpit installed. The original stained glass windows were replaced in 1988 with modern stained glass panes. The stove and pipes were removed as well as the kerosene lamps but the original iron chandeliers still hang from the ceiling and walls.

With the declining attendance in the late 1930's, it was decided to amalgamate with the Stanbridge East United Church. There is at least one annual service that is held here each summer. Sometimes there are more with baptisms, funerals, and weddings being performed.

He remarried. His second wife, Mary Austin — b. 31 Jul 1770, d. 12 Dec 1859, gave him three children. Jane Maria[5], his youngest daughter married Samuel Stanton.

His sons, William[5], [see page 124] who married Clarissa Martindale, and John[5], who married Phoebe Hungerford, lived on the farm , which was to become the birthplace of three generations.

Over the years, we see many indications of deep interest in their religion and community. They were Baptists and were greatly involved in the building of the Stone Church on the Ridge.

Lure of business and industry eventually took its toll on farming. The men gravitated towards towns and cities, some went west, some south, some to farms of their own. Carpentry was the trade that most entered.

Thomas[7], [see page 280] grandson of William, lived in Bedford. He earned his living as a carpenter and pump maker. He was known as "Pump Tom" He married Agnes Douglas. They had nine children. Three died in infancy. Of the remaining six, three remained in the Bedford area all their lives.

D. Cecil GEORGE Foster[9] Wightman, [from page 396], b. 2 Mar 1905; d. 16 Jan 1984 in Bedford, Quebec; m. 24 Nov 1926 to Liliane [Lillian] Gelineau - [catholic], b. 30 Mar 1907, d. 30 Nov 1974, d. of Wilfred Gelineau & _____ Chevalier.

Cecil George Foster[9] Wightman was very interested in genealogy. He was the one who kept a lot of the old cemeteries in good order spending many days mowing and weeding. He also repainted many stones which had become unreadable. He was a jack-of-all-trades. He owned in later years an antique store on the road to Stanbridge East. This house is a log cabin which he built. [Paulette and her son have lived there since his death. (1994)

Cecil George Foster Wightman wrote a book on the history of the area but as of today [1994], it has not been published. It is in the hands of Stacey — the reason for not publishing — it had to be translated into French. This is because of the French problem in Quebec. Cecil was the only one in the family to have a copy of GEORGE WIGHTMAN AND DESCENDANTS by Mary Whitman. Mary Whitman drove into Bedford in a limousine and asked him if he wanted a copy before it went to print. He was the only one in family with any interest so was given a copy which is still in the hands of the family [1994].

Eastern Star and were in it till they both died. She was Worthy Matron many times and was said to have been a very good one with ingenious items for decorations, themes, etc. We kids were often jealous of their association with O.E.S. as they gave so much time to them.

Mom had a "nack" of making $20 out of ten. It was her savings that paid for Madeline's 4 trips to California — last one in 1966 with Art and kids. Their hope was that they would love it too and move out there when Sonny did, but Art was afraid that he would not be able to get work there and support his family. She moved back to Greenfield Park the year after Edward died as she was too lonely and he was buried in Bedford and that way she could visit his grave. She lived with Madeline and family for 3 years then moved to Bedford to her own house on Elizabeth St, then to an apartment on Fortin St. She traveled to California a few times and to Doll's in Florida a few times.

Reginald was the one who looked after "Gannie" [Vera] to her demise. The rest of the family signed the old Wightman house over to him in return for his looking after his mother. In his will, he left everything — including house and contents — to Garth Larose. Garth later sold it to Pete as he wanted it to remain in George Wightman's family.

Reginald died alone in the house & was found by Garth Larose.

THOUGHTS ON RETIREMENT

When your value has diminished
And you're not the man you were,
When your cohorts all say, "Hey, There,"
Where they used to call you "Sir."

When the fleeting conversation
Always seems to pass you by,
Or you didn't get the word,
And when you wonder why—

Then it's time to hang your suit up
And give 'way to younger men,
There is someone to replace you
And he's waiting to begin.

When they call you the "Old Soldier,"
Or put "Mister" by your name,
Then you'll know you've put your time in
And it's time to leave the game.

You may run a little further
But you'll never run as fast,
So make a graceful exit
And become part of the past.

—Charles H. Roberts

She died 14 Jul 1982.

Excerpts from Chauncey's journal up to 1920: "In 1907 the family (of Silas Edward Wightman) left Watertown, South Dakota in the late spring by emigrant train, via the Great Northern Railway for Portland, Oregon. We were my father and mother, Hazel, Parks, myself, Edward and Katherine. The trip took six or seven days with the train having coal-oil lamps and a coal burning engine . . . . . In Portland mother bought a rooming house on Morrison St. near 12th and she managed it . . . . . In 1909 my father persuaded mother to buy a farm at Orchards, Washington. I learned to swim in an irrigation ditch nearby . . . . . In 1914 we moved to Holland St. in Portland and I went to Jefferson High School and played on the baseball and football teams . . . . . In 1916 I ran away and signed on a British full-rigged ship, the "Holt M. Hill" bound for Japan and England . . . . . When World War I was declared both Parks and I enlisted. Upon enlisting my mother protested that I was not of age. The adjutant informed my mother that I had taken an oath and, therefore, I would be subject to a charge of perjury! . . . . . August 1919 . . . . . sent back for discharge . . . to Portland. I started the fall term of my third year at Stanford but ran out of money . . . . . I had applied for the Foreign Service and just at that time the mail brought a letter offering me a job in the Foreign Service in Lima, Peru."

He retired after a career in the Sugar Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Mining Sales, Newspaper Correspondent, and U. S. Foreign Service. His shop kept him always busy making fine furniture and grandfather clocks until his death in 1980. He lived at 1987 Kakela Drive, Honolulu, HI. *[Hazel Emeline Wightman was alleged to have talked Lida C. The massacres of the Protestant Huguenots in 16th-century France, the Inquisition, the witchcraft hysteria in Europe and America; all were acts of zealotry stemming from acknowledgment that a particular world of right thinking was endangered. The most fervid period of witch hunts during the late 17th century was also the time when science was posing its most terrifying challenges to establish religious thought.

The witchcraft scare led to the deaths of 19 people in Salem (now Danvers), Mass., in 1692.

*Palma's surname was originally Nelistune. Her father changed it because there were so many Nelistunes living in this one area in Wisconsin that legal records and the mail were always confused. He took the name of the farm they lived on, the Holm farm, and added 'es' to the name. Palma Holmes is of Norwegian ancestry.

During her research for the D.A.R, Dorothy discovered that during the Revolutionary War General Washington made his winter headquarters in a home at Valley Forge, which was built by an Updike. She visited the home which was very similar to our Colonial two story homes of today. She was told that twenty-seven of the General's aides stayed with him, mostly transcribing documents and orders, "as of course, there were no copy machines in those days." Also during this time, Captain Valentine[3] Wightman commandeered an English ship, renaming it the "Lady Washington." It saw service in the Revolution as did Valentine[3] Wightman.

Chris is a graduate of University of Minnesota with a degree in English. His mother writes: "Chris is 6' with a fair complexion, slightly wavy brown hair and blue eyes. Chris was born in the Fairbanks Hospital at the time the first Polio epidemic patients were brought to the hospital. The hospital was run by some very efficient nuns. The little nun came in and told me to take the baby home to Healy as it was too dangerous to keep him in the hospital. It was a long painful ride on the Alaskan Railway back to Healy, where we were living, two days after he was born. We both cried a lot.

"Chris has a year and one half of law school. In the mean time, he is a successful painting contractor in Orange County, California. He will finish law school someday.

"Chris played football for the University of Minnesota. It was wonderful. We had a good time going to the games. He was a walk on. The big linebackers on scholarships were played more. It was crying time and a crying shame.

I remember Laura Whitman, Chris' grandmother would say, 'My grandfather, John Norton (Whitman) was a carpenter so I came by it naturally'. In 1950 'Laura' had the hired men on the farm move two of her chicken coops into Pelican Rapids, Minnesota. She had them put together and made a liveable home. She did a lot of work herself. Child:

1. Kelly Meghan[12] Conner, b. 1 Jul 1980.

iii. Susan Jane[11] Conner, b. 10 Jul 1952; m. Pradipta Shome. Susan is a high school graduate of Interlocken, MI, has a B.A. Degree from Indiana University at Bloomington, IN and a Master's Degree from University of Texas. She is now working on her Doctorate in Violin. Susan does private teaching of the violin and worked professional with the Denver Symphony Orchestra, National Symphony and Washington D.C. area freelance, Central City Opera, Central City, CO as first violin, Colorado Music Festival, Austin Symphony Orchestra as first violin, St Paul Opera Company Orchestra, St. Paul, MN, Minnesota Orchestra and was a frequent player on series concerts, tours, and chamber orchestra concerts.

An anecdote in Susan's life is told by her mother: "I must tell you about the Dahl violin. When Sue was twelve years old, we went to downtown Minneapolis to Mr. Dahls' studio to look at the better violins. Mathias Dahl copied the Stradivarius to the very best of his ability. He never thought that he could duplicate the sound as he thought the sound came from the treatment of the wood and the varnish. He was very happy that Susan could have one of his violins.

"Violins require a life time of repair, new bridges, re-haired bows, so over the years we were in his studio a lot. It was fun to visit with the teachers and do a little gossiping about the symphony. The studio was in a very old building and we needed to trudge up a long flight of stairs to arrive at the 'inner-sanctum'.

"I would go with Susan to the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Leopold Sipe. Mr. Sipe demonstrated three violins. One was his Stradivarius, one of a make I can't remember and one a Dahl violin. The audience could not differentiate between the Stradivarius and the Dahl violin! We both went home a little taller and could not wait to tell Mr. Dahl.

"One day when Susan was home from college I went up to her room and she was crying. She had just learned that Mr. Dahl had passed away. We reminisced about the good times we had spent in his studio. Susan would play for him as he himself was not a violinist. He had made over three hundred violins and cellos.

"Mr. Dahl had a very special violin that he would bring out of a locked cabinet and permit Susan to play on it. I suspected that it was a Stradivarius. After he died, I asked the family what happened to the 'Stradivarius' and I was told there was not a 'Strad' in his collection and that all the violins were sold in total. Oh my . . . maybe his wife did not know."

iv. Kathleen Ann[11] Conner, b. 27 Jun 1955 in Minneapolis, MN. She is 5'7" with black eyes and chestnut hair. She is a single parent with twins. Kathleen sings professionally. Her daughter was named after the girl in the opera Carmen. Her mother writes: "Kathleen was doing her thing in the 1960s. Always the star, always in controversial situations. She could 'whip' a horse and come home with the ribbons.

She is a lover of animals and all things that hurt! One morning I hear this 'coo . . coo' coming from our lower lever spare bedroom. I went to investigate and found that she had two doves cloistered. Needless to say the feathers had literally hit the fan.

"She graduated with honors from Hopkins High School in Hopkins, Minnesota. She went on to Cal Arts in California and after a succession of interruptions graduated from UCLA with a major in Voice. I think that she had teaching in mind, but that saga hasn't been written yet. In return for all the trouble, we have two beautiful twin grandchildren, a boy and a girl.

"When she was very little, we would comment on her dark eyes. One day she said, 'I know my eyes are dark because when I close my eyes it's dark'.

"As I am preparing this information, a crises has taken place. Kathleen's thoroughbred has injected sand from the boarding place and is in the horse hospital. The poor horse could still die. I'm very happy her father saved his money as it has been very expensive." Address: 2023Chatham Drive, Palmdale, CA 93550.

v. Julie Kay[11] Conner, b. 13 Nov 1959 in Robbinsdale, MN; m. on 26 Jun 1993 in Santa Fee, NM to Gary Whitlock, s/o James Monroe & Audrey (Lee) Whitlock. She has brown eyes and light brown hair.

Her mother writes: "Julie is our 'baby' and she was the baby to the rest of the family also. She was always a free spirit and a good student. She led the cheerleaders at Burnsville High and had natural athletic ability. Very forthright in all her relationships, she couldn't understand why people didn't behave and do what was right. I think of her as a wonderful mix of beauty and intelligence. It was tough for her growing up as she was tall. It wasn't as popular to be tall at the time and we just couldn't find jeans long enough.

"I bought her a Steinway upright piano in 1967. Mr. Conner made me take it back and we bought a lesser though lovely piano for much less money. Julie wanted to play without practicing and I could see that wasn't going to happen. I had to give it up. Julie and her friends would ski the 'Buck Hill' ski hill as much as weather would permit. It was fashionable to have a season pass.

"Julie designed her way through U.C.L.A. and has a nice career in graphic design. She has shown a lot of style and class and her forthright and honest approach to things is something to be admired.

"I must talk to her, however, as she recently talked to her Dad and said 'is the D.A.R. such a big deal?' In all the time our children were growing up and in school, I don't recall ever seeing a history book.

"Julie lives in Santa Fe happily married to Gary Whitlock. Working together they design and promote the 'Yes to Life' program helping young children to learn self-esteem. Address: 433 Calle La Pay, Sante Fe, New Mexico 87501.

It is deemed necessary to write the pedigree of certain animals, and register them, is not the record of a worthy family much more advisable?

PERSPECTIVE

"I am standing on the seashore. A ship spreads her sails to the morning breeze and starts for the ocean. I stand watching her until she fades on the horizon, and someone at my side says, 'She is gone!"

"Gone where? The loss of sight is in me, not in her. Just at the moment when someone says, 'She is gone,' there are others who are watching her coming. Other voices take up the glad shout, 'Here she comes!'

"And that is dying."

Wightman's Diners

on the Boston Post Road, Route No. 1 South Attleboro, Mass.

The article consisted of eleven pictures illustrating the interior with views of kitchen, refrigerator, various dining areas, and the amenities offered. The following captions appeared under various pictures.

The name Wightman always suggests quality food, courteous service and moderate prices. It's a by-word with those who appreciate good food.

The late Elmer C. Wightman* started the 1st Wightman's Diner in 1923 . . specializing in chicken sandwiches and exerting every energy to assure patrons that "to dine at Wightman's is to dine well."

Everyone who ate at Wightman's became a loyal supporter and returned with friends at regular intervals. Patronage has gradually and steadily increased each year.

John C. Wightman, present owner and son of the founder continues the operations of the diners on the same basic principles which his father established and cherished.

Today's menu embraces everything imaginable in good food . . . all meats and vegetables are delivered fresh daily . . . biscuits, and pastries are baked on the premises. Wightman's famous food is winning more friends daily throughout New England . . . many customers have formed the habit of eating here regularly.

Wightman specializes in Sea Food — Clams, Oysters, Quahaugs, Fish, Chowders, Full course Shore Dinners, Live Broiled Lobsters.

Olde Mexico Room — redesigned to capture the true Mexican atmosphere even as is evident in the costumes of the orchestra and waiters. Choicest of foods and liquors, finest dance floor surface and unusual floor show.

Banquet Hall — available for large or small parties

Kitchen — one of the largest, contains the newest cooking equipment

Dinette — a new dining room for those who desire prompt table service.

Bakery — all our pies, pastries, biscuits are baked on the premises in modern ovens. Only the finest ingredients are used by experienced bakers.

Diner on Route No. 1A, Rumford, R.I. Est. 1927. A handy place to stop on your way to or from the races or when you are traveling on Route 1A. Also — Frankford Stand - Wightman's famous Frankfurts served to your liking. Also the home of delicious pop corn, Downy Doughnuts and fried clams.

(Her middle name, May, is the correct spelling). Harold was a letter carrier in Owosso, MI for about 36 years. He graduated from Corunna High School and went to work making a living for himself and his mother (his father had died when Harold was 17). His many years as a letter carrier for the Post Office ensured that he could feed his family during the Great Depression.

Ethel May Hunt [see page 1880 for more pictures] attended Rush Township School through the eighth grade. Then she was tutored and tested in order to attend Bethany Bible College in Bethany, West Virginia. Sometime during her study at Bethany Bible College, she met Harold. After two years at the college, she left to marry. She was involved in Owosso women's organizations, and especially with the Matinee Musicale, which brought a community concert series to the town.

In their later years, the couple enjoyed the outdoors and in their later years owned a cottage on Manistee Lake in Kalkaska County. Harold, especially, liked to fish. They also enjoyed gardening together — and music. Harold headed a very musical family who received their only music education from Dr. Herbert Johnson of Flint, MI. He directed the Owosso First Church of Christ choir and the First Methodist Church choir in Corunna. He had a marvelous bass voice and he and his wife were involved in the Flint Choral Union. Ethel Hunt Whitman had a beautiful contralto and taught piano and voice in her later years.

His work was published by the Standard Publishing Company in Cincinnati and Fred Waring Publishing Company in Pennsylvania. For twenty years, he directed a volunteer choir, "Voices of Joy," comprised of choir members from different churches in the Joplin area. We believe that he directed a community band around 1978 and after. While he directed the choir, he did bookkeeping for the Holiday Inn and also performed in their piano lounge. On a more recent note, the Choir Director at the National Presbyterian Church in Washington D. C. had contacted Donald about some music that was out of print. The director wants to use the music at a conference in Switzerland. For relaxation Don paints in oil.

They moved to Braymer before 1909. They were one of the first families in Braymer to own an automobile, a 1909 Buick. Many stories resulted from Fred's family's early automobile experiences, especially with a 1912 Ford. Cars were not heated and the weather changed quickly. Frequently the creeks were up and the telephone lines were down stranding travelers without communication. Fred and Jessie provided strong parental leadership which included active family involvement in Braymer's Methodist church. Fred's practical spiritual leadership in his home was illustrated by a story related by Wilma (as an adolescent very conscious of her peers). Wilma was embarrassed when her friends arrived at her house on the way to school. Her family had not completed their morning devotions. With her friends looking on, Fred circled the seated family, praying for each member, placing his hand on his or her bowed head. Fred became the manager and, later, the president of the Braymer Bank, a national bank and the only bank in Braymer to remain open during the Great Depression. Fred was widely respected in Braymer and the surrounding area. Over time he had the responsibility of managing the estates of many of the area's prominent citizens. Through the Great Depression years, Fred's gracious leadership and wise business sense enabled many to survive the Depression rather than losing all they had. Jessie died in Braymer in 1949 when she was 72. When Fred was 82, he went to Europe with a group from Braymer to attend a Rotary International gathering. When he was 84, he retired from the bank, sold his home and everything in it, and moved to a retirement facility in Claremont, CA. He lived there until he died in 1973 at the age of 97.

iii. Hugh Emerson[9] Wightman, [see pages 347, 391 & 686].

iv. Wilma Roy[9] Wightman, [see pages 391 & 687] b. 26 Jan 1911 in Braymer, MO; d. 27 Jan 1995 in Santa Maria, CA; m. on 20 Sep 1941 in Asbury Park, NJ to Clark B. Smith, b. 25 May 1907 in Cawker City, KS, s/o Mathew Allen Smith and Emily Shorb Bemis. Wilma enjoyed many activities growing up, including playing the piano. Occasionally, she played the piano at the Methodist church which her family attended. Sometimes she and her brother Hugh, who played the saxophone and violin, provided special music for the church's services. Wilma recalled many adventures when teenagers drove their families' early automobiles to neighboring towns to visit their friends. Sudden rains would cause creeks to swell and flood the roads. Frequently drivers would have to walk to nearby farm houses late at night to beg for help from a farmer with a team of horses. Getting stuck in the mud was so common that no one questioned that excuse for getting home hours late. Wilma graduated from high school in Braymer in 1929. During the Great Depression of the 1930's, Wilma had a variety of experiences. She took secretarial training at Sarachon Hooley in Kansas City, MO. Then she took secretarial job earning $15, and, later, $10.50 per week. These jobs ended when the companies failed. Wilma returned to Braymer to live at home and work in her father's bank. In Braymer, she took a post-high school course in teaching which certified her to teach in country schools. She attended Baker University in Baldwin, KS, 1931-32. At Baker, Wilma joined Delta Delta Delta social sorority. Brothers Noel[9] and Gene[9] also attended Baker where their father was on the Board of Trustees. Wilma enjoyed college but decided to return to work. Wilma moved back to Kansas City to live with her sister Lois and work at the office of Lois's husband, Lee Smith, at Bruce Dodson Insurance Company. Wilma enjoyed traveling. In 1934, she took a month's vacation to California. Her transportation was a newly popular "pleasure trip" on a bus with two drivers, one of whom described the scenery and history along the way. In Los Angeles, she visited with her brother Lee[9] who showed her the sights. In 1935, she took a trip to Yellowstone Park. Wilma and seven other Braymer girls saved their money and traveled together in one car. Carrying food from home, cooking equipment, and one change of clothing each, they completed the week's trip of 1500 miles spending about $9.50 per person. The summer of 1936, Wilma and her brother Gene drove to New York City with her brother-in-law Lee Smith. Lee, Lois, and Sam had moved to New York to open an office for Lee's company. Wilma had a number of unexpected treats in New York, including her dream of dancing at the Waldorf Astoria. When Lee's secretary left, Wilma was hired to work for the rest of the summer in the heart of the Wall Street financial district. In 1935, Wilma entered the University of Missouri, Columbia, MO, where her brother Noel was attending. She studied Home Economics and worked to earn money for school, room, and board under a New Deal program. Wilma received her Bachelors from the University of Missouri in 1938, completing her Master of Arts in Education degree from Columbia University, NYC in 1941. During the years 1938-41 she taught home economics at Stephens College in Columbia, MO. In the summer of 1941, Wilma traveled to Allentown, NJ to visit Mid and Charlie Basinger. Charlie was a reserve officer in the U. S. Army Signal Corps who had been called to active duty. Through the Basingers, Wilma met another officer, Clark B. (Bemis) Smith. Wilma and Clark enjoyed many weekends together and soon planned to marry in September. Clark had graduated from the Wichita University, KS, in 1929 with a B.A. in Business Administration. Clark had been called to active duty as an officer in the Signal Corps at the beginning of World War II. Wilma and Clark lived in NJ, VA, PA, and NH while Clark was stationed at the Pentagon, Grenier Field, NH, Iceland, and the Phillippines. In 1945, the Smiths moved to Kansas City, MO, where they lived until 1960. In Kansas City, Clark worked as an engineer for KMBC radio, and later, television station. Clark and Wilma were actively involved with their sons at Second Presbyterian Church. In addition, they provided leadership and many hours of service in school and Boy Scout activities. In 1960, the Smiths moved to Santa Maria, CA, when Clark took a job with General Dynamics televising Atlas ICBM launches from Vandenberg AFB. Later, Clark returned to radio as an owner/engineer of station KXFM in Santa Maria. In Santa Maria, Wilma and Clark served in many capacities in the First Presbyterian, First Christian, and Santa Maria Community Churches. They sponsored Junior High and Senior High groups and served on the deacon and elder boards. Between 1961-72, Wilma worked as a substitute teacher in high school and junior high school. Residence: 619 Ranch, Santa Maria, CA 93454.

RECORDS of the WIGHTMAN FAMILY
(Also spelt WEIGHTMAN, WHITEMAN, and WHITMAN)

In the course of the preparation of these Records a careful search has been made through the MSS., books and papers at the British Museum, Public Record Office and the Registries of Wills, &c. In addition to this, the Wightman entries in the registers of various parishes throughout the country and in London have been extracted, the results of which have been embodied in the detailed pedigree which completes the last chapter of the Book. The records of the Heralds have been copied and included. Photographs of ancient family residences and monuments have been obtained at considerable expense, and reproduced as illustrations.

The Book is divided into fifteen chapters, and the whole forms a quarto volume printed on a good quality paper, and tastefully bound. The illustrations of arms have been printed on a paper suitable for hand-colouring, and metals and tinctures are indicated.

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTORY, ORIGIN OF THE SURNAME, ETC.

This book of records of the Wightman family does not claim to be a complete history, but is a collection of records gathered from MSS., books, and other papers found at the British Museum and Public Records Office, with extracts from Wills in the Principal and other Registries, and entries taken from registers of parishes in London and other parts of the country. The last chapter contains a detailed pedigree put together with the aid of the information to be found in the earlier chapters, and this should prove of considerable assistance to any members of the family desirous of proving their descent from the Thomas Wightman of Burbage, near Hinckley, who was living in the reign of Richard II.

It has been the endeavour of the compiler to place before the readers of this book all information procurable from the sources above-mentioned, likely to be of interest, together with illustrations and descriptions of ancient residences of the family. Monuments and Monumental Brasses in churches in these neighbourhoods are items of very great interest. Those illustrated are excellent examples of their period, and were found in a splendid state of preservation. It is to be regretted that some of the tombstones referred to in Nicholl's History of Leicestershire, are not now to be found in the churches of that County, they, apparently having been removed or destroyed during the work of church restoration. In Burbage Church where many of the family have been interred during the 15th & 16th centuries, and probably earlier, the only monument remaining is the alabaster slab to Richard Wightman and his two wives, and it is some compensation for the loss of a few of minor importance, to find that this monument, which was in danger of destruction, in its original position on the floor has been lifted and is now in safety on the wall of the church. Unfortunately, this was not done before some detail had become illegible; but it has not suffered to any great extent.

It has also been the endeavor of the compiler to give some account of ancestors who have occupied prominent positions in the country, or who for other reasons, have become celebrated, and a chapter has therefore been devoted to short biographies of these persons.

Another subject which is naturally one of importance, is the origin of the surname, which is a somewhat peculiar one, and the writer has endeavoured in the course of his researches, to collect evidence, which might either support or contradict the legends as to the origins of the surname "Wightman" and of the motto "A Wight man never wanted a weapon", which are probably known to most of the name.

It is said, on the one hand, that the Wightman family is of Saxon origin, and on the other, that they are descended from the famous Robert de Beaumont, Earl of Leicester (son of Robert Bossu), who drew his sword on King Henry II, saying "A Wightman never wanted a weapon", on the historic occasion when the famous Earl took part with King Henry's sons rebellion against their father.

So far as the first legend goes, no evidence is forthcoming in support of the Saxon origin of the family. In a 12th century roll relating to the County of Suffolk and the parish of Alteston (consolidated with the parish of Trimley in 1362) the following entry is found "Land of Roger Bigot, 2 freemen with 11 acres Turbin and Ulwin. A church with 5 acres. Ralph de Turlivill holds 3 freemen Leverich, Almer and Raven with 30 acres and half an acre meadow and Wihtman holds a freeman named Ulrich with 12 acres".

Some of the names in this record are certainly Saxon, but there is nothing to show that the said "Wihtman" is of that origin any more than Roger Bigot or Ralph de Turlivill.

This record is the earliest which has been met with where the surname (?) appears.

With the other legend, on the contrary, many things have been met with which, although furnishing no definite proof, or showing the relationship, if any, to the celebrated Earl, would yet appear much stronger than mere coincidences. We find that less than a century after the death of the Earl, from the Inquisition held on the estate of one Wyghtman, he died seized of lands formerly owned by the Earl of Leicester. Robert de Beaumont, Earl of Leicester, was surnamed "Blanchmains" or "Wyghtmains" owing, it is said, to his having most beautifully shaped white hands. It will be observed (vide Chapter II) that, in the commission of oyer and terminer of 18th February 1326, Thomas Whiteman is there referred to as "de Beaumont".

It is recorded of the said Earl, that he granted the Manor of Wyken, in the County of Leicester - he is there referred to as "Blanchmains" - to the Monastery of Nuneaton, in the County of Warwick which was founded by his wife Amica, daughter of the Earl of Montfort. Strangely enough, this Manor, after the dissolution of the Monasteries, was acquired by William Wightman, one of the Burbage family. Again, from the Inquisitions held after the death of other members of the family, in Leicester and neighboring counties, they are found to have owned other estates once part of this Earldom. The estates of Robert de Beaumont came largely through the great house of de Grantmeisnil, and the relationship with the house of Hastings is to be found recorded in most histories of the period. It is possible that the connection is to be found through this family, and it is of importance to observe here the great similarity between the arms of Hastings and those of Wightman. The principal and only change on the shield in each case is a "Maunch" or sleeve. In the Hastings coat the tincture of the field is different, but variations in tinctures were, in the early days of Heraldry in England, very common in occurrence. One of the leading authorities on this subject, "Cussans", may usefully be quoted here; he says, "Paternal arms, being, by right, borne by all the sons of a family, it is highly important that there should be some means by which the various members may be distinguished...

In the early days of Heraldry, differences were effected by a variety of arbitrary arrangements, - such as changing tinctures of the Coat, ... by these methods, a Coat of Arms, after a few generations frequently became so changed in appearance as to lose all resemblance to the original, much confusion and uncertainty were necessarily engendered ...

It was not until the 14th century that cadency, as the word is now understood, became general."

Robert de Bellomont was the first Earl of Leicester after the Conquest but was not so made until the time of Henry I. He was of kindred to the Conqueror and was highly esteemed by him, as a person who, through his gallant conduct in the battle of Hastings, had greatly contributed to the success of that memorable day.

He was the son of Roger de Bellomont by Adelina, daughter of Waleran and sister and heir to Hugh, Earl of Mellent in Normandy. He married Isabel, daughter of Hugh, Earl of Vermandois, and died in the 18th year of the reign of Henry I, leaving 3 sons and at least 4 daughters. Waleran, this eldest became Earl of Mellent; Robert (twin with Waleran) became second Earl of Leicester. Hugh, the third son (surnamed "Pauper"), became Earl of Bedford. Of the daughters, Elizabeth married Gilbert Strongbow, Earl of Pembroke, Adeline married Hugh de Montfort, and two others married respectively Hugh de Novo, and William Lovell.

Robert, second Earl of Leicester, was surnamed "Bossu". He adhered to Henry I against his brother, Curthose, and supported Henry II against King Steven. He was made Justice of England. He married Amica, daughter of Ralph de Warr, Earl of Norfolk, and died in 1167. He left one son, who succeeded to the Earldom, and two daughters.

Robert, third Earl of Leicester, as before stated, was surnamed "Blanchmains", or "Wytmains". He rebelled in 1173 against the King, and the town of Leicester was laid waste. He was, however, received again into favor four years later and his lands restored to him. At the Coronation of Richard I, he bore the Sword of State.

He was in the Crusade and is said to have there contracted leprosy, and by some to this ascribed the surname "Wytmains". He married Petronil, daughter of Hugh de Grantmeisnil, and thereby acquired the Honor of Hinckley and the Stewardship of England. He died and was buried at Duras, in Greece, in 1190, leaving three sons (Robert, Roger, & William), and two daughters (Amicia & Margaret).

Robert, surnamed "Fitzparnel" (in reference to his mother Petronil or Parnel), attended Robert I in the Holy Land, and was created Earl of Leicester in 1191. He died sans issue, when the Earldom passed to Simon de Montfort, husband to his sister Amicia.

Roger, the second son of "Wytmains" became Bishop of St. Andrew's in Scotland. William, the third and youngest son (said to have been a leper) founded the Hospital of St. Leonard's in Leicester, and was ancestor of the great family of the Dukes of Hamilton in Scotland.

At this point the subject must be left, and perhaps at some future date some member of the Wightman family may find an opportunity to conduct researches with a view to getting at the root of the question. It seems very probable that evidence would be forthcoming to give additional support to the legend.

The earliest spelling of the name, as has already been stated, is perhaps "Wihtman". Somewhat later, we find the ancestors of Wightman of Leicester as "Wyghtman", and in this form it is pretty general during the 14th century. In the parish registers the entries are variously "Wightman", "Whiteman", "Weightman", and "Whitman", according to the pronunciation of the particular locality, or parish priest; and it is by no means uncommon to find, at quite short intervals, the same person referred to by all four spellings.

Hugh Wightman, son of the William Wightman referred to in the Visitations of Nottingham as aged 2 years in 1614 (see Chapter III) is described on his memorial tablet as "Whiteman", whilst on the tablet to his son is the surname "Weightman".

In Chapter II will be found many interesting records of William Wyghtman, the spigurnel of Chancery (sealer of the King's writs), a dignity which during the 12th and 13th centuries, and perhaps later, was hereditary, descending through the family of Bohun for some generations.

It is not clear at what time the first of the family settled in Scotland, but probably this was not later than the 14th century. We have a difference of "argent" (silver) for "or" (gold) in the Scottish arms. Except for the counterchanging, these arms are identical with those of one branch of the house of Hastings and probably the difference, as in certain known cases, is denoting the children of a second marriage.

Many of the Wightman family have from time to time settled in London, and the younger members of the Leicestershire families have spread into the neighboring counties of Nottingham, Warwick, Stafford, Derby, Lincoln, York, Norfolk, and Suffolk; and it should not prove a very difficult task to trace descent to Wightman of Burbage, with the aid of the parish register and will extracts. The first settlement in Norfolk would appear to have been in association with the Purefoys, and in Suffolk, in the Framlingham district, with relatives of the Reynolds family.

In a later chapter some notes of early settlers in the New World will be found and it is believed that those now resident in Australia and New Zealand were tempted by the gold discoveries, to break away from their native country.

The compiler is indebted to many members of the family for help and information, without which, the detailed pedigree found in Chapter XV, on which a great deal of time has been spent, would be much less complete.

CHAPTER VI.

William Wightman - Receiver of South Wales.

William Wightman was probably born at Coventry, Co. Warwick as, from reference to the Heralds recorded printed in Chapter 3 his father is set down as Richard Wightman of that town and his mother Elizabeth, daughter of Humphrey Purcell of Wolverhampton, Co. Stafford. In the year 1555 he was M.P. for Caermarthen and in 1558/9 for the Ludgershall borough of Wiltshire.

It is possible that he is also the William Wightman "generosus" recorded as M.P. for Midhurst, Co. Sussex in 1547. His grandfather Thomas Wightman was of the Burbage stock and married Agnes Evard of Burbage. William Wightman was Treasurer of the Army in France in the year 1557 and a prominent Justice for the County of Middlesex in later life.

His name is found under many different spellings. "Weyghtman" and "Wyghtman" in the Parliamentary Records and as "Whiteman" in the register of Burials at Harrow-on-the-Hill.

He married before July 1556 Awdrey Dering, by whom he had 2 daughters: Frances, who married Robert Stransham, and Elizabeth, wife of John, 2nd son of Sir John Pryce of Porteham, Co. Hereford.

Little of his relatives is to be gleaned from a perusal of his will, a genealogical extract of which appears in another chapter. He was buried early in the year 1580 at Harrow-on-the-Hill, and his wife, who survived him, was also buried there in 1598. The beautiful brass placed in the church subsequently was probably executed by order of his daughter who re-married George Brome of Halton, Co. Oxford. The preface to the translation of the first 9 books of Virgil's Aeneid, which is produced in this book forms interesting reading.

In those days, notwithstanding the existence of the right to armorial bearings, it was frequently the case that new grants of arms were applied for by persons of prominence and a grant of arms was made to William Wightman. These appear on the Brass at Harrow and are recorded in the visitation of the County of Middlesex.

Richard Wightman, brother to William, died in 1556 and he mentions William's 2 daughters in his will "To my brodur Wyllm ij daughters iijs iiijd a piece."

The following extracts have been taken from the Acts of the Privy Council of the period:

At Westminster the VIII of December 1552.

A warrant to Sir John Williams to pay Mr. Rochester, the Lady Waries servant, and the monny delyvered to his handes by William Wightman, the summe of £557 to be by hym bestowed abowt the reparacions of certaine of the sayd Lady Waries landes decayed by the rage of the water this last yere.

At Westminster the 14th of December 1552.

A warrant to William Wightman, Receyvour Generall of South Wales, to pay unto Richard Hutton, the Kinges Majesties Master Carpinter in Sulley, the summe of £100 to be by hym employed uppon payment of suche woorkmen as hath wrought under his charge.

At Havering of the Bower, 2 Augt 1576.

A letter to William Wightman, Thomas Hignte, Thomas Hewes, and Christopher Rithe, Justices of the Peace in the countie of Middlesex or any two of them, that where one Edmunde Smith of Rislippe hath intertained one Edward Benet, a lewde fellowe and divers others to assalt Mr. Asshebie, and a warrant of the Peace directed against the said Smith, he did not only withstand the same but gave very contemptuous speche against the aucthoritie of the Justice, and misused the cunstable in woordes, they be required to call the said Smith before them and to charge him to bring the said Benet with him, and to examine the matter, binding Smith and his servantes to kepe the peace aganst Mr. Asshebie and his servantes, and also if the said Benet shall be founde so lewde a fellowe as is declared, to take order with him for his good behaviour hereafter according to the lawes of the realme in that case provided.

15 December 1577, Hampton Court.

A letter to Mr. Nudigate referring to the enquiry commited to their Lordships the Master of the Rolles, Mr. Fisher and Mr. Wightman, three of the Justices of the Peace in the countie of Middlesex touching a great robbrie latelie don nighe unto Wolverhampton upon a goldsmith of Lichfielde called Nicholas collins by divers evil and lewde persons.

22nd February 1577-8.

A letter to the 3 justices in the same robbery and to join with them the Attorney Generall.

Edward Wightman, (Fanatic).

The last person burned for heresy in England was Edward Wightman. He is said to have been of the same family as the William Wightman who acquired in 1544 the Manor of Wykin in the parish of Hinckley, Co. Leicester.

The writ for his execution describes him as "of the parish of Burton-on-Trent, Staffordshire."

Edward Wightman became notorious for his anabaptist views through his utterances made at the meetings of the Puritan Divines held in his district. The Puritans hoped to induce him by argument to alter his opinions but without success.

He hastened his end by presenting a petition to King James I, at Royston in March 1611. King James finding that Edward Wightman was from the Diocese of Coventry and Lichfield, sent him to Westminster to Richard Neale with the command to commit him to the gatehouse and to take examinations of his several opinions under his own hand. Neale, William Laud, and others held conferences from April to the middle of October with Edward Wightman who became very obstinate and "every day more blasphemous." King James then ordered his removal to Lichfield for trial in the Consistory Court there. This trial lasted for "sundry days" and finally sentence was pronounced on 14th December 1611 by Neale in the cathedral. He commenced with "a sermon and confutation of Wightman's blasphemies against the Trinity."

The writ for his execution dated 9th March 1611-12 was directed to the Sheriff of Lichfield who had Edward Wightman brought to the stake. The fire scorched him a little and he cried out that he would recant upon which the crowd rushed forward and saved him. A form of recantation was then presented to him which he there read and professed before he was unchained from the stake. He was then remitted to prison and some days later brought before the Consistory Court to recant in legal form. This he declined to do and is said to have blasphemed more audaciously than before. The writ was therefore renewed "sent down and executed" and "he died blaspheming."

Sir William Wightman, 1784-1863.

Sir William Wightman was an eminent Judge of the Queen's Bench to which post he was promoted on the resignation of Mr. Justice Littledale. He was Knighted by Queen Victoria on 28th April 1841. It is said that he came of an old Dumfrieshire family. His father, William Wightman, gent., was of St.Clements, London where Sir William was born in 1784. If reference is made to the extracts from Alumni Oxonfenses his career at that University will be observed. He was elected to a Michel Exhibition at Queen's College on 21st June 1801 and from 1859 to 1863 he was an Honorary Fellow of his College.

Entering Lincoln's Inn on 31st January 1804 he practiced for some years as a special pleader and was called to the Bar in 1821. In 1830 he transferred to the Inner Temple and joined the Northern Circuit. He was recognised as an exceptionally sound and clear headed lawyer and for some years held the appointment of Junior Counsel to the Treasury.

When the commission was formed in 1830 on the practice of the Common Law Courts he was elected a member and also in 1833 in connection with the proposal for a Criminal Law Digest.

He acted as Counsel in many celebrated cases particularly in connection with the prosecutions arising out of the Bristol Riots. Being a man of a very modest and retiring disposition he was little known outside his profession.

Whilst on circuit at York on 9th December 1863 he was seized with an attack of apoplexy and died next day. He had married (in 1819) a daughter of Mr. James Baird of Lasswade, near Edinburgh.

In the chapter "Fragmenta Genealogica" several other references to Sir William will be found and his portrait from the original at Queen's College, Oxford, is among the illustrations [found in the original edition of this book].

Prebendary Wightman.

Charles Edward Leopold Wightman was born at Saltford, Co. Somerset, on 11th March 1816. His father was Rector there. His mother was the daughter of the Russian Prince Gagarine - a prince of one of the highest and most ancient houses of Russia - who came to England in the suite of the Empress Catherine, visited Oxford, was there made L.L.D. & married a young English lady. As the result of this marriage the prince was disinherited.

The English Royal Family took a deep interest in the daughter of the Russian prince. She became the companion and friend of Princess Charlotte and on the birth of her son, the Princess was one of the sponsors.

Edward, Duke of Kent & Prince Leopold, afterwards King of the Belgians, were the Godfathers.

The interest shewn in the prosperity of the Wightmans will be recognised by a perusal of the letters of the Princess Charlotte which appear in another portion of this book.

Mr. Wightman was educated at Lincoln College Oxford, where he took his B.A. in 1838. He was ordained in 1839 to his father's curacy of Saltford. In 1841, he became Vicar of St. Alkmunds. In 1842, he married Julia Bainbrigge, 3rd daughter of Lieut. Col. William James of the Honorable East India Company. Her mother was 3rd daughter of Lieut. General Sir Dyson Marshall, K.C.B. Mr. Wightman died on 16th January 1896.

Mrs. Julia Bainbrigge Wightman is the author of a number of works and both she and her husband were most staunch supporters and workers in the interests of the temperance party. An account of their lives and works is written by the Revd. Charles Bullock of Eastbourne.

Bells at Hedon -- Wightman the Bellfounder.

From the Gentleman's Magazine, 16th October 1817.

A special commission for the trial of certain persons charged with High Treason was this day opened at Derby of which our limits at present permit us to give but a brief account. The number of prisoners arraigned was 35. The trial of Jeremiah Brandreth, the leader of the rioters (called the "Nottingham Captain") occupied the Court 3 days, when a verdict of "Guilty" was rendered. William Turner and Isaac Ludlam the elder, were severally found guilty, the former on the 5th day and the latter on the 7th.

The trial of George Weightman a youth of about 22 years of age commenced on the 7th day, and he was also found guilty, but the Jury strongly recommended him to mercy. A proposition was then made by the Crown Solicitor to the agents of the prisoners, that "mercy should be extended to such as remained to be tried," on condition of their withdrawing their plea of "not guilty". This proposition was accepted, the evidence being so clear that no doubt could be entertained of their convictions and on the following day 19 of the prisoners (including W. Weightman, J. Weightman Junr., J. Weightman, and T. Weightman) were brought up, an abstract of the indictment was read over to them, and the attorney general in a most feeling and impressive speech, declined offering evidence, the jury consequently returned a verdict of "not guilty". They were then suitably addressed by the Judge. The Solicitor General said many of the prisoners had been apprehended under the warrant of the coroner who sat on the body of Mrs. Hepsworth's servant a verdict of wilful murder being found against them. Such verdict having all the operative force of an indictment, he begged to announce that it was not his intention to proceed on it. The prisoners who had pleaded guilty were now conducted into Court, and after them came Brandreth, Isaac Ludlam the elder, William Turner, and George Weightman whose approach was announced by the clanking of their chains which echoed through the silent Hall in a horried manner.

The prisoners were asked by Mr. Justice Lowndes for any reason why judgement should not be pronounced. Brandreth, W. Turner, and Isaac Ludlam pleaded for mercy.

George Weightman said nothing. The judge, in pronouncing sentence, said .... you have been tried by several juries .... are guilty of high treason .... Your insurrection thank God, did not last long, but while it continued it was marked with violence, and with the murder of an innocent young man, who did not offer the least provocation. Your object was to wade through the blood of your countrymen to extinguish the law and constitutions of the Country and to substitute for the liberty of your fellow subjects anarchy and the most complete ruin .... I cannot trust myself to say more (here his Lordship was deeply affected) but must pass upon you the awful sentence of the Law.

N.B. - It is difficult from the account to make out the exact reason for the rising or the grounds for complaints. The object appears to have been to seize the town of Nottingham. The riot did not last long and the arrests would appear to have been made on the fourth day. The account of the execution covers some pages - hanging, drawing & quartering, and displaying to the public gaze.

George Weightman did not appear to have been executed and probably got the benefit of the Jury's recommendation.

Letter from the Princess Charlotte to Mrs. Eliza Wightman.

Postmark London 12th March 1814, Franked by J. Sarum (Bishop of Salisbury) and directed to Mrs. Wightman, Salford, Bath.

Mr. Dear Eliza,

It is really too provoking the many applications I made for a living should all prove fruitless. With regard to the one you now consult me about I can give no opinion as I truly think the only thing to be done is for W to read over the letter again and way over the advantages and disadvanges and then to decide. If against I can assure you I will as I have done continue to look out and prince will apply to the Minister if nothing else will do. As many is the thing that lapses to him of 400 a year that would be very acceptable to you I am sure and if I should chance to get anything that will suit you must not mind the distance as to sacrifice one little evil for a greater is not much. I will take care and you shall begin to look about for lodgings that they be ready for you about the second week in April as you fix that period. I am glad you will be in town then for many reasons. Your own health first wh. I am anxious and interested about and then as you will then come in time to see my jewels &c., wh. are ordering for an event you may have seen in the papers and wh. I presume will take place in May devoutly I hope it may be put off for a longer time if possible as I am far from wishing it. What is done for convenience or per force only cannot be very agreeable. Your drives I fear will be interrupted by this 2nd edition of dreadful weather. I am glad you go out I am sure exercise gently and air will be of much use. I languish quite for Sir William Knightons advice for you. He has quite (cut out) poor Madame Arm (torn off) and brought her fine healthy boy wh. she had no chance of till I insisted upon her seeing him. Do you know at Edin, a Mr. McKenzie I hear much of him from a friend of mine who is at the Court Hotel there and likes him much and his family of sensitive plants as they are called from his being called "The Man of Feeling".

God Bless You.

Yours ever truly,

CHARLOTTE

N.B. - At the time this letter was written the Princess Charlotte would be about 18 years of age.

CHAPTER X.

WIGHTMAN RESIDENCES & ESTATES.

BOZUN'S MANOR, OVINGTON, CO. NORFOLK.

In 1558 Thomas Townsend, of Testerton, Esqre., released to John Bozun, of Studdey, Esqre., who in 1568 conveyed to Will Smith, and he in 1579 to Richard Wightman and Thomas Lingwood. The said Richard Wightman settled it on himself and wife for life and remainder to his son Robert Wightman. Robert Wightman conveyed it to his brother Nicholas Wightman, who purchased the other moiety of Agatha Lingwood, and in 1606 Nicholas sold it to Robert Wright.

ANSLEY MANOR, CO. WARWICK.

The Manor was purchased in the first year of Queen Elizabeth (1558) by George Wightman, of Elmesthorpe, Co. Leicester, gent., who mortgaged same to William Glover, citizen and dyer, of London, who in the 43rd year of the same reign obtained a release from Thomas Wightman, of Burbage, gent., son and heir of the said George Wightman, of all his right and title therein.

LONG LAWFORD MANOR, CO. WARWICK.

John Green, of Westminster, and Ralph Hall, scrivener, of London, had the Manor in the seventh year of Edward VI, from whom Thomas Wightman got it, and he conveyed it in the fourth year of Queen

THE MANORS OF NEWBOLD SUPER AVON AND COSFORD, CO. WARWICK.

THE MANOR OF HINCKLEY.

Was purchased on 2nd November, 1604, by Thomas Wightman, jointly with Thomas Sansome, Thomas Smith, and Ralph Robinson.

Thomas Wightman appears to have lived in the Manor House for some years prior to this purchase, and probably at the time when the drawing was made (1598), which is reproduced here from an engraving in an early edition of Nicholl's History.

THE OLD GRANGE, BURBAGE, CO. LEICESTER.

The illustration is from a recent photograph, and it will be observed that the house is not in an excellent state of preservation. This was the home of the Wightman family in Burbage, and it shews evidence of at one time having been a much larger structure. Probably portions which have been in a very bad state have been pulled down from time to time. The house is now occupied by the local carrier, and is well cared for within, where the old panelling and timbered ceilings bear evidence to its old-time splendours. A road runs past the front of the house, where, no doubt, once was a paddlock; and on the other side of the road are modern structures, which somewhat take away from the appearance of the Old Grange. Perhaps when the Wightman owner erected the Moat House, which, as will be seen from the illustration (taken from an engraving in Nicholl's History), is a much more modern residence, he neglected the old homestead, and, like the memorials to the family in the old church, much which should have carefully been preserved, owing to historic association with the family, has gradually decayed and disappeared.

(From the Inquisition post-mortem of Sir Thomas Leigh, Knt., taken at the Guildhall, 24th October 1572).

Long before the death of said Thomas Leigh, Thomas Wightman and Elizabeth, his wife, were seized in the demesne, as of fee, of the said Manors, and of 10 messuages, 6 barns, 1 windmill, 10 orchards, 10 gardens, 200 acres of land, 40 acres of meadow, 10 acres of pasture, 100 acres of furze and heath, and so seized they on the 10th day of February, 4 Elizabeth, enfeoffed thereof the said Sir Thomas Leigh and Alice, his wife, to hold to them and their heirs for ever.

WYKEN HALL, HINCKLEY, CO. LEICESTER.

The illustration of this Mansion, now a farm-house, is taken from an engraving in Nicholl's History. The Manor of Wyken was acquired after the dissolution of the monasteries by William Wightman. From the ancient records it would appear that a substantial portion, if not the whole, was tenanted for some time before the purchase, by William Wightman and his ancestors. It is recorded that on 12th May 1543, a Licence was granted to Edward Fenes, Lord Clynton and Saye, and Robert Tyrwhitt, to alienate 2 messuages and lands in Wyken, Co. Leicester, in the tenures of Wyghtman and Robert Byrchley to the said William and the heirs of his body. Many extracts of wills of the members of the family living at Wyken, and also Visitation Records will be found in other chapters. It is not shewn when this property went out of the family, but this appears to have been towards the end of the seventeenth century.

NETHER HALL, EAST STOKE, CO. NOTTS.

This Manor was purchased by Richard Wightman whose monument (illustrated) is to be found in Burbage Church; and from the detailed pedigree, in Chapter XV, it will be seen that the estate remained in the family for many generations. The descendants of this branch changed the spelling of the name to Weightman, and in some instances to Whiteman.

THE DEDICATION TO SIR NICHOLAS BACON.

THE NINE FYRST BOOKES OF THE ENEIDOS OF VIRGIL CONVERTED INTO ENGLISHE VEARSE BY THOMAS PHAER DOCTOUR OF PHISIKE WITH SO MUCHE OF THE TENTH BOOKE AS SINCE HIS DEATH COULDE BE FOUNDE IN IMPERFIT PAPERS AT HIS HOUSE IN KILGARRAN FOREST IN PENBROKESHYRE.

Printed at London by
1562.

To the right honorable an my verye goode Lorde Sir Nicholas Bacon, Knyght, Lord Keeper of the Great Seale of England.

Whilest God gaue lyfe and health to Thomas Phaer Doctour of Phisike I had some moore frendly familiarite with him then moste men had. In which respect he did before his last departing downe from hence into Penbrokeshire of speciall trust leave in my handes the eyght and nyanth bookes of Virgilles Eneidos by him translated into Englyshe verse, And promised to use all hys possible diligence for the finishing of the other three bookes then utterly unbegonne; Declarynge moreouer unto me that his voerye mynde and purpose was not onely to prynt the former part agayne for reformation of some faultes ouerstypt upon the first impression but also hauyng finished the same to dedicate the whole worke unto your Lordship. whome he tooke for speciall Patrone and frendly fauorer both of hym and hys doings. Albeit it pleased God to preuent hym by death so as he coulde not make an ende therof yet since he lyked to commit these two bookes unto my handes onely. The farce of death shall not he able through my defaulte to make hys worke dye: Neither shall hys good intent be frustrat in makynge your Lordship the Patrone therof For as his frend that honoureth thys his vertuous acte, I do herewith present unto your honour the first seuen bookes newly prynted, the two latter bookes as I had them with hys owne hande roughly written, not thoroughly corected, and so much of the tenth booke as upon diligent searche emongest his secrete writynges at his house in Kilgarron foreste in Penbrokeshire myselfe could fynde or come by. Marie it should appeare by the too uerses in the ende of this booke by hym translated upon his death bed the very day before he dyed, which he sent unto me subscribed with his left hand (the use of the righte hande beying taken away through the hurte whereof he dyed) that he had so much further, as those verses be in Virgilles tenth booke. But whether it were so or not so there can no certeintie be knowen: because there is or can no more be founde then here is prynted I do therefore on his behalfe most humbly beseche your Lordship to receive this his trauaile with favour into your protection; whereby it shall not onely be the more welcome to the worlde, but also be defended from the blame whiche perfectlye pullysshed as it woulde have been yf lyfe had lasted him so long as he might have had the ouerlooking of it him selfe. The God of all goodnesse guyde yo with his continuall grace.

From London the VI of July 1562.

Your Lordshippes humbly

CHAPTER XIII.

PETITION TO KING GEORGE II.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty,

The Humble Petition of Robert Wightman, Assignee of Alexander Wightman, and the Executors of Walter and Erancis Graingers, late British Merchants in Stockholm, owners of the ship Angel Galley, Robert Daling, Master.

Sheweth,

That in April one thousand seven hundred and eighteen the said ship was loaded at Gottenberg on account of the said Owners by Henry Maister, merchant there, with one hundred and twenty-five ship poundes of Iron, bound for Amsterdam amounting to sixty-two thousand seven hundred and seventy-nine Swedish money.

That the said ship on her passage from Gottenberg to Amsterdam was boarded by Captain Lenwyck, commander of the Pomerania, man of war, carried to Christiana, there unloaded in June one thousand seven hundred and eighteen and the cargo sold publickly to the highest bidder on the 3rd of July in the said year for his Danish Majesty's behoof.

That the said Captain Daling protested against this procedure in a publick and solemn manner by calling five British ship masters then at Christiana to be witnesses to his protest, and causing them to draw up and sign a certificate thereof, all the publick notaries having refused to act for him against his Danish Majesty their sovereign and being put in possession of his ship after she was unloaded he soon thereafter returned to Sweden in place of proceeding in his intended voyage.

That on the humble application of the said Messrs. Wightman and Graingers to his late Majesty letters of recommendation were obtained from the Secretary of State to Lord Polworth, then Envoy and to the Court of Denmark by whose means an order was procured from the College of Anmiralty at Copenhagen dated 12th of November one thousand seven hundred and eighteen declaring not only the said ship, but also the said cargo free and ordering Captain Daling to be put in possession of both but before that order was obtained, the cargo was sold in Christiana beforementioned and the money raised from it applied to his Danish Majesty's use.

That in the year 1721, 1727 and 1730 letters of recommendation were given by the then Secretaries of state to the Lords Polworth and Glenorchy successively whose instances and solicitations for satisfaction had no manner of effect.

That if Captain Lenwyck had not violently carried the said ship to Christiana the cargo would have produced at Amsterdam after payment of all charges, the neat sum of 24811-2 Hollands money which according to the then course of exchange amounts in English money to £2297-7-3 which with the money truly expended on the occasion of the ships capture in Norway, at London, and Copenhagen and the interest of both these sums at the rate of 6 per cent per annum, being the legal interest both in Sweden and Denmark as stated in the claim hereunto annexed amounts to five thousand six hundred and forty-six pounds two shillings and Sixpence (£5646-2-6) without stating anything for the damages which arose from the breaking of the Ships Voyage, and the ruin of Alexander Wightman and his Family amounting to a much greater sum than the claim now made.

That the original voucher of the several facts set forth in the claim annexed are in the hands of Mr. Titley, the British resident at the Court of Denmark.

That notwithstanding these repeated applications at the Court of Copenhagen your petitioner has not been able to recover any satisfaction nor has he any hopes of obtaining Justice if some part of the Subsidy payable to the Crown of Denmark is not stopped until satisfaction is made him.

May it therefore please your Majesty,
To take your Petitioners case under consideration and to give such directions for securing the debt due to him from the Crown of Denmark as to your Majesty in your great goodness shall seem fit.

And your petitioner shall ever pray, etc.

His accomplishments as a scholar were only outshone by his devotedness to ministerial Duty, affectionate solicitude for his parishioners, and universal benevolence.

MARS INSURRECTION.

1714 -

To suppress the Jacobites, a number of half-pay officers, selected chiefly from the Scots Regiments, were directed, under General Wightman, to be ready to head the local volunteers or other troops who might be enrolled for the defence of the Government.

1715 -

The Army in Scotland consisted of but four reduced regiments of foot, of 257 men each, and four regiments of Dragoons, each consisting of not quite 200 men. With this meagre force General Wightman took up his position at Stirling - a disposition happily chosen, and productive of important influence on the war. This occupation served completely to separate the Northern insurgents from their friends in the South.

19 October 1715 -

Mackintosh marched from Seton towards the Border. He was followed by Wightman, with a detachment from Edinbro, who, keeping up the system of the campaign, did no more than seize a few stragglers, and take possession of Seton Castle, with such spoils as the Highlanders chose to leave behind them.

MAJOR GENERAL WIGHTMAN AND THE JACOBITE ATTEMPT OF 1719.

NOTES from the Letter Book of the Duke of Ormande, the Stuart Papers in the Library at Windsor, General Arthur Dillon's Papers at Ditchley, etc.

On the 5th of June Major General Wightman, who had commanded part of Argyle's troops at Sheriffmuir, marched from Inverness with a force of about 850 Infantry, besides 120 Dragoons and some 130 Highlanders, and a battery of four Cohorn Mortars. He marched to the head of Loch Ness, where he halted for a day, and thence over Glenmoriston towards Kintail.

It was decided to await General Wightman's attack in Glensheil. Wightman calls his camping ground on the 9th "Strathlong" (probably Strathloan), about a mile west of Clunie Inn.

The Battle of Glenshiel lasted some three hours. The English loss (i.e., Hanoverians), was 21 men killed and 121 wounded. On the night after the battle the Jacobite chief decided that the Spanish should surrender and Highlanders disperse. Accordingly next morning the Spanish Commander delivered his sword to General Wightman, and "everybody else took the road he liked best".

A week later 17th June, 1719, General Wightman writes to say that he is taking a tour through all the difficult parts of Seaforth country to terrify the Rebels, by burning the houses of the Guilty and preserving those of the Honest.

On 30th June he writes: "I have used all possible means to put a dread upon those who have been more immediately concerned in this late unnatural Rebellion, and by all just accounts am assured the Rebels are totally disbursed."

MAJOR GENERAL WIGHTMAN TO CHARLES DELAFAYE.

(Home Office Papers, Scotland, Bundle 14, No. 60)

Inverness, June the 30th 1719.

"I had the Favour of yours of the 23rd Instant, and am infinitely obliged to their Excellencies the Lords Justices, and have a very grateful sense of the particular Honour they have been pleased to do me, by approving of my services to my King and Country, and in a most humble manner Return them my Thanks for their Kind Recommendation of me to His Majesties Favour.

I shall always endeavor so to discharge my duty as I hope will ever meet with their Excellencies Esteem and Approbation...."

A LETTER OF THE COUNCIL OF TRADE & PLANTATIONS TO MR. SECRETARY VERNON.

1698 May 6.

When Capt. Frederick Weightman, now dead, commanded H.M.S. Colchester, the Governor gave him orders (which orders I have seen in the hands of Weightman's nephew), to take Capt. John Perrie to St. Thomas with letters of importance to the Governor. Captain Weightman at first refused, but on receiving second orders he sailed as bidden, to St. Thomas, when Perrie put on board the Colchester several negroes whom he had purchased from the Brandenburghers factory for the use of the Governor Codrington and others. The negroes were accordingly transported in the Colchester to St. Christophers, and having the flux and malignant fever inflicted the crew so that many of them besides Capt. Weightman and other officers died.

RICHARD WIGHTMAN, MERCHANT OF ROUEN

24 January, 1577-8

Richard Wightman and his co-partners, Merchants of Rouen, have for a long time been molested by the creditors of one Antony Tuke. After long impleading and imprisonment of the said Wightman, they can come to no end, through the right of the creditors, who have so great a faction among the lawyers in Rouen, that Wightman can come to no sentence, but has his matter drawn unto length, and the pledge that he put into sufficient men's hands for his redemption out of prison, sought by all indirect means to be drawn into the said creditors' hands. If it should so fall out the said poor man and his partners were like to be undone: and

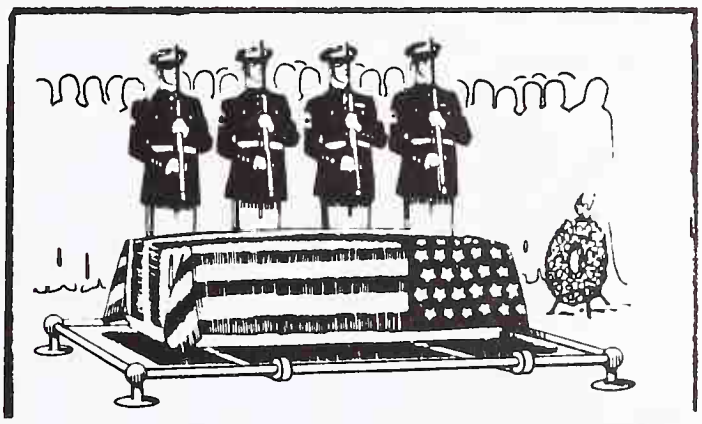
WADE WIGHTMAN, b. 16 May 1901 in California; d. Feb 1975 in Arbuckle, Colusa Co., CA; m. Lilja Aino _____, b. 5 Feb 1906 in California; d. Jul 1985 in Colusa, Colusa Co., CA. Both are buried in the San Francisco Bay area. Wade and Lilja owned and operated the Wightman School of Judo in Oakland, Alemeda Co., CA during their life time. They changed their residence in the late 1940s to Arbuckle, Colusa County, CA. They became Almond ranchers southwest of town. Wade also had a surplus store on Fifth Street in Arbuckle. Lilja was a very talented pianist, as well as her achievements in judo and golf. Wade was a pilot and was owner of his own airplane. He loved golfing also.

Child:



i. Richard Wightman, b. 6 Dec 1927 in California; d. 21 Sep 1988 in Angwin, CA. He was buried in the New Williams Cemetery, Williams, Colusa Co., CA. He was a World War II veteran. Richard was an expert in Judo. He was an artist and was always drawing — using pastels. unm.

COMMENTARY ON THE WIGHTMAN SCHOOL OF JUDO BY LILJA A. WIGHTMAN

. . . Wade started his Judo training with the late Professor Frank A. Matsuyama in San Francisco in 1938. He learned Yawara arts which are hands arts. Matsuyama was widely known for teaching his arts to the police departments of Berkeley, CA, Denver, CO, Colorado State Guard, Colorado State Guard, the Denver Highway Patrol, the U. S. Army at Fort Robbins, NB and various sheriffs departments. Wade, as well as Lilja and son Richard, took their training from this great martial arts master. Wade then joined Professor Law's American Judo School in Oakland where he received all the rest of his training. Lilja has been a Judo member and enthusiast for approximately 20 years and enjoyed every moment of it. She acted as guinea pig (practive partner) for Wade and has written up most of the arts he has learned.

Wade donated Judo instruction to the Colusa Police Department and Auxiliary Police as a civic service. He has also donated instruction to pupils of Pierce Union High School in Arbucle.

Judo helped Wade in preventing serious injury. He was loading their 10-wheel truck in Oakland and as he was tying a half hitch, the knot slipped and as he was pulling hard on the hitch he was thrown with force backwards on a concrete floor. In the split second he had, he automatically reverted to the reflex action of a Judo fall, holding his head up and twisting his body so that he did not fall squarily on his back. He was unhurt, but without Judo, he could have been seriously injured.

A TRIP OUT OF THE ARABIAN NIGHTS

From Lilja's notes

"Last year Wade and I took a 7 weeks trip throughtout the Orient. In Manila Wade worked out with Capt. Nicolus Arcales who is Chief Judo Instructor for the National Bureau of Investigation which is a counterpart of our F.B.I. Capt. Arcales is also the Judo and the wrestling champion of the Philippine Islands and acts as the Philippine representative at the Asian Games which is equivalent to the Olympic Games. Capt. Arcales awarded Wade a life membership degree in the Kodokan Judo Institute at Tokyo with the authority to advance studnets in rank. The Kodokan is maintained by the Japanese Government. When we reached Tokyo later on in our trip, Wade paid his membership dues at the beautiful new Kodokan.

"In Singapore, which is an English Port, English Commando Judo is taught to the Police trainees. They were interested in our demonstration of American Judo Police Arts. They showed their appreciation by giving us an English military salute.

"In Bangkok, Thailand, the Police staged a large demonstration of Judo for us.

"In Honolulu we attended Police Judo classes once and twice daily and were shown Aikido among other things. We were fortunate enough to be present when the Police trainees were shown knife arts for the first time. The knives used were those that had been confiscated by the Police Department and they were of assorted sizes and all razor sharp. The men were instucted to move slowly at first until they could become accustomed to the sharp knives. As they practiced, they speeded up their timing until they were lunging at each other and rolling on the mats with no thought of the sharpness of the knives. Not one scratch was sustained by any of the 40 members of the class."

EXPERTS MAY CLONE LINCOLN'S TISSUE FOR HISTORICAL ANSWERS

The New York Times

WASHINGTON - DEC 1992 — A government museum is considering an effort to clone tissue samples from Abraham Lincoln in an attempt to answer persistent questions about his health and how it might have affected his performance as president.

The work could set a precedent for examining the genetic material of other historical figures whose tissue has been preserved.

A number of museums, special libraries, hospitals and research institutions hold tissue samples from scores of historical figures, including several U. S. presidents, military leaders and politicians.

Examples include locks of hair and tissues removed in surgery or autopsy.

After a symposium yesterday on Lincoln's health, the National Museum of Health and Medicine announced the appointment of an expert committee to study the technical and ethical feasibility of examining samples of hair, bone and blood from Lincoln to see if any genetic material remains 126 years after the president's assassination.

Testing would require destruction of tiny amounts of the samples to recover the genetic substance DNA, which could then be cloned to produce quantities sufficient for research.

There are questions about how well the samples were preserved in their early years and whether the DNA was destroyed.

The museum's collection of Lincoln's tissue, obtained at his autopsy, included blood stains from the shirt cuffs of a doctor, two locks of hair totaling about 180 strands less than 2 inches long and seven bone fragments weighing a total of more than 10 grams from the fatal head wound.

Genetic material could disclose whether Lincoln was afflicted with an inherited disease called Marfan syndrome, as some experts suspect from indirect evidence, which could have taken his life at any time, even if John Wilkes Booth had not assassinated him at Ford's Theater on April 14, 1865.

People with Marfan syndrome are at risk of sudden death from exertion, which can cause the aorta, the main artery from the heart, to burst.

Some scientists suggest that genetic evidence also might one day show whether Lincoln suffered from chronic depression, as several biographers suspect.

Abe Lincoln was an outstanding lawyer

Researchers set out to document each of the former president's cases

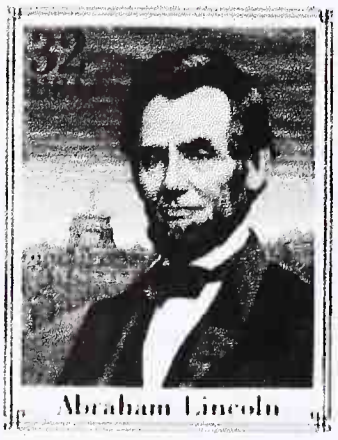
Chicago 1995

Poor Abraham Lincoln.

He taught himself law, then spent the next 25 years of his life traveling throughout the state (on horseback) in the dead of winter and swelter of summer, mind you), deftly handling cases big and small, sometimes not charging his clients a penny.



Abraham Lincoln

And what do people remember him for most? His four short years as president.

To that, researcher Christopher Schnell and his colleagues say: objection.

After all, Lincoln — though many still believe this — was not a disheveled hick lawyer who got by on his charm. No. Lincoln, as Schnell has come to know quite well, had the guile of O. J. Simpson's lawyer, Robert Shapiro, the court demeanor of TV's Ben Matlock and the hustle-buck of Arnold Becker of L. A. Law.

So get it straight, Schnell says: Honest Abe was one of the most respected lawyers of his era. He gained a national reputation plying his craft. He was a workhorse. And Honest Abe was so smooth in court, he could convince jurors that THEY committed the crime.

Recently, Schnell spent the bulk of his days in Waukegan and Woodstock archives amid hundreds of thousands of court records — some dating to 1840 and maybe never having been viewed since being written — getting some of the documentation that would prove his argument.

"Thiiiissss, I believe is it," said Schnell, lovingly eying a musty and tattered case file he had come across in the McHenry County archives. "THIS is what I came for. A Lincoln case."

Not even Lincoln probably got that excited when he accepted the 1846 case, which involved an Algonquin man suing another for $14.87½. Lincoln handled his appeal before the Illinois Supreme Court. It was ugly. Lincoln's client wound up owing $95 after court costs.

In Waukegan, Schnell found that later that year, Lincoln's luck turned when he handled the case of a man whose wife apparently had cheated on him. Lincoln's client sued his wife's suitor, and the lower courts awarded the man $225. The loser appealed the case, and Lincoln got the state Supreme Court to uphold his client's award.

Not exactly the stuff of history books. But soon, they will be. Schnell and nine other researchers from a project called the Lincoln Legal Papers have spent the last eight years painstakingly trying to document every one of the 16th president's cases. Following Lincoln's legal footsteps has taken them to 90-plus courthouses in southern Illinois, Indiana and Missouri, they said.

To date, one-quarter of the documents found illustrate Lincoln's modus operandi in court or contain his sloppy, scrawlike handwriting. And they speak volumes about A. Lincoln, Esq., and the courts of 19th-century America.

For instance:

Lincoln, who practiced from 1836 to 1851, was one of Illinois' most prolific lawyers, handling more than 5,000 cases. The self-taught lawyer was quite skillful but often cultivated his backwoods image to outwit lawyers who mistakenly thought him simple.

Lincoln, as honorable as he was, didn't care if his clients were honor-able. The Kentucky native had no compunction against representing people who may have been guilty. He defended slave holders, people charged with murder and embezzlement, and railroad officials accused of corruption — at times getting them off.

Divorce work

Though Lincoln is best known for his work on murder trials, they constituted a small number of his cases. The bulk of Lincoln's work was contracted and real estate disputes, and a form of law known as chancery, which dealt with issues of possession. Translation: Lincoln did a lot of divorce work.

Contrary to popular belief, society didn't suddenly become overly litigious. As evidenced by Lincoln's caseload, lawyers were in high demand in the mid-1800s. The lawsuit du jour was slander, a Lincoln specialty.

"This is a Lincoln a lot of people don't know," said Cullom Davis, director of the Lincoln Legal Papers, based in Springfield, where Lincoln maintained his law offices. "He was not a careless bumpkin. He was a preeminent lawyer with a thriving practice. It's just that until a few years ago nobody knew."

How could this be?

Though some of his legal

NO SHORTAGE OF WORK: Abraham Lincoln was one of Illinois' most prolific lawyers, handling more than 5,000 cases.

exploits were memorable, historians ignored Lincoln's main vocation because they thought he'd only used law to advance his political career. In addition, the highlights were buried in arcane 19th-century law files and, most important were excruciatingly time-consuming to retrieve, according to Davis and others.

On Feb. 12, 1985, the 176th anniversary of Lincoln's birth, then - Gov. James Thompson established the project, which was viewed with skepticism by some historians, who doubted that much would be found. Working out of the basement of the Old State Capitol in Springfield, project officials also were skeptical.

They also thought most of Lincoln's work had either been found, lost for good or stolen. The results are that places like Springfield, which were assumed to be treasure troves, instead have turned out to have sparse Lincoln law files.

The holes are often the handiwork of thieves or buffs. Lincoln memorabilia, as expected, goes for a pretty penny.

Undaunted, in 1990 the project sent out researchers such as Schnell to libraries across the state to find all they could.

The project's work — which will result in a five-volume set and a CD-ROM version of all his papers — already has helped to change the way historians look at Lincoln and has given the world a tantalizing glimpse of Lincoln in action.

For example, there was Cagey Abe. In an 1857 murder case, Lincoln took up the cause of a young German immigrant from Sangamon County who in a rage fired a shotgun into a crowd outside his window, killing a man. Lincoln let local heads cool down, moved the case to a county with a larger German population and then asked for continuances until the statute of limitations expired.

"Tact," according to Abraham Lincoln, "is the ability to describe others the way they see themselves."

"Most people are as happy as they make up their minds to be."
Abraham Lincoln

Abraham Lincoln's favorite sports were billards, cockfighting, marbles, walking, weightlifting and wrestling.

Amos[7] Wightman [see pages 137 & 743 for more data](Alford[6], Amos[5], Dea. Valentine[4], Daniel[3], Rev. Valentine[2], George[1]), b. 26 Oct 1834 in Amboy, NY; d. 9 Jun 1923 in Pleasant Hill, TN; m. 14 Dec 1864 in Lenox, MA to Helen Graham, b. 12 May 1838 in Kirkoswold✶,

Amos Wightman Helen Wightman

✶ Kirkoswold, Scotland, the place of Helen Graham Wightman's birth, is a small town on the west coast of Scotland, approximately fifty miles, as "the crow flies," southwest of Glasgow. Her family background is quite interesting. There are Ballies, Dunlops, Dickies, and Grahams, all validly traceable, on her father's side. Then there are the Rogers and Nivens on her mother's side. Niven was her mother's maiden name. This name was later adopted as a middle name by Alice Wightman, the ninth child and seventh daughter of Amos and Helen Wightman.

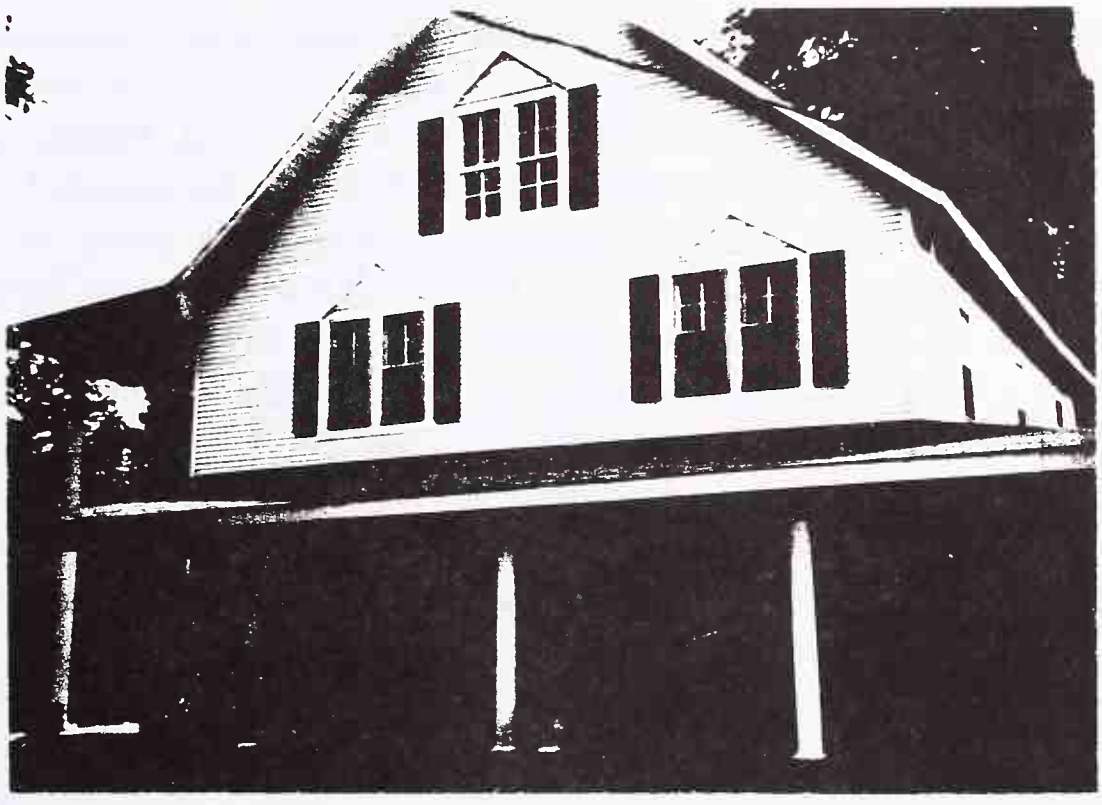
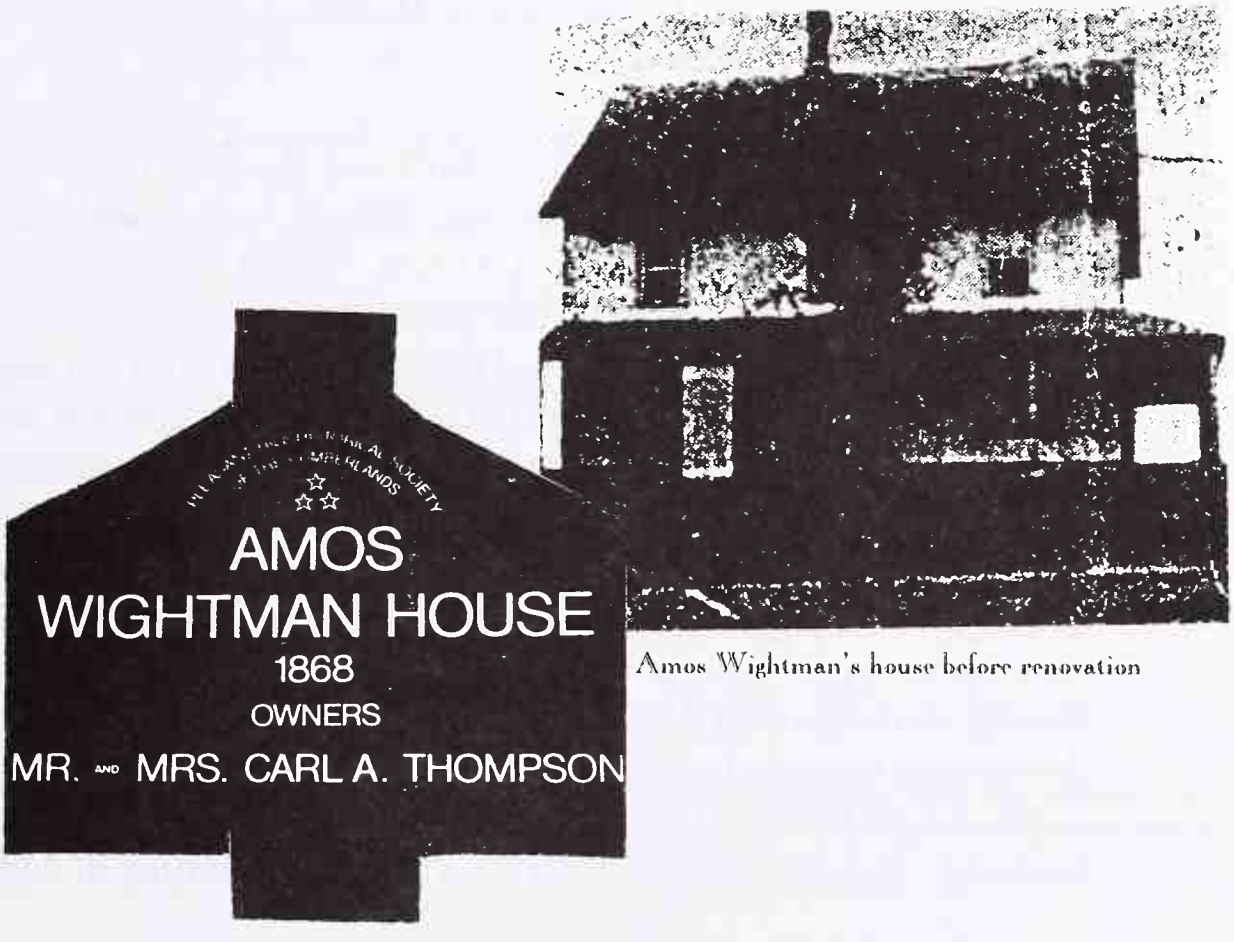
Child looking over shoulder of Agnes is probably Ira Henry Wightman



The Amos Wightman house after extensive renovation — The oldest house in Pleasant Hill, TN.



Amos Wightman's house before renovation

Scotland, d. 2 Nov 1922 in Pleasant Hill, TN. Amos and Helen moved to Hoyleton, IL to a religious community which had a swampy climate. This climate claimed the life of their first child, Martha, and was beginning to affect their second child, Robert. This caused Amos and Helen to seek a better environment which led them to the Cumberland Plateau area at Pleasant Hill in 1868. Helen spent her last years in a wheelchair due to a broken hip and Amos spent his later years as a blind man. [In his later years Amos would recount to Beryl how she wasn't like "Little Mary" as she read the Bible to him . . . as she would stumble, he would correct her from memory (he was now blind) and recount how well Mary could read.] ["The Amos Wightman bunch in Pleasant Hill were a quarrelsome lot . . . in later years Sophia and Alice claimed the big house on the homeplace and John and Mark lived in separate outbuildings on the homeplace because they couldn't get along with each other." Comment by a grandson.]

Children:

i. Martha[8] Wightman, b. 21 Jan 1866 in Hoyleton, IL; d. 12 Aug 1867 in Hoyleton, IL.

ii. Robert[8] Wightman, b. 1 Jan 1867 in Hoyleton, IL; d. 17 Feb 1950 in Pleasant Hill, Tennessee; m. 6 Aug 1896 to Leanne Osborn, b. 18 Nov 1877 in Creston, TN, d. 11 Oct 1972 in Pleasant Hill, TN. He attended school in a little log school house and later went to Pleasant Hill Academy. During or soon after school days he joined the Pleasant Hill Congregational Church of which he was a member to the last. After his brother, Mark, went to Cobden, IL to work for a friend of their father, 'Rob' soon followed and lived in Illinois with his sister Sarah. As a mere child, he took mechanical things to pieces to see how to reassemble them. Clocks and watches were close kin to him. During many years in Mayland and Pleasant Hill, watches and clocks were brought to him from far and near, many from other states. To all he was 'Uncle Rob', and was universally kind to everyone. He always invited any who came at meal time to stay for lunch. When they couldn't, he would follow them to the gate with a handful of baked sweet potatoes or something else from the table. Everything about nature fascinated him. Grafting trees and shrubs of all kinds was learned from his father. To the last, books and pictures of all kinds of plants, trees, birds and animals were a joy to him. He left 29 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren. Also surviving him were three sisters, Mrs. Sarah Golden, Sophie and Alice Wightman and one brother, John Henry Wightman.

Mother said to ask Sarah if she got the Farm &

★ "This letter was written by Grandpa Robert to Tom Golden, his brother-in-law. Sarah was Grandpa's sister. The 'dad' that is referred to is my great-grandfather, Amos. 'Mother' was my great-grandmother, Helen. Robert was 23 years old when he wrote this letter." Marlin Morrell Wightman.

Viola K. Braun started the custom of printing life-stories in the church bulletin of the Pleasant Hill Community Church, United Church of Christ, Pleasant Hill, Tennessee. In the second issue, dated January 31 1971, she wrote about Lee Ann (Osborn) Wightman: "One of our older members, Mrs. Robert Wightman, is 93 years old. The name of Wightman is well known in the history of our church. Mr. Amos Wightman, a New Yorker, and his wife who came from Scotland, decided to go west and traveled to Illinois where they settled. There one child died and young Robert was frail. The doctors advised them seek a more healthful climate. So by oxcart they came to Cumberland County, Tennessee. That was in 1868. They liked the country but were concerned because of lack of educational facilities for their children. They started correspondence with the Congregational headquarters in Boston. Finally, in 1883 Mrs. Wightman went to Boston to tell them that Pleasant Hill needed a teacher. This must have been a long and arduous journey. They heard her plea and the following spring Miss Mary Santley came to be their teacher. In the fall of 1884 the Rev. Benjamin Dodge was sent to Pleasant Hill by the American Missionary Association to organize a church and start a school for secondary education.

"The Amos Wightmans were charter members of the church, and their son Robert was baptized in the creek nearby. They owned a sawmill and Amos and his sons provided the lumber for many old houses in the county still standing. They made excellent sturdy furniture which has outlasted many a modern piece. The family lived in the house now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Thompson. Robert was married to Leanne Osborn who had grown up in Mayland, attended the Academy, and joined our church when Rev. Warren Wheeler was pastor. Nine children were soon born to this union. Two daughters, Zona Stewart and Ora Welch, are members of our fellowship and nephew Ted Wightman is a resident of Wharton Home.

"Mrs. Wightman is alert and has good eyesight, likes to read, milked several cows till recently and still makes a garden every spring. She attributes her longevity and good health to hard work all her life and good diet. Her favorite beverage is milk. She enjoyed relating interesting events of 80 years ago with a good sense of humor. We salute our oldest member, Lee Ann Wightman." [Lee Ann & Leanne has been spelled both ways by various family members.]

"Mrs. Wightman died on October 11, 1972. She was then 94."

Marlin M. Wightman has a brief story of his life on page 747 of Volume I of The Wightman Ancestry. He is now retired and continues his visitations to Cincinnati, Ohio schools to talk to the students about his hobby of whittling and Appalachian culture. This is a continuation of his thoughts and early childhood experiences. It is given in its entirety. It will become invaluable to his descendants who look back upon this time in history. Furthermore, the account of his life is very similar to that of the compiler of this book during the Great Depression of the 1930s. Exceptions are that I lived in Michigan on a dairy and crop farm. We didn't have sorghum — our experiences in the Maple Sugar Bush might be substituted.

"Appalachian Culture has beauty which too often becomes buried in its poverty ridden stereotype. Appalachian attitude too often is clouded by this stereotype and turns to one of self pity. . . . 'I'm poor,". . . 'I have to work so hard and have nothing,' etc. When I teach in our schools in Cincinnati, I try to emphasize the beauty of the self sufficing spirit, not shame and poverty of this life in Appalachia. ---no, I do not advocate reverting to such living standards as nineteenth century Appalachia afforded. However, I still am thrilled with stories of this life and how I inherited part of it. In watching progress, I have determined only that we in rural Appalachia were about 30 to 50 years behind more affluent urbanized areas. This was not bad because I feel privileged to have experienced life in two centuries. Deprived? In poverty? Poor? appears to my reflection to be a state of mind, more than a reality. When I turn to my childhood surroundings, a tinge of sadness encompasses me as I see how progress has so completely obliterated the familiar past I once knew. No one plows a garden with mule anymore. There are no cows in the pasture . . . no pigs for a fall slaughter . . . in fact chickens are rarely to be found. As I smoothly maneuver my comfortable automobile over the pavement, I once walked as a barefoot boy on a dirt road. I wonder what is gone from my life . . . then, when I sit with my grandchildren on my lap, I realize that this is a precious memory, a legacy to give to them . . . a beautiful Appalachian culture . . . their inheritance. May I invite you to visit this world briefly with me: —

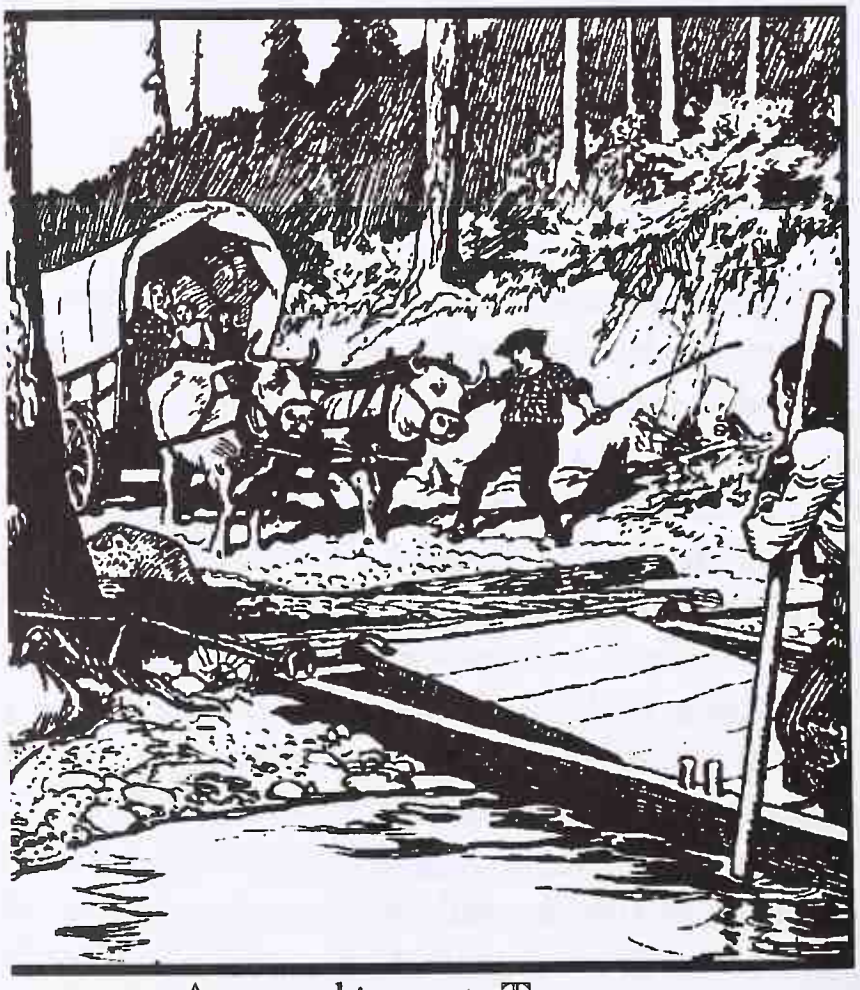
"My earliest recollection of life in Tennessee was of my sister leading my hand to look into a 'spring' [a pool of water coming out of an underground source, where many residents got their water]. I was no more than two or three years old. It looked so big and so deep. My mother had her wash tubs near where she washed clothes. A large iron kettle was used to boil the clothes. It had three legs on it, was placed on stones and a fire was made under it after filling it with water and soap. Clothes were placed in the kettle and as they boiled, a stick (punching stick) was used to stir and agitate the clothes. The same stick was used to pull the clothes out, place them into a tub where the wash board was used to scrub the clothes. Then they were rinsed. Whites were put through a bluing rinse which was supposed to keep them from turning yellow. Then the clothes were hung on a line to dry. Some items usually took a full day. Traditionally, Monday was 'wash day' in Appalachian country.

"Not ready yet, because the clothes had to be ironed because they were made of cotton. They were moistened with water (sprinkling), flat irons were heated on top of the cook stove and the ironing began. The hot iron lasted three to five minutes before it had to be put back on the stove, reheated and another hot iron used. This process could last a full day also and was repeated weekly in Appalachian life.

"I've described doing laundry, which you can see wasn't very easy. But there was something dramatic about a fire under a big pot. The fresh smells of the out doors . . . the crackling of wood burning. It was an experience in living as well as getting the clothes clean. My mother always took a break to fix 'dinner' [our noon meal]. It consisted of whatever food we may have such as corn bread, beans and potatoes. We usually had butter milk for she churned it about every other day. As I go along for you, you can see how Appalachian life combined work and play. This was because leisure time was practically unknown.

"Amos Wightman, my great grandfather and Helen, great grandmother were married in Amboy, New York, moved to Illinois about the middle of the 19th century. After the Civil War they moved to central Tennessee in a covered wagon where they built a large home for a large family. [See story under Amos about the purchase of hundreds of acres for 25¢ per acre]. Amos was a master carpenter. The home is still in use and listed in the National Registry of Historical Houses.



Amos on his way to Tennessee

"Amos farmed the land with oxen. He raised vegetables, potatoes and corn. He was one of the first settlers to raise sweet potatoes in this part of the country. In addition to this farming, he bought a mill down on the creek near his house, where he was able to saw logs into his lumber. As a child I have played in the creek where the stone foundation of the mill house still stands as memorabilia of the past. There were also some wood logs which were submerged on the creek bed, remains of a dam which had backed up water to turn the big wheel which operated the saw to cut lumber. Helen, of the Scottish Grahams was equally industrious. She brought one of the first sewing machines to her Tennessee home and sewed clothes for her family and was instrumental in getting the American Missionary Society of Boston to build a school.

Amos farmed with oxen

"Robert and Leanne Wightman, my grandparents both went to the school, where they met. Leanne, of Cherokee descendance and Robert, son of Amos and Helen settled into a home of their own across the creek where the mill was. They, like Amos and Helen, had a large family, supported by food they raised on their farm. Cows were standard farm animals because this was their source of milk. Cattle and pigs were permitted to roam free during daytime because there was open range. We did not have a 'no fence' law until I was about nine or ten years old. The cows were milked twice daily. With no refrigeration, milk only stayed fresh a few hours. We usually enjoyed it on hot oat meal for breakfast. The milk would curdle and it was put into a churn and agitated with a dasher until the cream turned to butter. Fresh buttermilk was delicious, and a sweet-like taste. Not only was it a nourishing drink but it was used for most all the baking. Only once, I can remember not being able to drink milk — that was when the cow ate wild onions. Whew! The onion odor and taste were overpowering.

"Spring gardens usually brought us first harvest of green onions, fresh leaf lettuce and fried squash. Soon afterward peas, beans and new potatoes were fresh treats. Split rail fences were quite common around gardens and corn fields. This kept cows and pigs out. As a child, I sometimes wished the cows would have eaten all the corn because part of my summer work was to chop weeds out of the corn. Those cornfields never ended at least I thought they had no end. [Reuben, my father was the 3rd son of Robert and Leanne. He and Vernie, my mother lived next to my grandparents.] Usually our reward for hoeing corn all day was a trip to the creek to play in the water. [going swimming]

"In the fall after frost had helped ripen the corn, it was gathered and stored to feed the cows, mules and pigs throughout the winter and spring months. Corn was also fed to chickens. The chickens furnished us with eggs. Vegetables which were canned in Mason jars were beans, sour kraut, beets usually pickled as were cucumbers. Onions were used in pickles or dried. Corn, turnip or mustard greens were also canned.

"Hay and fodder [dried corn stalks] were stored in barn lofts to feed cows and mules. Some had mowing machines with cycle bars to cut the hay. It was dried and raked up and hauled to the barn. If the barn was full, a pale about 20 feet high was set upright and the hay was stacked around it, combed downward and tapered to a peak around the top becoming a haystack.

"Each year one of the most enjoyable events was 'sorghum time.' Each family who wanted sorghum molasses would raise sugar cane. When it was ready (usually October) it was carefully stripped of leaves and seed tops which were used for fodder. Stalks were cut and hauled to the 'cane mill.' In our neighborhood, it was 'Uncle' Frank Stanley who had the cane mill. It was a vertical rolling apparatus which squeezed the sweet juice from the stalks into a barrel which drained into a cooking pan where it was boiled down into a thick syrup and drained into either glass jars or metal buckets. Sorghum time sometimes took 4 to 5 days and often was continued day and night until it was over. This period often was as much a social even as much as working time. Families visited, cooked and shared meals and caught up on all the happenings of the past year. Uncle Frank was a talented musician and would play either his banjo or fiddle for us in the evenings. It always excited me to listen to one of the older folks tell stories of some happening of years past. All the entertainment was extemporaneous and not planned.

"In the 18th century sorghum was the only sweetener Appalachian families had. It was used to make cakes and breads, fruit preserves and to eat on corn bread. Later in the 19th century granulated and maple sugar was available and sorghum was used less. I remember enjoying pop corn balls made from it and ginger bread. Both were delicious. Wood for the stoves which furnished both heat and cooking was cut with a cross-cut say and split with a chopping ax. Saturdays were wood cutting days. I helped my dad cut enough to last thru the week. I learned to appreciate the usefulness and beauty of wood during this time. Oak was plentiful. It was hard wood and burned hot. Pine was soft but its resin was good to kindle a nice fire with.

"Dad always said to get plenty of pine knots to start the fire with. I have seen Grandpa Robert take a straight wood pole and make a handle for a garden hoe or a pick mattock. Wood, the most versatile material we had was used to build houses, make furniture, except where metal was necessary, farm plows and tools. At one time it was considered wasteful and frivolous to make decorative items.

"Some of the beautiful quilts you see today are an evolution of Appalachian bed covers. Homes, heated with wood burning stoves, get cold at night when the fire burned out. We depended on enough quilts to keep us warm as we slept. I remember unheated bedrooms so it was necessary to have many quilts for warmth. Some times we placed a hot flat iron in the bed to warm it up. Of course the iron had to be wrapped in paper and towel to keep from burning us.

"Each morning, the day was started with breakfast. Dad would 'build the fires' to cook and heat with. Mom would make biscuits from flour and many times gravy too. If we had it, there was sausage and eggs. Some times we had hot oat meal. Butter and jellie were plentiful to go with hot biscuits. I always liked corn meal mush [similar in taste and appearance to cream of wheat]. Fried chicken was a special treat as were fried apples in the spring for breakfast.

"During the late 1930s and 40s, mail was delivered by Mr. Hembry in his old Ford Coupe. This was a daily experience to see who we would hear from. First Class Postage was 3¢. One of the most exciting pieces we received was the Sears Roebuck Catalogue. My how I would look at the toy pages and fantasize their wonders if I had them. Mom often ordered clothes from the catalog when she had the money. I remember her first washing machine was a gasoline powered, wringer washer. This one item really placed her in the 20th century. A battery radio was ordered from Sears to become our first media contact with the outside world. Each evening H. V. Kaltenborn brought us up to date with the world news. Then we were treated to Intersanctum Mystery, Mr. & Mrs. North or some other exciting adventure. World War II set up the stage for many spy thrillers. Since this was before TV, visions had to be imagined! How scary some of those radio programs were too.

"When I went to school we were taught to read and write and add simple arithmetic. I shall never forget being placed in the 2nd grade from 1st because I spelled 'balloon' for the teacher. Our beloved art teacher, Margaret Campbel used whatever material she could get. By the time I was in the 5th grade, I was making small things from wood. Some of my first pieces were very crude and would have hardly qualified as art. But as time went on what she taught me was to prove very valuable in later years. I shall always cherish the compliment she bestowed upon me long after I was an adult, 'You are an artist.' Miss Campbel did not flatter anyone with words and truly meant what she said. One of her pupils was the famous Miss Bette Davis in New Hampshire in the 1920s before she came to Tennessee.

"Most of our toys were made of wood. One of my most prized possessions was a small wagon Dad made for me. It was awkward and difficult to pull up steep grades but oh! what a joy it was to me. I made bows to shoot arrows. A green branch which I bent and tied with a string. Not very accurate but it served my childhood very nicely. The 'limber Jack' was a doll made of wood and put together with joints that moved freely. When held on a spring board, it would dance fast or slow according to how one beat the board.

"Relaxation in warm months was usually sitting on the porch because after supper [the evening meal] it was too hot to sit inside. Many times this was when the family gathered together. I have listened to my mother and father tell us about life in their younger days. Sometimes my dad took me fishing. This ritual was simply putting a fish line with hook in my pocket, digging a small can of worms and walking to the creek. On the way we cut a suitable pole, tied the line to it and baited the hook with one of the worms and we were ready to catch the 'big ones' which were usually four to five inches long or smaller. I really enjoyed 'wading.' This was when we traveled the creek bed from pool to pool to catch a lot of fish. It was truly exciting altho I never really caught very big fish. As the sun would set, bull frogs would start their serenade, a rather scary sound to a small child. Once a snake chased me and my brother from a spot on a drift wood bar in the middle of the creek. I had a grape vine swing once in the woods behind the house. Wow! what a thrill it was to swing out so high and far on that vine. It satisfied a young boys fantasy of flying.

"Winter holidays always brought two weeks of being off from school from before Christmas until after new Years. It was exciting to gather holly and pines to decorate for Christmas. With no electricity in our homes all decorations were made of colored paper. I used to cut strips of red and green paper and paste together into a chain which was draped around the tree. Sprigs of holly with their red berries were beautiful. Some times a brave soul would climb a tall gum tree for pieces of mistletoe. Almost as rare but much more accessible was the small sprigs of ground pine. I remember finding some with a lace texture. I've never seen any like it since. Since our school was supported by a Mission Board in New England and most of our gifts came as second hand toys from there, we gathered some of this holly and ground pines and sent to them. It was a token of thanks from Appalachia to our benefactors. Being a Mission School and before the Supreme Court ruled out prayer and religion in Public Schools, we were free to celebrate with a Christmas Pageant reliving the birth of Christ. How beautiful was the music . . . Silent Night, The First Noel, Away in a Manger. — A rather humorous incident happened to me and my wife last year. We waited late to do some shopping. I picked up a roll of wrapping paper without noticing what design it had on it. When we got home and started wrapping our grandchildrens' gifts, we found that the paper had Happy Hanukkah printed on it. After spending 30 minutes just getting out of the shopping center parking lot, I wasn't about to take it back. So we celebrated Hanukkah with Christmas for the kids. My Jewish Brother-in-law thought this was an ecumenical celebration. — But back to our Appalachian Christmas. Very little emphasis was given to Santa Claus in the home. However we always had a visit from Santa at school. At home gifts were wrapped and placed under the tree. As they accumulated, anticipation grew but we never peeked. Then it was always our tradition to open on Christmas Eve. What joy we shared as each toy, which was usually a used one, was opened. Being second hand made no difference to us. They were as treasured as new ones. Also there were treats of fruit (oranges, apples), nut and hard candy. We retired, satisfied with having had our 'Christmas Tree' as we called this celebration.

"In April 1951 I finished school and came to Cincinnati to work the summer and intended to return to Tennessee to go to college. But this was not to be because I could not afford it. So I returned to Cincinnati and went back to work and have lived here ever since. Those years included a military commitment in the army, changing jobs once. I have worked for the company I'm presently employed with for 35 years [now retired]. At first as a chemical operator where I was active in the local labor union and served as an officer for three years. Then I took a supervising job for eight years. This job was abolished and I started over again, training to operate high pressure boilers, got my Stationary Engineers License and have the job I presently hold. In addition to employment related training, I also had four years of Labor Education at one of our local universities and three years of Bible from Moody Institute in Chicago given through my local church. I was also privileged to be on the Lay Staff when one of our young pastors got his Doctor of Ministry thru Mt. St. Josephs. I do enjoy a comfortable living in my home. My children all grown now and two have children of their own. This leaves me free to give demonstrations for schools and interested groups on the Appalachian Heritage and Folk Art. I also have been able to recover my expenses with sales altho I do not depend upon this as income. I feel free to give to others some of the joys of life I have enjoyed without placing a price on friendship. I place value on that friendly soul no matter who they are. I've greeted thousands from almost every walk of life." written by Marlin Morrell Wightman before his retirement.

Marlin Wightman has been the subject of local television and magazine features and his work has won him local honors, including a 1988 award from the Appalachian Community Development Association for outstanding service to the Appalachian community. One such feature was in the Cincinnati Enquirer [Ohio], dated February 21, 1989. The article relates how Marlin developed his early interest in whittling and how as an adult he has combined his artistry with storytelling of his early life in Appalachia. He is proud of his farm heritage in the center part of Tennessee and is delighted to bring this Appalachian customs and folkways to the people in the Cincinnati, Ohio area.

✶ Alice Niven[8] Wightman. "She retired to Pleasant Hill [She wasn't always there so people sometimes kept her things for her that she didn't trust left in her home.]." . . . the article on the clock that was kept at her sister's, Mrs. Agnes[8] (Wightman) Frey, is as follows:

"The 'Burns' clock, as the one at the Frey home is called - because the name of the poet Burns is inscribed on the face of it - is not enclosed in a case. The weights that keep it running weigh 14 pounds each. The pendulum must be around two feet long, or possible longer, and it 'swings to and fro' with rhythmical precision marking off the seconds of life.

The clock belongs to Miss Alice Wightman, who teaches in Cleveland, Ohio, and only comes to her home at Pleasant Hill during her vacations.

The Wightman family can trace their ancestry to the Scotch patriot, William Wallace, in 1272. [through Helen (Graham) Wightman - see lineage that follows this article] This old clock seems to have come into the picture in 1757 as the property of forebears of the Wightman family, but how long it had been made before that time they are unable to tell. The closest estimate Miss Wightman is able to make is that the clock is 194 years old; it may be even older than that. When one comes to remember that it is still keeping accurate time, it is certainly a most famous old clock.

The ancestral tree of those who have owned the clock runs like this: Hugh Rodger, Jean Rodger, John Niven, Elizabeth Niven, Sarah Niven, Robert Graham, Dr. Douglas Graham, Helen Graham, Amos Wightman, Marion N. Graham, Alice Wightman, Agnes Frey.

Hugh Rodger, a famous teacher in Scotland, was married in 1757, and the Scotch authorities think that was when he purchased the clock, which stood in the room where he taught Robert Burns, who very likely inscribed his name on the clock while attending school, around 1777.

The clock came into the possession of Elizabeth Niven from her mother, Jean Rodger. Elizabeth Niven visited her nephew, Dr. Douglas Graham, in Boston, Mass., in 1889, and gave the clock to him. At his death it came into the hands of his daughter, Marion Graham. When she gave up her home in Brookline, Mass., the clock came to Miss Alice N. Wightman, Pleasant Hill, and she placed it in the care of her sister, Mrs. Frank Frey.

Before this wonderful old clock, now known as the Burn's clock, came into the possession of Miss Wightman an offer of $1,000 was made for it, but declined.

That same clock has now [1997] passed out of the Wightman family to a family by the name of Rackley that now lives in Clifty (?), TN. It first went into the home of Mrs. Flosseye Clark of Pleasant Hill. Flosseye Clark is the widow of the late Earl Clark, who was the son of Margaret (Wightman) Clark, the fourth daughter and eighth child of Amos and Helen (Graham) Wightman. Mrs. Clark is now deceased. The Rackley that now has it is a brother of Mrs. Clark and a relative to Fred Rackley of Crossville, TN.

The famous poem that has so immortalized this type of clock follows. It was written by Henry Clay Work, who was born in 1832 and died in 1884:

MY GRANDFATHER'S CLOCK

My Grandfather's clock was too large for the shelf,
So it stood ninety years on the floor;
It was taller by half than the old man himself,
Though it weighed not a penny-weight more.
It was bought on the morn of the day he was born,
And was always his treasure and pride.
But it stopped short, never to go again,
When the old man died.

Refrain

Ninety years without slumbering,
Tick, tock; tick, tock;
His life seconds numbering,
Tick, tock; tick, tock;
It stopped short, never to go again,
When the old man died.

In watching its pendulum swing to and fro,
Many hours had he spent as a boy;
And in childhood and manhood the clock seemed to know,
And to share both his grief and his joy,
For it struck twenty-four when he entered the door,
With a booming and beautiful bride,
But it stopped short, never to go again,

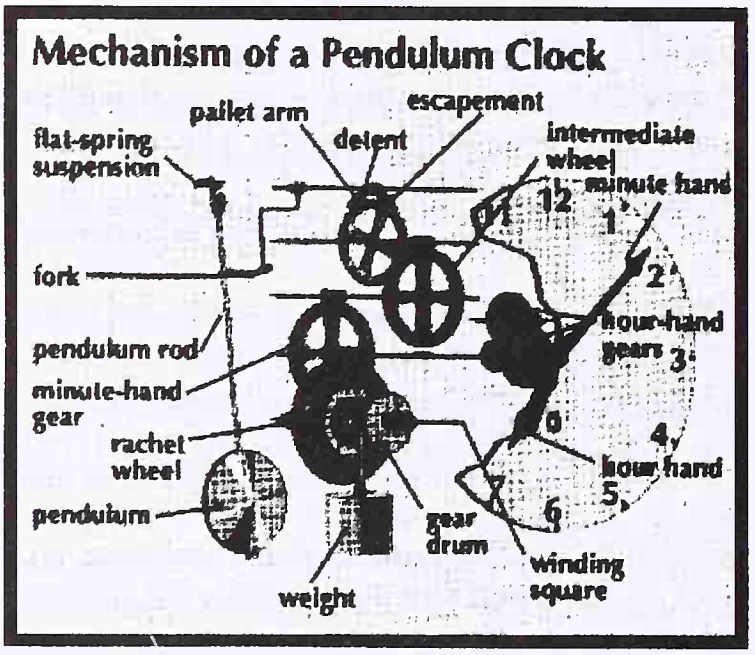
From The Crossville Chronicle; Thursday, December 15 1928.

The popularity of the grandfather clock did not explode until after 1910. A check of the 1908 Sear Roebuck Catalog did not list one single grandfather clock, although large mantle clocks were fully illustrated.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE GRANDFATHER CLOCK:

Pendulum. The major scientific breakthrough that led to the development of accurate clocks occurred in 1583, when Galileo demonstrated that successive beats of a pendulum always take place in the same length of time, irrespective of the distance through which the pendulum swings. It was not until about 70 years later, however, that this discovery was applied to clock regulation. In 1656 Christiaan Huygens designed the first weight-driven clock in which motion was controlled by a pendulum. About a decade later the English physicist Robert Hooke added an escapement, producing the first accurate pendulum clock. By 1680 a minute hand was added to the hour hand, and a few years later the pendulum clock had a second hand.



The large pendulum clock, later called the grandfather clock, has a long pendulum end enclosed in a tall case. It is driven by a heavy weight whose descent causes a drum to rotate. The motion of the drum is transmitted by gears to an escape wheel. The teeth on the escape wheel are caught by the detent, a rocking bar with two pallet arms and teeth, at the top of the pendulum rod. The detent and escape wheel together form the escapement. Each time the pendulum swings, the detent releases the teeth on the escape wheel. The drum, pulled by the weight, turns slightly until the other arm of the dctent again catches a tooth on the wheel. When the pallet arm disengages from a tooth on the escape wheel, the pendulum is momentarily free to swing. The weight gives up energy that keeps the pendulum swinging. This motion is transferred by a sequence of gears to the hour, minute, and second hands. By a mechanism called the gravity escapement, the arms on each side of the pendulum are raised by the turning escape wheel. They are then allowed to fall against the pendulum, keeping it in motion.

The grandfather clock at the Frank Frey home was made before 1757 which makes it among the very early clocks of this type. It is an eight-day timepiece and has the remarkable distinction of the name Robert R. Burns, thc famous Scotch poet, written on it in his own hand. It is quite distinctly outlined on thc facc of thc old clock. The means [key] used to wind this clock is a small crank and in winding the clock one winds the handle many times around before thc clock is fully wound and ready for another eight-day run.

THE GENEALOGY OF HELEN (GRAHAM) WIGHTMAN

Alice Niven Wightman

Mother's genealogy [Helen (Graham) Wightman]: Sir Malcolm Wallace, of Eldershe, Renfrewshire. Sir William Wallace, born about 1270, married Marion Braifoot, of Lamington. Died about 1305. Left one daughter, who married Sir William Baillie. Got charge of his wife's estate (who was murdered by Hessilig at Lanark) about 1360. Left son, William Baillie who married Isabella Seyton, daughter of Lord Seyton. Left grandson, Sir William Baillie, who married Marion, daughter of Sir J. Hamilton Baryay. Left son, Sir William Baillie, who married Marion Hume, daughter of Sir Patrick Hume. Left three sons and one grandson, son of eldest son. Thomas, second son, was a merchant in Glasgow. Left two sons, Robert Baillie, Minister in Kilwinning. Born 1599, died 1662. Was Principal of Glasgow College. Left one son and daughter. Son Baillie left one daughter, Jean Baillie, who married Dunlop of Irvine. Left one daughter, Mary Dunlop, who married Matthew Dickie, farmer in Ballochneil. Daughter Margaret Dickie married Douglas Graham, of Dulwhat. Son Robert Graham married Sarah Niven, of Ballochneil. Son Douglas Graham, Doctor in Boston, married Annie Munro. Son Douglas, Jr. died at the age of two years. Thus ends the tree (His branch)

The Baillies were considered a quarrelsome lot, for in every case the grandson succeeded the father being killed in some family quarrel. Nobody can harmonize with that particular branch.

Story of a brother lost to the family before the Civil War and located in Indian Territory in 1898.

Lone Wolf, Kiowo County, Oklahoma (82 years)

Relates a story of brother lost to the family before the Civil War and located in Indian Territory in 1898 to 1937.

I was born in Overton County, Tennessee, December 10, 1855. My father, Wilkerson Copeland was a native of Tennessee and so was my mother, Pollie Copeland. They were farm people and also raised stock for a living. My father had been married before and had several children by his first wife, who was then dead. My half brother and sisters were much older than I and most of them were grown when I was born.

My oldest half-brother, Foster Copeland, went away from home when I was quite a baby and the family did not know what had become of him. Mother and Father and his brothers and sisters grieved for him and did their best to find some trace of him. He had gone away from home with band of sheep which were grazed to market and part of them belonged to him. The Civil War came on and no one knew whether he had been killed or not. He was of age when he went away and was the oldest of the family. I grew up with the desire in my heart to find my brother and everywhere I went I made inquiry and asked my friends to assist me in the search.

As I grew up I followed the usual occupations of our family, farming and raising cattle. I have driven hundreds of head of stock through the hills of Tennessee to Lexington, Kentucky, from there we would ship them by train to Cincinnati, Ohio for market.

William Felix Copeland and Foster Copeland were uncles to Leanne Osborn, mother of Reuben Wightman.*

I married Samantha Ellen Sewell, who was also born in Tennessee, January 23, 1858. She was the daughter of a Hardshell Baptist preacher and we lived in Tennessee until 1891 when I moved to Dallas County, Texas.

My half-sister, Louise Copeland, had married Clay Pilberyard in the early part of 1870. They had moved to the Indian Territory as she, like the others of the family were still hunting for her brother Foster and she had hope of finding him in Indian Territory. Sister Louisa was a widow with several children and she later married a Choctaw Indian of the name of Fred Watkins. He was intelligent man but not very well educated but he and my sister worked together and he expected her to look after their business matters, so in this way they prospered and owned much land and property in the vicinity of the little settlement of Arthur, which is now in Stephens County twelve miles southeast of Duncan. Mr. Watkins had also been married before and had two children, a girl, Lucie, who married Will Little, and a boy, named George Watkins.

In the early part of 1890's I came to the Indian Territory to visit my sister Louisa and also to see the country and while here, she and her husband insisted that I buy a few head of cattle and leave the cattle with them on their range and they would take care of them along with their own and in that way they could accumulate some stock for me and be at no expense themselves. I purchased the cattle and my sister and her husband took care of them but I, of course, came back from time to time, until in 1898 my herd had reached such a number that I felt it was asking too much of them to care for my cattle any longer, so I moved my family to the Indian Territory and settled on some of their land near Arthur.

I farmed and raised cattle and prospered rapidly, but continued to inquire about my brother Foster. One day a man who had come to be my friend, of the name of John Blue, came and told me that he was going to make a trip over on Wild Horse Creek and he knew of a man who might be my lost brother and wanted me to go along with him. We went in a two-horse wagon. There were no roads except wagon tracks as that part of the Territory was thinly settled. In the afternoon we drove to a board hut with a lean-to on the side, down on the creek where the brush was thick as a jungle. There was a rail and brush fence around the yard and John Blue said, "This is the place where I think you will find the man." I got out of the wagon and Blue set still. No one can imagine my feelings as I went around that cabin, for I saw there was someone behind the house, I did not know a great deal about the home conduct of the Indians and I had learned that this place belonged to a Chickasaw by the name of Wolf.

Behind the hut sat an Indian woman churning with a wooden dasher in a big old fashioned big-at-the-bottom and little-at-the-top cedarwood churn, bound with brass hoops. Near by, leaning against the wall, stood an old man, unshaven and ragged, with clothing as dirty as it was possible for garments to be. He spoke and I said, "I am looking for Foster Copeland," and he replied, "That is my name." I said, "I am Felix Copeland of Tennessee and I want to find my brother." He was very much like an Indian, he said, "Who was your Father?" and I said, "Wilkerson Copeland," and I happened to remember that my half-brothers and sisters had called my mother Polly, so I said, "I am Polly's oldest boy." At that he grabbed me by the hand and began to weep and said, "Yes and you are my baby brother." We were both so happy and I told him how we had searched for him and how Sister Louisa and our brothers Joshua, Purl and Jim had been to him all the time, as they were all living at Arthur. I learned that the War had taken him away for a long time, then he had drifted into the Indian Territory and married a Chicasaw woman. They had lived in the Arbuckle Mountain region and had reared one child, a daughter. I do not remember her name. Then his wife had died and the girl had married and he had come to live with the Wolf family. At last I thought of John Blue in the wagon and I told brother who was with me. He said he knew Blue well. He introduced me to the woman and said she was the wife of his employer. She insisted that we remain all night, but Blue, finding that I was in the right place, said he must go on.

I remained but they were all Indians and queer to me. I did not know how they might feel about me. But Wolf came home and I saw that Brother was general manager of the stock and everything about the place. Wolf was a wealthy man and owned a great number of stock.

That night they put me to sleep in the lean-to on a straw tick, but I did not sleep. There was a little square window in the side and I watched those Indians all night as they kept up a continual coming and going all night.

Very early next morning I heard Brother tell Wolf that I wanted him to go home with me and spend a while. Wolf said, "Well, why not go? That is the thing to do." Brother said he thought we were society people and he had no clothes fit to wear. Wolf said he would get some clothes for him, and the next morning told brother to take two saddle horses and ride over the country and show me all I wanted to see, then take a load of apples, for they had as fine apple orchard as ever grew in Tennessee, and drive over to Davis and sell them, then go to a certain merchant and tell him that Wolf would pay for anything Brother wanted and to buy himself a suit of clothes.

We did as Wolf said and sold the apples in Davis, then when we went to purchase the clothing, the merchant put out the suit we wanted him to have and Brother balked. He said it was too fine for him, but we insisted and I told the merchant that if Wolf should object to the price I would pay for it myself and that I wanted my brother fitted out with everyday clothes also; and, for Brother's benefit, I told him that my family were not society people but that we dressed and lived like our associates and had as good living as we could afford. Brother took the clothing and we went back to the ranch. I had him gather up all his clothes as I told him my wife and daughters would want to fix them for him. He picked them up from all over the place, the lot, by the side of the fence and in the corners until he had two cotton sacks full. Mrs. Copeland said, "I never saw such rags."

He went home with me but acted just like an Indian in standing off to himself. He seemed glad to see all the family and our sister. They fixed up his clothing and he visited with us several days but he returned to his place on the Wolf Ranch. He often came back for visits.

I formed a partnership with John Horton and we put in a store at Harrisburg and we did a fine business, taking in a large amount of money.

One afternoon, and the weather was very cold as it was Winter, John Horton and I were alone in the store. Two men rode up on horseback and came in at the rear door. The building was large and long. They came to the store and I asked if I could do something for them? One of them said that he wanted some Star Chewing Tobacco, which was at the far end of the store. I took it out and he said he would take the plug but for me to cut it up for him so he could carry it easily. I did so and he handed me a ten dollar bill from a great big roll of the raggediest, dirtiest bills I ever saw. Horton had the money, which we had on hand, in a bag in his pocket as we were fixing to close up. He had about two or three hundred dollars, the one day's business. Because the robberies were common in those days we always sent any large amount of money to Duncan, and we had sent over several thousand dollars the day before. Horton started to hand me the change when I heard a gun click in the hands of the fellow walking behind me and I saw the other one draw on Horton. They said, "Hand it all over," and he did. Horton's twelve year old boy came in about that time they stood him beside me. They marched us all down the steps and made us stand beside their horses which were covered with guns and ammunition. They jumped on their horses and kept us covered until they got out of sight, then they began to shoot and were joined by six others who had stolen horses and mules. They had even gone into the lot of the Richardson family while they were at supper and taken their horses and a new buggy with the harness.

This was the Casey Band of outlaws and they knew where everything in the country was located but they missed our money by one day, however, they got some of our stock. They made a wholesale robbery and the settlers were enraged that they formed a great posse and I hastened my oldest son, Joe, to Duncan to inform the officers and ask that they come to direct the hunt for the thieves and the stock.

The whole country took part in the chase and soon the officers at Lewoka in the Seminole Nation notified us that they had captured some of the Casey Band together with some the stolen stock which had been hidden in the brush about a mile north of the nearest town of Wewoka, which at that time was nothing but a village with a few white people and a lot of Indians and negroes. One of my neighbors who had seen the robbers wanted me to identify the men. One of the outlands had been killed and I found him to be one of the men who robbed me and Horton, the other men I could not identify as I had not seen them, but Casey, who was the other man in the store robbery had gotten away and gone back to the Arbuckel Mountain, to which place a posse trailed him and, running into his camp, forced the cattle to run for cover and one of the possemen grabbed Casey's own gun which he had left, and shot him with it.

This was the last of the Casey Outlaw Band and the last robbery raid in that part of the country, of which I have any knowledge. We got back most of our stock and I made other trips to Wewoka to bring them back as I was acquainted with the rough country through which we had to travel without roads.

I learned that my brother Foster, was well liked among the Indians and was known to them as Dad Copeland or just Dad. He continued to live among them until his death a few years later, then we brought him to Arthur and buried him in the cemetery there.

In 1903 I moved to the Eiowa country and settled on a farm three miles north and three miles west of Lone Wolf. I still own that farm which I farmed until recent years when I have grown too old to work. I have now bought a home in town and live in it, while my grandchildren are in business around me. My wife I am happy to say is yet living. [This ends the interview on 15 Oct 1937 with William Felix Copeland, Lone Wolf, Kiowo County, Oklahoma (82 years year old)]

Life of Margaret Elmore Wilson

by Dale Welch*

Margaret Elmore was nearing her teenage years when the War Between the States broke out.

Her parents were Julius and Nancy Miller Elmore. Her brothers and sisters included Martha J., Malinda, Thursa A., William Daniel, Louisa, Allen, Christopher Columbus and Enoch Elmore.

The Elmore family lived in the Elmore community of what was then Putnam County but is now part of Cumberland County, an area near the Putnam, Cumberland, Fentress and Overton County lines in what is now called the Clear Creek community.

Margaret and her brothers and sisters helped their parents work in the fields during the day. Sometimes in the late afternoon, since she was one of the younger children. Margaret was allowed to go down to Clear Creek and sometimes to the East Fork of the Obey River to fish.

If she caught anything worthwhile, she would of course take her catch home, clean the fish and fix them for supper. The usual family routine was that, after supper, the family would finish up the chores for the day.

A saga of real life and a part of American History witnessed by our ancestors." Marlin Morrell Wightman.*

 "Allen Elmore is the father of Vernie Elmore who married Reuben Wightman, my parents." Marlin Morrell Wightman.

Since they lived near some of the major roads* through the area, the Elmores saw lots of travelers.

 This could have been the "Trail of Tears." Andrew Jackson drove the Cherokees from North Carolina to western Reservations on the Trail of Tears long before the Civil War.*

Slave traders would herd their human wares by the Elmores' home, stopping to water and feed them at the nearby stream.

Once, little Margaret heard one of the women slaves crying. The woman, facing the fire, had her back to Margaret. When the girl ran over to see what was wrong, she saw that the woman, still crying, was milking her breasts into the fire.

"What'sre you crying about," asked Margaret, full of concern and curious.

The woman weepingly said, "They sold my baby from me."

Margaret was speechless. In her young mind, she couldn't imagine even with what her eyes had already seen, that anyone would be so cruel as to take a mother's baby and sell it.

This incident stuck deeply in Margaret's mind, and many years later she told her great-grandchildren about it.

Once, when the rebellion had begun, a band of Confederate guerillas raided the Elmore home. Guerillas, whether they called themselves

"Confederate" or "Union," usually didn't really care which side folks were on. Much of the time they were for whichever side it was convenient for them to be on at the time. Of course, they were always on their own side.

When a band would come through, some of the older men in the community would hide out, fearful that they might be killed. Margaret Elmore's father, Julius, among them.

Families also had to be pretty ingenious about hiding their food and other belongings to keep these guerilla groups from taking everything they had.

One day a group of these men rode upon the Elmore farm, turned things upside down and took what they wanted. The family could do nothing but watch.

One of the marauders took from the porch a basket of eggs which had been collected by Nancy's mother, Margaret. When he dumped the eggs in a sack, a false bottom in the basket fell out — and out came a dollar bill that Nancy thought was well concealed.

Then the man, glancing about to see that none of his fellow "patriots" was watching, placed the dollar back into the basket and replaced the false bottom. He hung the basket back up on the porch, looked at Nancy and winked.

Eventually, the guerrillas had collected everything they wanted, and they left.

Some years later Margaret Elmore married Joseph Wilson, Berry and Julia Beaty's son. Joseph's mother, Julia, was a first cousin to Tinker Dave Beaty, and his father was a member of Tinker Dave's Independent Scouts, the Union guerrillas of the area.

To Joseph and Margaret were born three daughters: Artem, who married William Spencer Phillips; Julia, named after her Grandma Wilson, who never married; and Rillie, who married Remus Hammock.

Joseph Wilson died on March 1, 1894, just five days away from his 37th birthday. It was said that his lungs burst when he tried to remove a tree from the road.

This left Margaret with three daughters to raise on her own, and she managed the best way she could. She sheared the sheep, spun the wool, made clothes, tended to the livestock, worked the fields and with God's help, she made a life for them.

Of her three daughters, Artem was the only one to have children. She married William Spencer Phillips and gave birth on Oct. 20, 1902, to a daughter whom they named Bertha Lee Phillips.

Then about two years later, Artem's husband died on Oct. 12, 1904.

A few years later, she married again. Henry Bilbrey was a widower with two small children of his own, Clinton and Bessie.

One day after her 15th birthday, Bertha married Robert Lee Welch who was from Welch Hollow, just west of Montercy, the son of Harvey Dillard and Thursa Jane Ford Welch. Robert was a timber worker and had been living with his uncle, Sam A. Ford, who operated a general store in the Lovejoy community of Overton County.

With the marriage of granddaughter Bertha. Martha Elmore became a great-grandmother seven times — Hollis, Herschel, Gerstel, Talmadge, Jewell, Joe and Dimple. Just a few months after giving birth to Dimple, however, Bertha contracted typhoid fever.

Realizing that there was little or not hope for recovery and that her husband wouldn't want the job of raising them, she planned out where her children would go, divided among various family members. Then she died.

Two of the children, the oldest, two boys Hollis and Herschel, went to live with their great-grandmother, Margaret Elmore Wilson.

Margaret, born before the Civil War, died in 1938. She was buried beside the grave of her husband in the Eilson Cemetery near Lovejoy. Several of her family now lie near her.

Walter Daniel Wightman - Rotary International Scholarships. The 10th anniversary for these awards was given in memory of a local banking executive who was a Southtowns community leader for over half a century. These scholarships were created from donations by Wightman's sons — Graham D. Wightman of Corning, N. Y., and David L. Wightman of Hingham, Mass., along with contributions from their respective employers, Corning Inc. and W. R. Grace & Company.

Graham Wightman, the son of Walter Daniel[9] Wightman, received during the week of July 25, 1994 a package from the Eden-North Collins Rotary Club. In it was a bound certificate, ribboned medal, and lapel pin honoring his father posthumously for his service to Rotary. Mr. Wightman was designated a "Paul Harris Fellow" which is one of the most prestigious a wards that Rotary can give to its members. It is "in appreciation of tangible and significant assistance given for the furtherance of better understanding and friendly relations among peoples of the world."

The following excerpts are from a presentation made by his son, Graham, to the graduating class of 1993 at one of the two high schools where scholarships were set up by Graham and his brother, David.

"My father, Walter Wightman, passed away in 1984 at the age of 84. He had been a respected member of the Southtown's banking community for over 57 years. During this period, he had been particularly active in the North Collins bank from the mid-1930's through the mid-60's. Dad retired in 1966 as Senior Executive Vice-President of Liberty National Bank and remained a member of its Advisory Board for the Southtown's area until 1974. Until 1975, he was also a Director of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association (now the Anchor Savings Bank), located in Hamburg. I remember on several occasions taking a leisurely drive around southern Erie County and Dad would recall with obvious pride the farms and businesses he was able to help get started. To Dad, people he did business with were not just account numbers on some ledger. They were flesh and blood people with hopes and aspirations, abilities, good habits and bad. He knew their families by name and was familiar with their triumphs and their tribulations.

"While he was active in numerous community affairs in Hamburg, North Collins, and throughout Southern Erie County, nothing gave him more pleasure or exemplified his commitment to community service than his membership in Rotary International. A charter member and past-president of the Eden-North Collins Rotary Club and an honorary member of the Hamburg Rotary Club, he had an enviable record of 42 years of perfect attendance. Throughout his life, Dad emphasized the need for education. He was instrumental in establishing student-loan programs through the Rotary Club as well as through the banks for which he worked.

"My brother David and I felt it appropriate, therefore, to continue our father's commitment to education by establishing two scholarships in his memory at our alma maters - Hamburg and North Collins Central High Schools. These scholarships are given annually to the graduating senior in each school selected by committees appointed by the respective school principals, - whose achievements exhibit a balance between scholarship and commitment to family, school, and community responsibilities. The individual must also demonstrate excellent character and a sense of fairness in dealings with people and finally, a desire to establish a career as evidenced by acceptance by an accredited four-year college or university. The winner of the scholarship received a check for $2000 to be applied toward college expenses. In addition, his or her name is engraved upon a plaque which will be on permanent display at their respective school."

The president of the Liberty National Bank and Trust Company had this to say on the retirement of Walter Wightman, Executive Vice President, and as Officer-in-Charge of the Bank's Hamburg Office: "Mr. Wightman, a banker for over 48 years, began his banking career as a clerk with the former Peoples Bank of Hamburg, which merged with Liberty National Bank March 5, 1964. In March 1961 he was appointed Executive Vice President. He is a director of the South Towns Builders Association and a director of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Hamburg. Mr. Wightman is a member of the Community Village Redevelopment Group, the Elks, Masons, The Eden-North Collins Rotary Club, Hamburg Rod and Gun Club and Springville Country Club. He has devoted much of this time to charitable drives and other civic activities."

Children:

i. Graham Davis[10] Wightman, (see also page 487), b. 13 Feb 1933; m. Dolores Anne Croft, b. 17 Nov 1942. Graham began his career with Corning Glass Works [now Corning, Inc.]. He retired in 1995 from the position of Supervisor of the CAV Video Products Laboratory, a joint venture of Corning with the Asahi Glass Company of Japan. The following are highlights of his youth and as a young adult:

"Active in several extra-curricular activities in high school such as band and orchestra (where I played clarinet), lettered in three sports (soccer, basketball, and baseball), chorus, student government, and art editor of the yearbook. Being in a class of only 33 students was a big advantage since you were encouraged to participate in many things.

"All twelve years of primary and secondary school were in the same community of North Collins [actually in the same school building] but from the 4th grade on, we lived in Hamburg, NY, ten miles closer to Buffalo, and Dad and I commuted each day to North Collins. Participated in Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts in Hamburg. This forced me to relate to two different peer groups at the same time.

"I remember where I was at the time that I heard about V-E Day and V-J Day. I was riding in the family car with my parents when news of V-E Day came over the radio. I was walking across the parade ground at Boy Scout camp when I first learned that V-J Day had arrived. There were some great Decoration Day Parades in the years following WWII. Our house was right on the parade route and the whole extended family found a spot on our front lawn.

"Spent five wonderful summers as a counselor at a Boys and Girls Club at the famous Chautaugua Institution in Chautaugua, NY between 1948 and 1952. There were so many things for a person my age to do there, as there was for all age groups (and still is!). The quality of the music, speakers (on any topic you can thing of), dance, opera, theater, and religious services (with 5,000 in the congregation on Sunday) had quite an impact on my young life. Plus I was living 'on my own'.

"I commuted back and forth to the University of Buffalo every day from home (1950-55). While my marks were probably better and it certainly was cheaper, I vowed that my kids would have the full experience of going away to college, which they did.

"My full year in Korea (1956) with the U. S. Air Force (2nd Lieutenant) after the hostilities had ceased was a growing rather than what could have been a debilitating experience. My job as Base Installations Engineer and Fire Marshall enabled me to get good management experience and also to see quite a bit of Korea (including an island out in the Yellow Sea with access by air only when the tide was out and the beach was dry). The Catholic Chaplain, myself, and my boss (Capt. John Ward) used to visit children's orphanages in Seoul and up near the DMZ. What a crew — a Catholic, a Protestant and an Athiest — delivering food, clothing and blankets.

"My memories of graduate study at RPI (1958-59) are of hard work and not much play, living on frozen dinners (just new on the market — buy one, get one free), and controlling the temperature of my basement apartment in an old house by opening or shutting the door to an outside entry way. My main recreation was reading my subscription to Time magazine on Friday evenings at 13¢ a copy.

"Shortly after coming to Corning in 1959, a friend and I went together on a Star Class one-design sailboat — 23 feet of beauty that we planned to race on Keuka Lake and other places. It didn't take us too many races to discover that the boat, built in the 30's, was no longer competitive, even taking our bumbling yachtsmanship into account. We sold it and each of us bought our own newer (but still used) models, which then made our bumbling even more obvious. We had a lot of fun and raced the boats on many lakes around the Northeast.

"When I came to Corning as a bachelor, I had a wonderful Irish widow landlady in her seventies, Mr. Helen Schroeder. She had a heart of gold, was an excellent cook, and made sure I didn't get into trouble.

"One of the highlights of those early years in Corning was living summers on Keuka Lake. Six of us bachelor men would rent a cottage for the whole summer and either commute the 40 miles each day or go up on weekends. We used to do some pretty wild things and had an awful lot of fun.

"Another highlight was the backpacking trip that a good friend (Ed. Bush) and I took into the Sierras in California in 1963. We spent 10 days up in gorgeous mountains between 10 and 14 thousand feet with the trails pretty much to ourselves. One day we climbed Mt. Brewer and found ourselves on a rocky ridge with a snow field falling off abruptly for thousands of feet on our left and a 3500 foot precipice going straight down on our right and a view of Mt. Whitney just a few short miles away in the distance.

Highlights of Employment and Marriage:

"A wonderful wife who enjoys many of the things that I enjoy — beauty of nature, sunlight, and the out-of-doors. We enjoy hiking, backpacking, bird watching, nature watching at many of our nearby ponds, swamps, and fields, cross country skiing, rose growing, photography, music, and travel.

"Two wonderful kids who have learned the value of hard work, a good sense of right from wrong, and have been able to avoid some of the pitfalls that seem to be endemic to their peer generation. Some of the credit goes to two sets of grandparents who have had considerable interaction with and much love for our kids.

"Several close friends and their children over the years who we have traveled with, hiked with, beached with, discussed the world's problems with, built Habitat for Humanity houses with, worshiped with, and several other great things together with.

"Worked 36 years for a great company, Corning Incorporated, in a variety of positions from production to marketing to product development and testing, offering a multitude of opportunities to use the creative juices for problems solving and product development. Had the opportunity to work with RCA and Zenith and several other companies in the development of color television and rectangular television over the years. It was an exciting time. Our work was not only in the design, development, and manufacture of the glass envelope that our customers made TV tubes out of, but also working with our customers on their manufacturing processes that our glass had to survive.

"A highlight of our family life was our travels together on vacations around the country. At least four round trips to the West Coast and back via various routes. Dee and I have also traveled over 17,000 miles on AMTRAK around the country. Before that, in the late 60's and 70's, we traveled in a VW Camper with a pop up top. A lot of fun and enabled us to see a great deal of our great country.

"Also three highlights have been the three backpacking trips Dee and I took with our good friends, Ed and Louise Bush. One trip was to the Sawtooth Mountains of Idaho in 1971, another was to the Wind River Range in Wyoming in 1992, and the third was a rafting & backpacking trip to the San Juan River region of southeastern Utah in 1994. This summer (1996), we are planning a canal trip in England and some hiking in Wales.

"A family trip to Hawaii in 1987 after Chris graduated from College. It was a great time together, a lot of fun visiting Oahu, Kuai, and Maui islands.

"Finally, I would be remiss in not mentioning what my church, The First Presbyterian Church of Corning, has meant to me in support and opportunity for service. This included mission trips to Guatemala in 1980 with my family, to Nicaragua in 1991 and 1993, and to Mexico in 1996 which have been quite memorable.

EDEN SIBLINGS HAVE LONGEVITY IN THEIR VEINS*

By Bob Buyer News Staff Reporter

They are a rare family, the Wightman six of Eden.

George, John, Gladys, Lucy, Alice and Mabel are the children of the late Heman Wightman and his second wife, the former Bertha Thompson. Their combined ages, from Mabel's 78 to Gladys' 98, add up to 530 years.

"I doubt that any family today could claim that their father was born a year before the California Gold Rush and have all six of his children alive and in good health," wrote Daniel D. Wightman of Colton, Ore., a son and nephew of the Wightman six.

His grandfather, Heman, and Heman's twin brother, Herman, were born in the Town of Collins in 1848 but lived most of their lives in Eden, where each became a justice of the peace.

In 1903, Heman left the grist mill that he and Herman had operated in Eden's Clarksburg area and bought a 32-acre farm on what now is Sandrock Road. With his wife, their six children and horses, he operated a vegetable farm.

"Once or twice a week in the summer our father would set out long before dawn and drive his horse and wagon to the Buffalo market to sell our grapes, apples, pumpkins, melons and vegetable," remembered George, 89.

He is a retired educator whose career included being the supervising principal at Little Valley and Ripley Central schools.

While all refer to their birthplace and onetime workplace as "the farm," George displayed a plaque that lists its proper name as Hickory Hill Farm.

"That's because we have a big hickory tree in the back that gives us bushels of hickory nuts," he said.

*See page 314 and 479 for more information on the Wightman six of Eden.

"All of us return to the farm frequently," said Alice, 87, a retired nurse and nurse-teacher who lives in Snyder.

Wednesday, five of the Wightman six gathered again. Missing was John, 82, a retired federal employee who lives in Dayton, Ohio.

Before the picture-taking, Wightman Rice, the 98-year-old who still lives in Eden, busied herself in the kitchen, pulling the green stems from a quart of strawberries.

"We're having shortcake for desert after our fried chicken dinner." she explained.

Gladys remembered her father once scolding her for picking the wrong size apples for the market.

"I picked the big ones, and he said that the small ones were for the market." she recalled.

She told of another time when she hung on and drove a runaway horse team into a yard without getting hurt.

Sitting out on the porch was Mabel Wightman Daly, 78, of Niagara Falls, a retired teacher and the family "baby."

Mrs. Daly, whose first husband was killed during the American invasion of Italy during Word War II, insists that her sisters and brothers did not spoil her.

"My father was very strict," she said.

"Well, maybe Mabel did get out of some work because she was the youngest," said Lucy, 90, a retired Niagara Falls teacher who now occupies the well-kept Hickory Hill Farm homestead. "After all, she was the youngest."

Lucy has kept a political scrapbook for many years that includes photographs and stories about the presidents and events of her time. She was an avowed Republican, and one of her recent photographic acquisitions is a presidential-like 8-inch by 10-inch color picture of House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

I am sending a letter to President Clinton demanding that American soldiers only be led by American generals," she said.

Like his late Uncle Herman, George said he always has voted for Republican presidential candidates.

"But right now, I like what President Clinton has been doing," he said.

His wife of 60 years, the former Yvonne Lemier of nearby Boston, was along for this gathering.

"My husband's family received me from the start. I feel as though I am a Wightman," she said.

As for the number of their descendants, the Wightman six were stumped.

"George and Yvonne alone have about 40," someone said.

"A BIOGRAPHY OF WILLIAM WIGHTMAN, SR.
AS TOLD BY HIMSELF, PAYSON, UTAH 13 May 1907

"I was born at Rushford, Allegheny County, New York, on October 19th 1833. My father's name was William Wightman, and my mother's name was Dolly Eaton Wightman. Grandmother, Uncle Charles, Father, Mother, Charles, Aunt Jane were baptized in Mormon Church at Rushford in January, 1834. Grandfather never joined the Church.

"My brother and mother, Uncle Charles and Aunt Jane moved to Kirtland [Ohio] in the fall of 1835. They could not rent a house in Kirtland, so they lived at Willowby Creek Bridge, four miles from the Kirtland Temple. Father and Mother went to Far West, Caldwell County, Missouri, in the spring of 1836, in what was called the "Kirkland Camp". We lived at Log Creek, seven miles from Far West. Father taught school there, and I went. I can remember when we were driven into Far West by the mob in the fall of 1837. Father and others were taken prisoners and were kept there three or four months, and in order to get away, they went one anothe[1]r's bonds to appear at court. None of them could do business in their own names after they went to Illinois. The officers were after them, Grandfather and Grandmother Eaton, Lyman and Otis moved back to Illinois, but lost two three-year old steers. Mother was told that when he got out of jail, he could have them. He found the steers. We were some of the last ones to get away.

"It was in February, 1839, before we got to the Mississippi River, and the ice was breaking up, so we camped on the river bank six weeks before crossing the river and did well. Uncle Charles Wightman worked a year or two at Fort Levensworth. I can remember seeing his there. However, we lived very poor. When we had plenty, we had biscuits on Sunday morning. There were no flour mills in the country, and the corn cracker mills would freeze up in the winter, so they would hollow out a big stump and rig up a spring pole pounder in those days! It was a very unhealthful country. My father was a very strong man, so we did not suffer as much as a good many and were not sick, but think of his yoking up young steers and fixing up a cart to move in the dead of winter and such people to pass through. I can remember very little in moving across the state. We camped on the west side of the river from Quincy, where a good many were camped. There was a young man who had moved with us, and while we were camped, he made a swing supposing it to be wild grape vine, but it turned out to be Poison Ivy. I was very sick for a long time. I can just recollect living in Quincy three months. The people were very good to the Mormons there.

"We moved from there to Fountain Green, Handcock County, a few miles from Carthage, and my brother David was born there.

"A short time after, the church bought forty acres from Abselem and William Perkins and started a town which they called Ramus. (After it was changed to Macidonia). Father was the first bishop. He got up a company of what was called "Lancers Cavalry". I can remember seeing them train. They carried a staff eight or ten feet long, a spear on one side, a tomahawk on the other side and a hook for cutting bridle reins and with ribbons of different colors hanging down. They were well drilled. A good many people were living in that town: the Perkins, Ben Johnson and his five brothers, Alaman Babet, the Quailes, the Quirks and all of the Manxmans were there in the church at that time. There were also the Cowleys and the Vances, in fact, it got to be quite a town, all Mormons.

"I think we went back to Kirtland on a visit in 1840. We went to Springfield, Ohio, then to Columbus. Grandfather, Grandmother, Uncle Erastus and wife and one little girl, Uncle Charley and Aunt Jane, whom he afterwards married, all went to see Aunt Mary Dixon. The reason I can remember the trip so well is that we had a spring rig, and a boy caught hold under the spring rig and got his hands smashed. I was at a meeting in the Temple at Kirtland in 1840. It was crowded.

"As we went back that fall, Father would stop and make pitch forks and garden rakes and then peddle them off to make expenses. He was very lively. Any boy coming into his shop about my age, would have to wrestle with me. He would stop his work and have some fun out of it. Uncle Charley tells a joke on him. He challenged a boy who happened along to wrestle with him and the boy threw him. Then his brothers made fun of him. His weight was 125 pounds. He was no speaker.

"Not long after we got back from Kirtland, Joseph and Hyrum Smith came out to Ramus, gathering means for the Temple at Nauvoo. Father gave all he had except his household furniture and blacksmith tools. He had a good house and lot. A short time after, he was called into Nauvoo, and the Church gave him a house and lot for which Uncle Erastus was offered $1500.00 after Father and Mother died. The house was not much, but the lot was valuable. We never got anything for it. I think Father left 160 acres in Ramus, which was twenty or twenty-five miles from Nauvoo, for which he got nothing. I can remember running around the foundation walls of the Temple and going to school near what was called the Nauvoo House. One of the boys that went to school was young Joseph Smith, While going to that school, Orson Pratt had trouble with his wife and went out of his mind. A party in search of him came past the school house and a lot of boys ran away from school and finally ended up in an apple orchard. Pratt was found down the river in the woods.

"Father spent a good deal of his time training and practicing the sword exercise. Morris Phelps lived on one side and John Lytol on the other side. Across the street lived Hyrum Clawson and his mother in a large band of the river. Most of the city was on the flats. We lived at the foot of the hill on the flats. I went to school on the hill east in a log house. The teacher was James Morrow, who was afterwards killed by Howard Eagen while they were coming into the valley. It was caused by some trouble over Eagen's wife. Morrow was called the best teacher in Nauvoo. We read the Book of Mormon, and some of us almost knew it by heart. Morrow was a nephew of Enoch and a cousin of Hyrum Clawson.

"We must have lived eighteen months or two years in the place before Father died. It was very sickly there. Uncle Erastus was with him during his sickness with Typhus fever. How he did beg to have Joseph Smith come and see him and have Joseph Smith administer to him. The Prophet started two or three times to come out, but they were after him, and his friends would not let him come. I was baptized by John Taylor in the Mississippi River and confirmed by my father. There was a large number baptized that day. Joseph Smith took care of the grown people and John Taylor the children. At that time a great many were baptized for their health. The Scotch Mormons with such large, healthy families in four or five weeks would be down with ague and chills and all kinds of fever. The country was level, and the grass grew so rank over the small streams that green scum became very thick on the surface. In turning so much sod, rotting with vegetation, a great many people contracted the disease of the climate. The old settlers were all from the Southern States, and were what the negroes called "the poor white trash". They were long, lanky fellows, yellow, with their skins drawn over their bones.

"Morris Phelps was the man who changed clothes with Joseph Smith in Liberty Jail. Joseph walked out. He had such influence over men that there was hardly a Mormon but would have done the same. The first Mormons were a rough, hardy lot of men from the Eastern States. John Lytol was the man who broke in the door of the printing press, and they tore everything to pieces. So many things had been published against the Mormons that some turned against the Church, and were Joseph's most bitter enemies. Those were the Lowes and the Fosters who were Mormons before.

"Father died in the fall of 1842, and we moved out to Fountain Green where Mother had two sisters living by the name of Brunson and White. We lived with the Brunsons not a great distance from where we had lived before. Lyman and Otis were living there also but soon after moved to Rushford and so did Grandfather and Grandmother. Mother worried a great deal. Mary was born the first of February, 1842. Mother lived three weeks. She gave her baby to Caroline Wightman, and Uncle Erastus was appointed our Guardian. We used to have a hard time to get milk for the baby. I have gone a mile or two when it was very cold to get it. They would sweeten bread with milk, put it in a cloth and let her suck it. I would wash the cloth out. I also did all of her washing. There was hardly any money in the country at that time, and how hard it was to get along! They were very good to me, but a boy of two years could not see that he should do that kind of work. Davis was small. Just think of taking four children all under ten years of age and caring for them! They had one little girl. Mary, the baby, lived to be about forty years old. Aunt Caroline had nine children and lost them. I think one lived to be abut nine, and Mary lived along with them.

Frontier life was difficult and often violent. Caroline had nine children and lost all of them.

"July, 3rd: 1907

"Since writing, Grandma has gone to the great beyond. (His wife) I tried so hard to get her to write what she knew about her folks. She was sick only two and a half hours. Oh my, it was hard to part from her! (Mother and I were in the Wightman Hotel when she died-Donna Burgess). If she had lived till the fifth of August, we would have been married fifty-two years and been acquainted five or six years before that. I am just waiting for my time to come, but when I think how easily she passed away, I cannot but be thankful. We were getting things fixed so as to enjoy life. We never spent a happier time than last winter. And such a nice lot of boys and girls she has raised.

"Uncle Erastus Wightman went to Nauvoo in the fall of 1845, and in coming home, he saw the mob burning the Mormon's homes. His cattle were covered with lather. He packed up his things (At that time we were living near Laharp, twenty miles away) and went to Nauvoo in the fall of 1845, and went to our old home. I think he went back after another load. When he got back home, his old neighbors told him they would not hurt him. He came after us, and we moved back that making the second drive of that kind I was in. That winter and spring, he made a lot wagons and traded them to the Mormons for cattle. When the Church went west, he went to Wisconsin with the cattle and his two wagons. It was a very new country at that time. Water was scarce. In some places the wells were over a hundred feet deep, and could let us have only enough to drink. We were a little out of Racine, close to Voree. We sold the cattle and did well. James Strong was the first to settle Voree. Aunt Caroline was taken sick there among the Norwegians and had a hard time of it. That was harvesting time to Lyman and I went to work at fifty cents a day. As the wheat was all cradled, the grain was heavy, and very few men could rake and bind as fast as it was cut, so we raked it in bundles. Fifty cents a day was considered high wages.

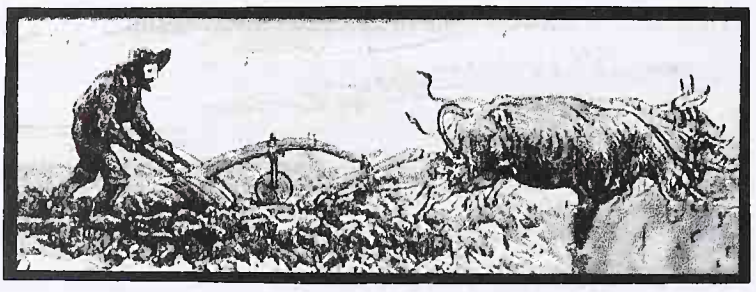
"As soon as Aunt got so we could travel, we left. About five miles out, we came across two families that we knew. One was Aunt Rhoda Snell's sister, Mary Frank. We were treated so kindly there. They had about two thousand dollars, and that was a lot of money. It was kept in our bread chest, and Lyman and I slept on it. One cow had been kept so as to have milk in getting to Chicago. I was very tired and hungry when we arrived. Uncle went into town (Chicago at that time was only a town.) and bought some bakery bread. New milk and bakery bread was all that we ate. I was very sick. I never liked new milk and bakery bread after that. I could not eat it for thirty years after that.



"Uncle Joseph Wightman lived seven miles from Jackson, Michigan. We stayed a long time that fall of 1846 with him. I drove and ploughed with oxen, and that was the best yoke of oxen I ever saw, as they kept right up with the good horses. They were fed grain. I was taken sick, went out under an apple tree, and in the shade I went to sleep. When I woke up, I was in the sun shaking worse than any chill. It was a good many years before I got rid of the effects of that sickness. I would get bilious twice a year, and I was given lobely. If you think it is pleasant, try it. I knew they were going to leave David because they had no children. When they got ready to start, he was taken over to a farm two or three miles away, and we were never together again.

"I was so sick I hardly remember going from there back to Ohio. It was early in the winter when we got back to Kirtland. At that time, Uncle Charles Wightman was married, and Uncle Hyrum Dixon was married to Aunt Mary Wightman, Father's oldest sister and a daughter eighteen years old. They had lived in Utica, New York. She was very highly educated, but she only lived a year or two. She and her mother died with consumption, the only one in our Wightman family to have died of that disease that I know anything about. He was not healthy. When we got there, both families lived in a large frame house, called "The Bank Farm". At one time, it belonged to Eliza and Erastus Snow's father when they were young. We moved in. At that time I was twelve years old.

"Uncle Charles Dixon lived two and half miles away. Next summer Uncle Erastus bought the farm, bought the cows and ran a dairy. We got up wagons and traded them for cows. While he was away, his wife had twin boys. She and both of them died and were buried in one coffin. Our folks did not know where to find him. One night he lift his cows twenty miles from home and got home at 11 o'clock, rode up to the window and called to her. (She had been buried two weeks.) He walked the floor such a long time, and was never the same after that. One little girl, Mary and I were the only ones left as Lyman was living with Uncle Charley. Aunt Caroline's sister came on and helped us with the cheese one summer, but the next, he and I milked thirty head of cows and made the cheese. Mary was seven years old and I was fourteen. He was very nervous, so I thought I had a had a hard time. In the winter I went to school, but in the mornings and evenings, when not doing chores, I was in the shop. I sawed out twenty sets of felleys out of two-inch plank and bored holes in eighty hubs where the spokes go, so you see I have been one of the class who had to work or starve. Most everyone got up at four in the morning. An apprentice came to work in the evening of the 20th of September and worked till 9 o'clock. I worked from twelve to fourteen hours per day and generally more.

"Uncle Erastus finally sold the farm and went to Michigan and kept store. He took Mary and the little girl — I can't remember her name. I saw him once after that when Lyman was with him a short time. He lived until Mary was married, but the little girl died soon after he moved there.

"When I was sixteen years old, I went to work in a blacksmith shop for Uncle Charley and stayed with him until the 24th of April, 1854. I could not have been treated better by my own father. During this time, Lucretia and Charley Pepper and their mother came on from Quincy, Illinois. (About 1850). She was only nine years old, and I thought she was all right. During this time, Uncle built a large, cut-stone house and lived in it until 1862, then he and Chris Dixon and families came on to Utah. Grandma lived with Aunt Jane Dixon until she died. She was a very strong Mormon. She took a lot of pains to hunt up hers and the Wightman genealogy. I had always wanted to go to Utah, but I think it was on account of the little girl that I got started sooner. There were Grandfather and Grandmother Dixon, Jane Pepper, Lucretia and Charley Pepper, and a missionary by the name of B. Mitchell who came on with us. We left Kirtland on the 24th of April, 1854. We took wagons from Kirtland, bought oxen at Rock Island as the Rock Island Railroad was only completed to there at that time. There were only ten in the company. Four out of that company died with Cholera. We drove by Iowa City and Des Moines to Council Bluffs, crossed the river the first day of June 1854, at Florence, six miles from Omaha. I cannot tell the trip as well as Grandma's diary. (Her diary was burned in the Wightman Hotel fire.) We got to Salt Lake on the fourth of August. Grandma

Four Mormons out of that company died with Cholera on the way west.

Pepper bought a house in the Seventh Ward, and I lived with her and went to work at blacksmithing in a few days after getting into the city. In the Seventh Ward, I got in with a lot of Father's old friends. They were very good to me. Bishop Terling was Father's first counselor when Father was Bishop of Ramus. As Lucretia was so young, her mother would not allow her to get married until I saw Brigham Young. The Bishop went with me to see him. He remembered by father. He told me to take all the women I could take care of, so Bishop William Terling married us on the fifth of August, 1855, and in October, we had our endowments. I was ordained an elder in the fall of 1854.

William Charles Wightman

"I drove an oxen team loaded with provisions back to Echo Canyon and met the Milo Andrus Company of emigrants. As they were out of something to eat, he said there had not been any driving of oxen all the way. They just herded three or four on each side. They used to say in the old country that men would yoke up one ox then put the other with head back. The fall and winter of 1854, they started to build a canal from Big Cottonwood Creek to Salt Lake City to float the rock for the Temple. I worked on it, but there was not water enough. That same fall the crickets and grasshoppers ate up most of the grain and everything green. So it caused a famine. The next winter (1855-1856) Lucretia's mother was married to Dr. Rust.

"The man I was working for told me I had better go out into the country till after the famine was over. In December I started a-foot to Payson. The first night I stayed at Lehi, the next night at Springville.

Coming out of there, I got lost as there was a heavy snowstorm coming from the south. When I got to Spanish Fork, the river was up to the mouth of the canyon. In going down the river, I came across three of Bell Bole's brothers living on the Ed Reece Farm. The Snells bought it of him. I was just "give out". I stayed there one week. Then they brought me as far as Pondtown Dam. Since the Indians had driven all the whites into Payson, there was no house there. Nobody was living at Santaquin, for all who had lived at either place not lived in Payson. I arrived there the last day of the year of 1855. In looking back I can see that I knew very little. Orwell Simons was living there at that time. I went to his place as he had a grist mill, and I agreed to work for him till harvest for my board. Sometime in the winter, I went over to the city and fetched my little wife as far as Spanish Fork to Aunt Rhoda Snell's, and she lived two or three months there. I went over to see her Saturday nights quite a number of times. I would do it again now to get to see her dear old face.

"Simons set me to work hauling sand for the old itching office cellar. Bishop Handcock was hauling at the same time. I had a pair of buckskin pants that I had worn in the shop. He wanted to know if I was a blacksmith. I told him "yes". He said, "You are just the man I have been looking for." As there was no smith in Payson, he wanted to know if I had any tools, and I told him that I had also five or six, maybe eight hundred pounds of iron that I had picked up on the plains in coming in. He said he would let me have a team to go and get them, and he would have a shop built for me by the time I could get back. I told him I had agreed to work for Simons. He said, "You tell Simons what I have offered you." So I did, and he said, "That is your chance." So in a day or two, I went to get my tools and iron. When I got back, Simons had a shop 18x30 covered and a forge up. Simons helped to put up the tools and said he would buy us a house and take half interest in the shop and tools. We worked together eighteen months.

"The town at that time was a fort sixty rods square with a Spanish wall, four feet at the bottom and twelve feet high. Inside the wall about eight rods from it, were log houses built in circular formation, leaving room for a guard to walk between the houses and the wall. The corral was in the center. As the city is now, it covered four blocks. All of the horses and cattle were herded during the day time and driven in at night. Our house was a small affair, about ten by twelve. It had a shed roof and dirt floor. At that we had a fire place in it, and one of us would keep the fire burning while the other read. I do not think there were half a dozen stoves in the town. We had two candles the first year.

"We had a little garden made in beds the way they used to make them in the states where it rained. When Junior was three days old, he mother and I were out in the garden. Grandma Rust and Aunt Rhoda Snell came up. They were almost scared to death. They made Lucretia go right into the house and go to bed, but she got along so well. Our house stood north of Joseph Terver's house. Later we built a house by the shop on the west side of the tithing lot. It was of two rooms, and Mattie was born in that house. Not a person in town did we ever see except Simons and Aunt Martha, but the baby was a lot of company for Lucretia. I worked hard and was not much company for her. I could have done so much better with what I know now, but it is too late. There was only one house outside the wall, and that was on the east side. All the gardens were planted along the north side of the fort wall, since there was no gardening done inside the walls. The folks could not plant fruit trees at that time, as they were going back to Jackson County.

"After we moved to the old place, my sister sent me a lot of apple seeds, and we had good luck in raising them. Nebeker budded them. In all he put the Golden Russet and valley seedling called the "Mountain Chief" as that was the only kind we had. The first house we put up on the old place was a large one with an upstairs and a kitchen.

"During this time, there were many Indian farms started this side of Spanish Fork below Leland. I did a lot of blacksmithing, and they paid me with their store products when they couldn't sell for money. That was a great help for us. I got plug tobacco. The men and boys would put a silver dollar on the plug and cut around it, take the tobacco and give me the money. So you see how scarce goods were. I have seen fifteen or twenty boys make a cigarette and all take a smoke of it.

"In 1856 there were five hundred Navahoes camped just south of town. Most of them had splendid rifles that the government had given them. As many as ten or fifteen would come into the shop at one time. I made arrow points out of hoof iron. The people had no trouble with them. They were camped there two or three weeks. I never had any trouble except with one Indian, a chief from out east. I made so many arrow points for bows and arrows. When this chief got the points, he grabbed the bow and jumped on his horse, but I was too quick for him and snatched it away. He made quite a fuss about it for sometime.

"The Utahs went south as far as the Muddy, and they would steal the children from the South Utahs and bring them up and sell them to the Mormons. The Utah Legislature passed a law so that they could buy them, because if they could not buy them, the Indians would take the children out and kill them. They brought me a little boy, three or four years old (such a fine, little fellow) and wanted to sell him for two blankets. I got them and he wanted four, then five until he ran it up to ten, and I didn't trade with him. He took the boy outside of the fort and made as though he was going to kill him, but he didn't. He sold him to Ben Johnson for less than I offered him. There were lots of people who bought both boys and girls, but they would live only a few years as the change of food would kill them.

"In 1855 was the "move". Our house was full most of the time. In 1857 all of the Mormons living outside of Utah were called as that was when Johnston's army came. Albert Sidney Johnston, accompanied by 2500 well-seasoned soldiers, was sent to Utah in 1857 by President Buchanan to put down "rebellion against the laws and authority of the United States" by the Mormons. What a miscarriage of justice! Among those who came to Payson were Myron Tanner and his wife. They had been married only a short time. Mrs. Tanner and Lucretia got acquainted right away. They became the best of friends as long as Mrs. Tanner lived. They played on the stage together and were like sisters. I do not think they had a cross word with one another. In 1858 was what was called the "move". All north of Utah County moved south and left their houses filled with straw, and had there not been a compromise, every house north of Utah County would have been burned. There were hundreds of tons of flour boxed and ready to be moved into the mountains. Every man had snow snows and pack saddles. I have thought that Secretary F--- got that army out and armies to cripple the North as much as possible. Johnston was one of the Southerner's best generals. As soon as Colonel Kane came from Los Angeles, (He was sent by the government) he had things soon straightened out. That was a hard time for those who had to move, as the wind blew all summer day and night, going down at sundown and sunrise for a short time. There was no rain, and the dust was something awful. The people lived in dugouts. The country around here was covered with tents and wagons in which people lived. A good many never did go back. Five thousand head of cattle were put on our range. It never was good after that.

"In the winter of 1855 and "56", we had what was called the "Huvy Reformation". The people went wild. They all went to the Bishop and confided their sins and all went through what was called "Ascedule" of all their property, deeding it all over to the church and having the deeds recorded. The meetings were held in an old adobe school house. Old man Box had an old Dutch tin horn five feet long. He called the people together with it. Charles Hancock was bishop as Bishop Croft had died in the fall of 1855.

"In the summer of 1856, we hired a step stove from Betsy Hecking. We thought we were strictly "in it". We had the first sewing machine in Payson.

"Before I came to Payson in the summer of 1858, I put in ten acres of corn in Spring Creek. It was called "Squaw Corn" with blue kernels. After going over there a good many nights watering, I hired Joseph Page to haul it home. He brought the whole of it home in one wagon with a yoke of oxen. Simons and I had ten acres of corn in the old field. It was killed by frost in July, and the crickets were very bad. Those big, black fellows were as large as three or four of our house crickets. They used to travel together and would jump into the fire or water. We would dig a gulch and turn the water in it and dig holes and drown them. We would shovel them out by buckets. If they lit on a field of wheat one night, there would not be much left by ten in the morning. The grasshoppers would raise and fly, and you couldn't see the sun for them.

"I was ordained a Seventy by Former Pace and put in the 42nd Quorum of Seventies on the 18 day of May, 1857. I was ordained a High Priest, 11th of May, 1890. David Lant was president. One of the best things is being born of healthy parents and carrying a good name, and how they have lived. It is a true saying that blood will tell. We were rebaptized in 1856.

"In 1856 all the nails for sheeting on houses and picket fences were made in the shop. I did lots of ax shaving and made the nails out of wagon tire. In those days there was some of the best iron in wagon tires, especially in the old wagons. I have made lots of mule shoes out of log chains that the U. S. brought in. The links were made out of 5/8 round iron. All the lumber was got out with oxen. But people now consider life too short for such transportation. People would go to conference two hundred fifty miles with oxen. Now they could go around the world quicker than make a trip of that kind. In 1859 a nail factory was built here. B. F. Steward and others bought several hundred large wagons and chains from Camp Floyd, when the soldiers left there, and worked the iron into nails.

"On the 8th of May, 1866, I was elected Captain of Company D, Second Battalion Infantry, First Regiment, Second Brigade, Second Division of Nauvoo Legion. My commission was made out and signed by Governor the 22 day of April, 1868. I remember seeing most of the first Twelve and Joseph and Hyrum Smith. We trained from 1856 to '70, and once a year the whole county got together and had a great time. We would change from one county to another to hold our festivities. I took sword exercises as I did when I was a boy in Illinois and in Salt Lake City. We had wooden swords with a guard for your hand. We had quite a number of men out of the English Army drilling with us.

"In 1856 the field south of the old field and west was fenced with a Spanish wall, made by placing planks up in a frame and shoveling in damp dirt and pounding it. When it does not rain much, it will stand a long time. The land was divided into five acres, that being the first farming land I ever had, and that would not grow white beans. We had all the water we wanted, but the land was so poor; it was called "hard scrable", and it as rightly named. All the land in this country had mineral, and by watering it well eventually it will make good land. However, water was very scarce that year. Until 1862 the high water all ran down the old creek. That year was very high and a ditch was cut. There was a river on the east side of town. At that time we were living on the old place on the bank of the creek. From now on I do not think we shall have much more water. The ground is not so loose. The pores of the ground have filled up, and bed of the creek on all of the bench has also. In earlier times, when the stock and horses went over the ground in the spring, they would go in up to their bellies as the ground was so porous. When I came here, there was less than one hundred acres irrigated. The people now know how to handle the waste water so much better. In the same year, 1856, we were active in the church also.

"In 1857 my brother came from Michigan and stayed with us almost two years, then, he (David) and Harper McClellan went to Nevada.

"It was not all pleasure in those days and still we had lots of dancing and theaters. Those were the times we paid for our tickets with squashes. If you had a large one, they would give you a small one for change. I used to tend the door a great deal. There used to be a place to sell tickets, and they would take most anything as money was scarce. (We even paid our taxes in wheat in 1859.)

"During the Indian times, none of them would come in. You would never see one of them. However, one came in one day by name of Jim Mento. Lots of the boys knew him, and all of them could talk with him. He came in and was spying. The officers ordered two men to take him. They belonged to my company: Nephi Loveless and John Spencer. The Indian started to run and was in the southwest part of the town and about to get away, so they shot him through the leg. He was guarded day and night. My company was on guard, and in changing guard, at twelve at night, someone shot him through the head. He was getting well fast and said that he would kill Loveless and Spencer if he ever got well. Oh my, but there was a time next morning! The officers over me just had it in for me, and said I would be responsible for his death. We rolled the Indian in a blanket, and four or five of us took him down into the field at night, dug a hole and put him in. There was a splendid well on the northwest corner of the Smith tanner lot. The people thought he was thrown into it, and it was never used after. The party who took the Indian out did not want people to know who they were, so they never told anyone that he was not thrown into the well. I never knew who killed him. He had shot a man from Lehi four or five weeks before through the thumb over in Tintic, and he was in town that night, sleeping on a stack.

Typical western home

"Since commencing this, I have learned that Payson was settled in 1858. (In the book "Brigham Young, the Colonizer" by Milton R. Hunter is the following: "The next site for colonization — after Springville — was the Peteetneat Creek eighteen miles south of Provo and seven miles south of Utah Lake. The creek was named after an Indian Chief. In the fall of 1850, directed by the President, a little immigrant train of three families led by James Pace pitched their camp in the northwest extremity of the present city of Payson on October 20th. Early in December they were joined by six more families. These nine families formed a nucleus of what later became a thriving city.") Only two months after the saints arrived at Peteetneet, Apostle George A. Smith organized a branch of the church and advised the settlers "that each man should take a small piece of ground, fence it and till it well, in order better to apply the water." Later the name of the place or settlement was changed from Peteetneet to Payson in honor of James Pace. When the change first took place, it was spelled "Pacen" but later was changed to "Payson".

"Payson was laid out all right at first, but the Indians got bad, and the whites had to Fort in, and when they began to build outside of the wall, they wanted the streets wider. In the summer of 1859, I helped dig a well in the center of the street by the Tabernacle. It was ninety-nine feet deep, and it went dry. I remember now that the Indians killed Aleck Heel, who was standing guard.

"In 1862 Uncle Charles Wightman and Uncle Chris Dixon with their large families moved to Payson from Kirtland. Uncle Charles and I worked together at blacksmithing for several years.

"In March, 1862, I was sealed to Jane Day. In 1863 I was called on to drive a team back to Omaha for emigrants. That season there were ten trains of fifty wagons sent from Utah with four yoke of oxen to the wagons. We took four and left it on the way, then picked it up coming back. They would bring from two hundred to five hundred people on a train. Besides driving the team, I furnished one yoke of cattle for the trip. I think I must have sent oxen down more than one year. Uncle Charles Dixon had gone back to Kirtland to fall before. I stayed in Omaha six weeks waiting for him as he was bringing me a wagon since I had driven down a yoke of cattle. I sold all the oxen but three yoke, and I loaded the wagon with goods of my own and got one of the emigrants to drive the church team back. There was what was called the "emigrant fund". The poor were brought in, and as soon as they were able, they paid it back to the fund, so a good many Mormons were able to come to Utah in that way. As fast as they were able to make money, they would send for their friends.

"I got back from the states the last of October. Your mother had a small cellar dug. I had the rock hauled and adobe made and put up the house to the square that fall. It was one of the largest dwelling houses in the town at that time. We settled there because the land was better and such a fine place for fruit. We had nine crops of apricots and very heavy at that. The children worked hard drying all sorts of fruit. Dried apricots were 18 cents per pound at that time. We would put away from five hundred to seven hundred bushels of apples with not signs of worms or any kind of insects. Since we had shipped trees from all parts of the states, we had all kinds. Our old place was considered on of the prettiest places in this end of the county. Lucretia, May, Czar, the twins, Ethel Frank, Roy and Tennison were born there. Grandma never wanted to live there after we lost so many of our little ones. The climate changed and became frosty. The same fruit cannot be raised there now. Junior was born in a little house between Tanners and where McClellans now live, Rolla and Valentine on the Hotel lot, where the hotel now stands.

"In our graveyard on the southwest corner of the old place, the first one buried was Ethel. David was taken up out of the old graveyard seven years after he was buried and buried on our lot next north to Ethel, then the twin boys next. I think they were buried in one grave. Czar was next then Jane's three boys: Charley, George and William Day. Tennison and finally Tennison's mother (Grandma) were buried there.

"Still reminiscent of the past: In the gold excitement of California, there was a lot of gold dust brought into Utah, and it was unhandy to trade it so it was coined into $2.50, $10.00, and $20.00 as pure gold as they could get it. I have handled it. It was soft and soon wore smooth. It went out of circulation after Johnston's Army came in. About 1865-1875 there were a good many$1.00 pieces coined by the United States. After the rebellion there was lots of paper money: five, ten, fifteen, twenty-five and fifty cent greenbacks, but here in early days, it was almost trade. We paid our taxes in grain. My wife took the wool from the sheep's back, carded, spun, wove and made everything we wore, except our shoes. (She also acquired silk cocoons, raised silk worms, produced silk from them, wove it into cloth and made beautiful clothes for her family.) She was a very smart woman and so handy at everything.

"I was called on a mission in 1868 to the Muddy. Aunt Jane and her baby Charley, four months old, went with me. We started on the fourth of November with one span of mules, wagon, cow and calf. The Indians stole the cow and calf. Aunt Jane was offered $75.00 for them just before they were stolen. The Muddy is twenty miles south and eighty miles west of Saint George. Oh my, such a road! Joseph Tanner had crossed to Los Angeles twenty-one times, so he was a lot of help to me. We worked two winters together there. We put up one house, but the town was moved. We went sixty miles to get ribs for the rook which was covered with willows and cane and mud. We had dirt floors, for lumber was hard to get. Aunt Jane and Charley stayed one summer there, and you should hear her tell how hot it was, and all the water had to be hauled. Yep, she had a bad time of it. The first time Brigham Young went there, he said the country was misrepresented to him. He told the people they could go where they chose.

"The Colorado River got very high one year. The steam boat went up as far as the mouth of the Virgin River. The place was called the "Call Landing". No more came up it. It was thought the Mormon emigration would come up the Gulf of California. There was where we were called. Lucretia Wightman Miles went down with me the second winter. She was nine years old, and the living out in a tent helped her as she was not very healthy. That was the hardest mission the people ever had as far as money was concerned, and I have never heard anyone say it did any good, but there was hundreds of thousands spent there. It cost me over $1500. Since the railroad ran down the Meadow Valley Wash, it is one of the garden spots of the earth. It is only seventeen feet above sea level. Moapa is the Indian name of the stream. I have been to the spring which is the largest spring I ever saw. It is warm water thirty miles long running into the Rio Virgin, just twenty-five miles to the Colorado River.

"If Aunt Jane and I had lived together to the 22nd of March, we would have been married fifty years.

"When I was fifty-four years old, I had poor health. Lyman had graduated and located in the Gila in Arizona to practice his profession as a doctor, so we fitted up two wagons and started south by way of Saint George, then southwest down the Grand Wash to the Colorado River, then up through the White Hill and Gold Basin and Murrie Mountains. (The Indians had a tradition about it.) We crossed safely at Hatchberry, then traveled over on the Sandy. Signal had been burned out. Then we came out by Phoenix. We got there Christmas Day, and the farmers were putting up hay. Some day it will be the richest country in the United States. From there we went up to Mesa. We could tell where the Mormons were. Then we traveled over to Florence on the Shelby forty miles, then to Globe on the worst wagon roads I ever saw. They were mountain trails. Finally, we reached Pima on the River. We got there on the second of January.

"Our folks started back on the 15th of April. They got home in May, tramping over two thousand miles in one year. There were seven of us. However, May, Ruth, Nina, Roy, Rolla, Valentine and I stayed with Dr. Lyman Wightman and Mary Wightman four years and then came home. We stayed two years and went back to visit again. This time we took the train. After two years, we returned home. Lucretia went down with me the third time, and we visited Mattie Curtis and family in Sonora, Old Mexico. (Mattie is the daughter who married Horace Curtis.)

"I am past seventy-eight years old and have lived more than fifty years in the northwest side of Payson. There is only one old settler left, Sam McClellan, making it lonesome for me. In looking over this, you can cut out half and then have plenty.

Payson, February 18th 1912

William Charles Wightman"

LIFE SKETCH OF LUCRETIA JANE (DIXON) (PEPPER) WIGHTMAN
AS TOLD BY HER HUSBAND, WILLIAM CHARLES WIGHTMAN

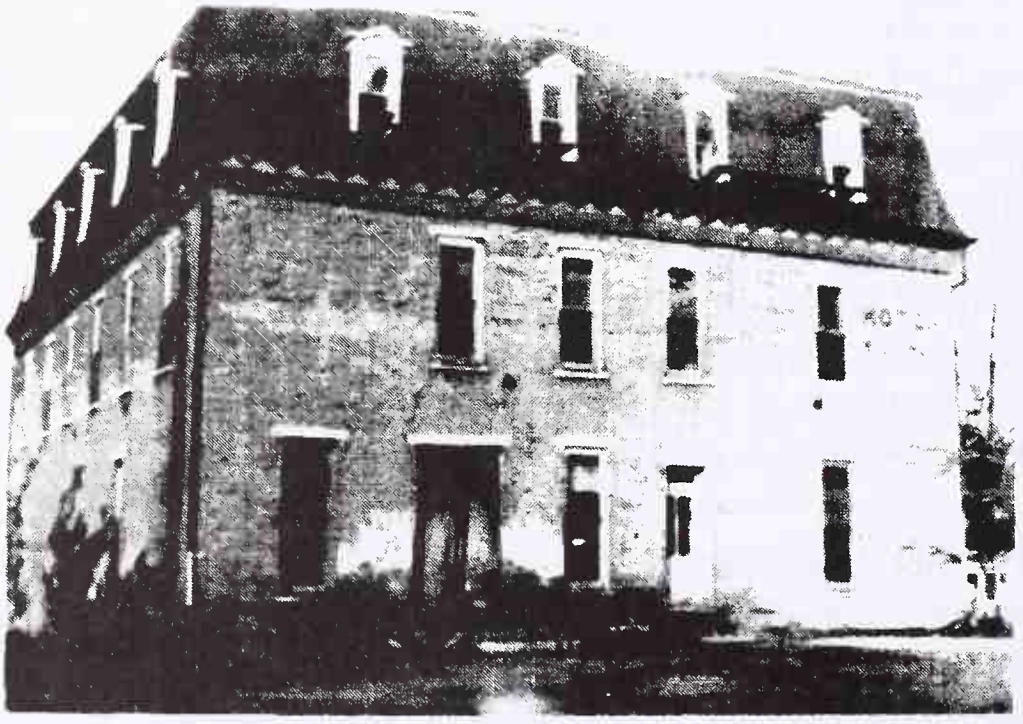
"It was during those riotous, unsettled days in thirty-nine [1839] when the long climax of the Mormon persecution was reaching its crisis that Jane Dixon, mother of the deceased, accompanied her father and mother from Kirtland, Ohio, to Quincy, Illinois. Here she met and married George Pepper, then a stage coach driver. Mrs. Pepper resided eight years in Quincy, and during that time, a daughter and son were born to them, the former, Lucretia Jane in 1841 and the latter, Charles, three years later.

"The mother was proud, ambitious woman, and although deprived of the help of a husband, whose vocation kept him continually away from home, she gave her children the best scholastic training obtainable in the neighborhood. Lucretia and Charles attended the Quincy schools until they had finished the meager elementary course offered. Then as the daughter seemed a precocious child, although only eight years old, Mrs.

Pepper decided to move back to Kirtland Seminary, one of the best schools in the United States at that timer. (North Western Seminary.) Lucretia went to this school for four years, and by means of her extraordinary zeal and capability, acquired an education that few possessed in those days.

"In the meantime, Mr. Pepper died, and his widow in 1854 now joined her friends and relatives who were emigrating to Utah, and brought her children safely across the plains. After they had settled themselves in the Seventh Ward in Salt Lake City, Lucretia became engaged to William Charles Wightman. However, Mrs. Pepper refused consent to the marriage on account of the extreme youth of her daughter, who was fourteen years old, unless they consulted President Brigham Young. They did so, and he advised them to marry.

"The next year Mr. Wightman moved to Payson, leaving his wife at Mrs. Rhoda Snell's home in Spanish Fork until he could establish himself in his business, the smith trade. The spring of the following year saw them settled in Payson, and with two visits to Arizona and Mexico, they have resided in Payson ever since.



THE WIGHTMAN HOTEL - PAYSON, UTAH
Built and operated in the 1880s by Mrs. Lucrecia Jane (Pepper) Wightman (1841-1907), mother of 16 children.

"Mrs. Wightman's married life has been a strenuous one. In her early years, she taught school and played the leading roles in a successful home dramatic company, which toured neighboring cities. Later, however, she engaged in various business lines. At first in co-coperation with Mrs. Martha Simons, she ran a millinery shop which she soon sold out to Mrs. Simons. Then she opened a music store and developed it into a prosperous business. Later in life, Mr. Wightman built a large hotel — three stories and a basement — and served as its landlady.

"In all her life, the deceased has ever been a benevolent, charitable woman, giving help and consolation to many in her home.

"Mrs. Wightman was a mother at fifteen years of age, and she had twelve sons and four daughters, thirty-nine grandchildren and ten great grandchildren at the time of her death. She also adopted several children. She died in 1906 at the age of 66 years."

Mr. William Charles Wightman, Sr.
Payson, Utah

Dear Brother:

In behalf of the Deseret Museum, I hasten to express thanks and appreciation for your gift, delivered here yesterday by your son, Brother William Charles Wightman Jr.

The gift consists of a coverlid or countorpane, delivered with statement of the following as facts relating to its history: The counterpane is made from the first cotton raised in the Dixie section, Southern Utah, in 1858. The raw material came into your hands in payment of blacksmith work done by you on the wagons employed in the hauling of the cotton. The cotton was ginned, corded, spun and woven by your wife when she was but seventeen years old.

The counterpane will be preserved with care as an excellent example of early Utah products, and more particularly as a substantial example or illustration of the skillful and energetic work done under such difficulties by our brave and noble settlers of early days. You have reason to be proud of a wife capable of doing such work under discouraging conditions such as exited in those days.

Wishing you many years of prosperous and happy life, and with best regards, I am
Yours truly,

James E. Talmage, Director

Henry Harrison[5] Wightman [from page 81] (Valentine,[4] Capt., Valentine[3], John[2], George[1]) was born about 1794 in VT or NY. He died on 29 Oct 1825 in Weedsport, Cayuga Co. NY. Henry Harrison Wightman or Whitman as he was called, was killed when a cannon fired prematurely while he was loading it at the celebration of the opening of the Erie Canal, 29 Oct 1825. He is reported to have left a wife and at least one child. The following article is quoted from the Auburn Free Press, 2 November 1825.

"DIED

At Weed's Port, on the morning of the 29th ult. Mr. David Remington and Mr. Henry Whitman.

They were killed by the accidental discharge of a 24 pounder, while they were acting as gunners, at the Canal Celebration, at that place. Remington was literally blown to atoms. Whitman survived about four hours. They were in the prime of life, and have both left young families to deplore their untimely exit.--- "In the midst of life, we are in death.""

[Communicated.]

According to Wm. H. Tuttle, "Pioneers of Madison County" Henry Whitman, son of Valentine, was a Lenox Constable, 1815-1817. He was an Ensign in the 74th Regiment, 1816. According to Tuttle, he was a member of the Dem. Rep. Committee in 1831 but this is inconsistent with his death in 1825. Tuttle also states that Captain Valentine Whitman came to Lincoln about 1806 (when he was about 59) and lived with his son John (age 26). Valentines youngest son, Henry Harrison, would have been about 12 years old at that time and presumably came with his parents.

The US Census for Madison County in 1810 lists three Whitman families in Lenox. John Whitman's family includes beside himself and his wife, his parents, four boys under 10 years old (John Wesley, Leonard, Franklin and ____?), two girls under 10, Syphronia and Arvilla. Henry Harrison would have been about 16 years old at the time but was not listed in John's household.

W (William?) Whitman's family includes beside himself and his wife all of their children. The one child Henry's age is certainly their son John.

B (Benjamin?) Whitman could be a son of Valentine and brother of Henry Harrison. Possibly Henry is one of two 16-25 year old males listed in his household. Benjamin would be about 26 when the census was taken.

He was married to Sarah _____ about 1820 in Cayuga County, New York, USA.

NOTE:

There is no proof as yet that the Henry who married Sarah is indeed Henry Harrison Wightman. The Naples, NY Cemetery records of his burial, list Franklin's parents as Henry and Sarah Whitman of Cayuga County, New York. In the NY State Census of 1865, Franklin, age 44 listed his birthplace as Madison County. In the NY State Census of 1875, Franklin, age 54 listed his birthplace as Cayuga County. It is also significant that Henry Harrison Whitman had a brother, John in Madison County who named a son Franklin. Franklin came to Naples, NY as a wanderer and worked for room and board with the family of Irving Lyon. His recollection of his birthplace would be justifiably hazy if indeed he was orphaned at the age of three. The Cayuga county historian has been unable to find any records of probate, burial or guardianship of Franklin. At the time of Henry Harrison's death, his relatives lived in Madison County. Quite probably, Franklin was a son of Henry Harrison, brought up possibly on the farm of John Whitman in Clockville, Madison County. An exhaustive search of the "History of the descendants of John Whitman of Weymouth, Massachusetts" by C.

H. Farnum shows no Henry Whitman who could be the father of Franklin.

A search of the "Wightman Ancestry" leads to only one possibility who was in the general area. Henry[6] ,Daniel[5] ,Daniel[4], George [3], Rev. Daniel[2], George Wightman. The recollections of Franklin as to his parents and his birthplace are strong evidence that his father was indeed Henry Harrison Wightman or as the family was known in Madison County, NY, Whitman. Child of Henry Harrison[5] Wightman and Sarah _____ was:

1. Franklin M.[6] Whitman, b. Jun 1822 in Cayuga County, NY; d. on 8 Jun 1898 in Naples, NY; buried about 11 Jun 1898 in Rose Ridge Cemetery, Naples, NY; m. Rachel M. Crippen. She was born about 1826 in Ontario County, NY. She died on 20 Apr 1901 in Naples, NY. She was buried about 23 Apr 1901 in Roseridge Cemetery, Naples, NY. Franklin M. Whitman appeared in Naples, Ontario County, NY about 1839 and lived with the family of Irving Lyon, who were childless. The Lyon family also included Rachel Crippen, daughter of a neighbor, Silas Crippen who was in poor health. In 1840 Franklin was 18 and Rachel, 14. About three years later, Franklin and Rachel married and the Lyon family helped them start a farm in West Hollow which was then in a wild state. Franklin turned the farm into one of the finest in that section of Naples. His children were born there and the old farmhouse was a welcome gathering place for his children and their friends. Vineyards on the farm supplied grapes for Widmer's Winery for many years. Franklin's son Irving continued the family farming tradition.

Fred Van Epps, son of Seth Van Epps was a brother to Louis Van Epps. Both sons were farmers in Ontario county, Fred in Rushville, Louis in Middlesex. Fred's farm had a gas well that supplied light and heat for all the years that the family lived there. Fred had many offers to buy gas from his well but he, unsure of how much was available, refused to sell. Finally, after an ill spent youth and years of chewing tobacco, Fred developed stomach cancer and in 1936 shot himself to end his pain. His widow sold the farm to the local school board. Now the Rushville central school occupies most of the old farm. Lena went to live with her daughter in PennYan until her death. She was an active farm wife in Rushville, NY.

Child of Lena[8] Wright and Fred Van Epps was:

(i) Mary Elizabeth[9] Van Epps, b. about 1911 in Rushville, NY; d. in Penn Yan; m. to Robert E. Hurd on 11 Sep 1935 in Rushville, New York. Robert E. Hurd was b. about 1915 in Branchport, NY, d. about 1980. Mary Elizabeth Van Epps and Robert E. Hurd had children. Mary Elizabeth was a school teacher for some years but later became the Post Mistress in PennYan New York.

D. Alice S.[7] Whitman, b. about Nov 1851 in Naples, NY; d. on 18 Feb 1909 in Naples, NY; buried on 21 Feb 1909 in Rose Ridge Cemetery, Naples, NY; m. to Frank Manahan about 1874 in Naples, NY. Frank Manahan was b. on 28 Jan 1849 in Naples, NY, d. on 15 Sep 1927 in Naples, NY, buried on 19 Sep 1927 in Rose Ridge Cemetery, Naples, NY.

Children of Alice S.[7] Whitman and Frank Manahan were:

a. Henry[8] Manahan; m. (1) Ethel Price. He was in the livery business with his father and later, a hardware salesman in Naples, NY. No children.

b. Mabel[8] Manahan, b. on 27 May 1879 in Naples, NY; d. on 28 Nov 1937 in Orange Inn, Naples; buried on 23 Nov 1937 in Rose Ridge Cemetery, Naples; m. to Arthur Polmanteer on 8 Jan 1899 in Naples. Mabel Manahan, daughter of Alice Whitman lived in Naples all her life except for a few years spent in Honeoye and Canandaigua. She wrote many articles and poems about her friends and life in Naples. When she died at the age of 58, she was working on a history of the grape industry in Naples, the where and how, the varieties of grapes grown there and the people involved. Friends tell of a family dinner party at her home. Guests were seated around a large family table when she opened a bottle of homemade ketchup which exploded. She saw with dismay that the bottle was spouting ketchup on her white ceiling. Pointing the bottle down did not help matters. She in panic turned the bottle first to the right and then to the left in a futile attempt to avoid spattering her friends.

In 1929 Mabel and her husband reopened the old Benjamin House as a hotel and restaurant in downtown Naples. She decorated it with a colorful orange motif and named it "The Orange Inn" Arthur, her husband was a genial host and the Inn was quite famous in Naples for many years.

Mabel had family values too. She closed the Inn on Thanksgiving day each year so that she could celebrate with her own family.

While she lived at the Orange Inn she continued to write. One article in the Naples Paper described the country homes of yesterday. It mentioned one grandmother's old log cabin and the deep well and tin cup. One could imagine the creak of the old leather strap as her grandmother let the bucket down into the well. Families helped each other in those days. Quilting bees, wood bees, barn raising bees served social needs as well as material needs. To start a farm in the wilderness required help from the neighbors and help from the wilderness itself. Sheep and turkeys grazed on the land. Nuts and berries were gathered and sold. Nature provided a livelihood until the farmer could clear enough land to raise a crop.

Children of Mabel Manahan and Arthur Polmanteer were:

(i) William H.[9] Polmanteer.

b. Maude[8] Fires, b. in Middlesex, Ontario Co. NY; married to Louis D. Van Epps on 14 Mar 1906 in Middlesex, Ontario Co., b. in Middlesex. Louis Van Epps was a brother to Fred Van Epps who married Maude's cousin Lena Wright. Like Fred he was a farmer most of his life. Having two sons was a blessing to any farmer and Louis was no exception. The eldest son Irving drove the family tractor when he was eight years old and both sons lived on the farm until they married. Louis was a progressive farmer. When sanitary laws required special treatment, Louis painted his cow barns white and took steps necessary to make a profit on a large herd of Holstein cows. His wife Maude took charge of egg production in a large henhouse. He early saw the cost benefits of milking machines and other labor saving farm equipment. Later in life he became a real estate agent. Both sons left home as soon as they could break away from the unrewarding life on their parents farm. Maude was an active farm wife in Middlesex, NY.

Children of Maude Fires and Louis D. Van Epps were:

(i) Irving[9] Van Epps, b. on 4 Mar 1909 in Middlesex, NY; d. on 5 Jul 1983 in Middlesex, Ontario Co., NY; m. to Eloise Robson on 14 Nov 1936 in Middlesex. Eloise Robson was born about 1912 in Middlesex, Ontario County, NY.

Irving Van Epps was a pioneer in the Chicken business in central New York State. He and a friend, Sandy Emerson started by organizing local chicken farmers. They would collect live chickens from the local farms and determine by radio where the best market prices could be found. They would then drive to Buffalo, Albany, Erie, Rochester or even to Newark, New Jersey and return with the proceeds to the farmers they served. The business prospered but they looked ahead. Next they built a chicken house near the Van Epps farm in Middlesex. Here chickens spent most of their life on wire mesh floors in protected quarters, fed on a scientific diet. Next they made the ultimate step. They added a packing plant. Local farmers supplied chicken feed. The plant shipped frozen chicken. Thus they were in the fore front of a revolution which now is standard practice.

Robert Van Epps continued farming. Farmers use pickup trucks for almost every thing they do. They can not put up with balky trucks so the Van Epps farm boasted a new pickup truck every year or two. Frank Graves was a laborer whose addiction to drinking and gambling caused him to neglect his wife and daughter. After his wife's untimely death, the Whitman family found a home for her daughter. Frank continued his life. In October, 1913 he died of pneumonia. His daughter, disgusted with her father's behavior made certain that her sons did not follow her father's footsteps.

Child of Margaret Gertrude[7] Whitman and Frank Graves was:

a. Edith Mary[8] Graves, b. on 26 Mar 1886 in Canandaigua, NY; d. on 19 Apr 1961 in Paoli, Pennsylvania; buried on 22 Apr 1961 in Jersey City, New Jersey; m. to William Foster on 10 Aug 1915 in Geneva, NY, b. on 8 Jul 1878 in Nenthead, Cumbria, England. He died on 20 Mar 1951 in Jersey City, NJ, buried on 23 Mar 1951 in Jersey City, NJ.

When her mother died, Edith was 11 years old. The

Edith Mary[8] (Graves) Foster

Whitman family took charge and found a foster home for her with the Morey Family in Naples at the head of Canandaigua Lake. George Morey ran the Naples News and he needed much help from his wife. Edith earned her board doing household chores. In return the Moreys sent her to the local school and gave her the same loving care and attention that they would have bestowed on a child of their own. As she grew older, she was able to help in the newspaper office and so became interested in the day to day personal events that are the backbone of a small town newspaper. All this set a pattern in her life. As long as she lived she kept scrapbooks with news clippings of people and events that interested her. Later she kept a diary that her children used often to refresh their memory about long past events. When she graduated from Naples High School, she had some skill in secretarial work. She found a job with the Phillips and Clarke stove company in Geneva New York. Fortunately, her aunt Ella Anable ran a boarding house there and she had not only a good place to live but a loving aunt, (Ella Whitman her mother sister). Soon she made friends with people her own age. Then, she was able to afford a camera and used it to supplement her scrapbook. Her friends included the Foster sisters who had a brother William. William would stop at club meetings when he was in town and so was to meet Edith.

William's father George Foster had four daughters. William had to quit high school and work to supplement the family income until the daughters were old enough to go to work. When the girls could help support the family, William found work in New York and then went to Pratt Institute to learn electrical engineering. He soon became foreman of electric maintenance at Colgate, Palmolive Peet and worked there until he retired at the age of 69. Edith was an active church worker in Jersey City.

Allen Gould[9] Wightman (James M.[8], Benjamin A.[7], Daniel G.[6], Benjamin[5], John[4], Rev. James[3], John[2], George[1]), born 26 Oct 1867 in Charleston, Washington Co., RI. Allen was a machinist. He married 21 Feb 1906 Harriet Gilmore Parmenter, d/o Elmer B. & Annie M. Parmenter.

Child:

i. Clinton Allen[10] Wightman, b. 13 Nov 1906; m. (1) 13 June 1929 to Alice May Marshall, b. 25 Apr 1911 in Millford, CT, d/o George & Rose (Martel) Marshall; m. (2) on 27 Aug 1946 to Alicia Conception Cervantes, b. 10 Apr 1919 in Managua, Nicaragua, d/o Jose & Francisca (Gonzales) Cervantes. She died on 1 Aug 1977. (see SS entry p. 1014). They met in Panama City, Panama when they were working for Pan American Airways. Clinton Allen Wightman was a union organizer, and radio operator for the airlines. The company he worked for until this day provides radio operations for air traffic controllers. Clinton died on 22 Jun 1963. Even though he died young, his contributions to the labor movement continue to have a positive impact on people's lives today. As one of the original radio operators in air traffic control, his contributions to modern aviation radio operations helped to form what we today know as the air traffic control system. The following article appeared in the JOURNAL.

"May 15, 1946, the Radio Officers' Union issued a bold challenge to all airline companies when it placed a permanent airways organizer in the field for both flight and ground personnel.

"Clinton A. Wightman comes to the ROU well qualified for the job we have undertaken. Born in Providence, R.I., educated in public schools of Great Falls, MT, learning radio operating at the Rhode Island Radio School when it was located in the old Butler Exchange Building in Providence, after his return from the west, Wightman accepted his first ship assignment on the old C. D. Mallory tanker, S.S. Swiftwind in 1926.

"In 1932 he joined ARTA (now ACA), remaining in the 'Little Kremlin' until the big Commy putsch in 1939.

"Working at WOD, Beaumont, Tex., for about two years, and four years in the airways as both flight and ground radio operator, Wightman saw the necessity of organization among all the groups with whom he had worked in these various fields of radio operating.

"Before leaving Brownsville, Tex., where he was employed by both Pan American Airways and Eastern Airlines, Inc., he took a fling at both by organizing the employees of both companies into ROU. For the sheer love of organizing, Wightman assisted the local A. F. of L. organizer in Brownsville in organizing bus drivers, taxi drivers, and teamsters until the town was almost 100 per cent A. F. of L.

"Working for ROU, Wightman has traveled more than 10,000 miles in his 1937 Chevrolet, contacting more than 4,000 airways employees in 60 airways stations located in 12 states. As a result of his work, supplemented by an energetic organizing campaign conducted by ROU, we predict that the readers of the JOURNAL will soon be pleasantly surprised by the results of his efforts."

Comments of Robert Richard[11] Wightman on past family events: "When asked how many brothers and sisters I have, my common answer is 11 to the best of my knowledge. My half-brother, Clinton, tells the story that when he asked our dad how many women he had been with, he responded. 'If you take 12 women and line them up shoulder to shoulder with women lined up from behind, and march them down the street, the parade would never end.' It is fair to say that my dad made up for the fact that he was a lonely child.

"In addition to his union organizing, from a family values point of view, the best story is that of the crossing guard. When he decided a particular intersection near our school in Kearns, Utah was a danger to children after a crossing guard was killed, he stretched out in the street as a protest until a light was provided.

"Our mother, Alicia, raised seven children on her own after our dad died. I remember instead of food stamps how the government would give us a food allotment, including powdered milk, cheese, dried beans, and canned meat. While it is true we were on welfare for a short period of time after our dad died, our mother went to school part-time for training as a social worker and left the welfare roles, notwithstanding the fact she was trying to raise seven children. As a social worker she fought for women's rights, including a women's choice on the abortion issue. She helped to lead several protests for social change in both Albany, New York, and Washington D.C. Perhaps one of her best known accomplishments, other than raising seven children on her own, was fighting for signs in both Spanish and English at Nassau County Community Hospital.

"While the Wightman tradition brought to us a history of one of the first families to arrive in the new world, the Cervantes tradition reminds us that we are a nation of immigrants. While this country has many economic refuges as immigrants, it is interesting to note that whether it is the Wightman tradition or the Cervantes tradition, the immigration appears to have been for political and not economic reasons. This could very well account for the level of political awareness in both my parents.

"On page 967 of Volume I, there is the story of Joseph of Arimethia. The story may not be as tall a tale as you think. While I have not been able to find any historical evidence linking Joseph to the Wightman name, there is substantial evidence that Joseph arrived and settled in Glastonbury, England. The book, Joseph of Arimathea at Glastonbury, which is based in large part on Greek and Roman documents, goes so far as suggesting that Joseph brought Jesus to Glastonbury during what is known as the missing years.

"Apparently any visitor to Glastonbury will find no shortage of material on the subject. According to a variety of sources, it is believed the first Christian Church is located in Glastonbury, and has actually been unearthed. In addition to the book on Joseph, any good university library will have a copy of the epic poem on Joseph of Arimethia and his arrival in Glastonbury.

"If you remember, Jesus gave his chalice to Joseph after the last supper. This chalice is the basis for the story of the 'Holy Grail'. It is a well known tradition in England that King Arthur searched for the Holy Grail. What is less known is King Arthur believed it was left in England by Joseph of Glastonbury. What all of the historical evidence indicates is, it is all tradition, and not necessarily historical fact. What makes the book so fascinating is the author's reliance on Greek and Roman documents. Short of some scientific proof in terms of an archeological dig, the story will probably remain a tradition.

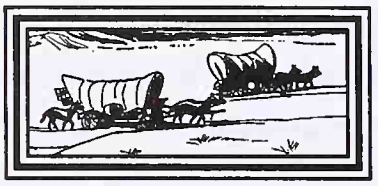
"It seems to me what makes the story mystical is the King Arthur tale. What makes the story real is that Glastonbury is real, the ruins in Glastonbury of a Christian church dating back to the first century A.D. is real, King Arthur is real, and the epic poem on Joseph of Glastonbury is real. While the story may be a tall tale in some respects, there appears to be some truth to the story."

WHY WORRY?

There are only two things to worry about:
Either you are well or you are sick.
If you are well, there's nothing to worry about.
But if you are sick,
There are only two things to worry about:
Either you get well, or you die.
If you get well, there's nothing to worry about.
But if you die, there are only two things to worry about:
Either you will go to heaven or hell.
If you go to heaven, there's nothing to worry about.
But if you go to hell
You'll be so busy shaking hands with friends
You won't have time to worry. "Dear Abby"

Willis[7] Wightman, [from pages 324, 380, & 547] (Horace E.[6], Abram[5], Abraham[4], Abraham[3], Rev. Valentine[2], George[1]), b. 14 Jan 1850 in Inkster, Wayne Co., MI; d. 11 Jan 1936 at Sherman, Wexford Co., MI; m. 17 Nov 1872 in Monroe Center, Grand Traverse Co., MI to Elizabeth Schell, b. 12 May 1850 in Orleans, Jefferson Co., NY; d. 22 Feb 1919 in Traverse City, Grand Traverse Co., MI. She was the daughter of Simeon and Elizabeth (Dygert) Schell who had come to Michigan from Herkimer County, New York. The Schells had lived approximately five miles north of the Mohawk River, while the Wightmans had lived south of the river. The Schells had come to Michigan by covered wagon, traversing south of the Great Lakes, and traveling north through the middle of Michigan on the new state road while it was being built. They settled on a homestead west of Monroe Center on Duck Lake Road in 1870.



The Schells had come to Michigan by covered wagon

Tradition says that the Willis Wightman family travelled by steamer from Detroit to the Grand Traverse area. [They missed the first boat they were scheduled to take, and later learned that it had blown up and everyone on board perished.] As a boy of 14, Willis came with his family to a homestead at Monroe Center, arriving on May 15 1864. At that time there was nothing but wilderness. They were dismayed to find that the person who had been hired to clear the land and build them a cabin, had not done it. Great Aunt Mary, then a teenager, sat on a stump and cried in frustration. The family had to camp out until a cabin could be built.

Willis had attended schools in Wayne Co., and worked on neighboring farms as well as their own. Upon reaching adulthood, he turned to the mercantile business, managing a hardware store in Monroe Center. While living in the home built by his father, Willis served as Township supervisor for 12 years, Township clerk for 20 years, and postmaster (the post office being located in his hardware store). He was also a member of Lodge 311, I.O.O.F., and Libby was a member of the Rebekah Lodge No. 290. After the turn of the century, he moved to Buckley, MI where he ran a business there. An old letter was found, dated 10 Aug 1915 which bears this printed heading.

During Willis' lifetime, the United States grew into a world power, the telephone and electric lighting were invented and put into use, the "horseless carriage" began appearing on the highways around 1908, and Wilbur and Orville Wright introduced the first manned air flight. The country entered into World War I, and the days of prohibition began. In northern Michigan the lumber industry flourished and then died out, leaving vast areas of pine stumps where forest had been.[1]✸

They are buried in the Monroe Center cemetery, next to Willis' father, Horace, and just a short distance from Libby's father, Simeon Schell.✸[2]

✸[1] The mother of Willis was Nancy Ann (Quick) Wightman. Her parents were John and Nancy (Roach) Quick. She was born on 17 Aug 1816 in Colchester Co., Ontario, Canada. Her maternal grandmother was Nancy McEntyre. Her father was a cousin of Tom Quick, a famous Indian fighter whose philosophy was "The only good Indian is a dead Indian." His dislike of Indians is understandable when you learn that as a small child, he watched the massacre of his parents and destruction of their homestead by Indians. He, his brother and sister were kidnaped and raised by the Indians. This happened in Pennsylvania during the 1790s. The sister was taken west and never seen again. When Tom grew up and returned to his own people, he vowed to get revenge for his parent's death by killing at least 100 Indians during his lifetime. He almost made it — he had killed 99 by the time of his death. The story goes that one day he was surprised by Indians as he was splitting logs for a rail fence. He agreed to go peaceable with them if they would first help him finish his rail splitting. He told them to take the two sides of the log with their hands and pull them apart. When they did this, he quickly knocked out the wedges, trapping them by their fingers, and then he calmly proceeded to kill them. On his death-bed, he told those that had gathered around, that his only regret was that he had been unable to fulfil his vow of 100 dead Indians.

(Churchill) Jewell. The Jewells had also come from New York state (the Buffalo area) to the southern part of Michigan, gone briefly to Iowa, returned to Michigan, and then had come north to the Buckley area. Edith and Lincoln lived in various locations in and near Wexford Co., Michigan, such as Buckley, Sherman, Copemish, Thompsonville, and finally back to Sherman, when Lincoln operated Walls Mill, a grist mill known for the good flour it produced. Edith suffered a stroke in later life, and died in January, 1943 in a nursing home in Cadillac. Lincoln died on May 29, 1951 in Muskegon, MI.

Four Generations
Willis Wightman, Edith, Fred Jewell & Joyce Jewell

The following is an excerpt from a letter sent by Fred Jewell concerning the return of his Uncle Frank Wightman from Washington state. He writes:

"Before there was a railroad to the Mesic/Sherman area, all food, clothing and supplies, and passenger service was handled by stage lines. One line left Manton in the morning, carrying freight and passengers, stayed all night in Mesick, and went back the next day. Another stage line coming from the Grawn/Monroe Center area came through Sherman and connected with the line from Manton. These stage lines brought the mail in to Sherman. My mother (Edith Wightman Jewell) must have gotten a letter from her mother that Uncle Frank Wightman would be home for Christmas; otherwise she would never have started on a trip in winter weather. All we had to do was go out to the road when the stage came along. It was severe winter weather, and the stage line was running a horse drawn sleigh. Somewhere along the way, we had a disaster. We came to a big, high drift, clear across the road with no way around. The horses started plunging, and somehow they upset the sleigh and we all went sideways off into the loose snow. This scared the horses and they tried to run away. They were jerking the driver all over the road, and he couldn't help right the sleigh. The other two passengers must have been men, because they righted the sleigh and caught the horses and got us going again.

"As I remember, it was dark when we arrived at Monroe Center. A man I had never seen before rushed out and hugged my mother and kissed her. I remember I was pretty upset. No man was supposed to kiss my mother except my Daddy. I must have raised a rumpus, because I dimly remember my mother explaining to me that he was her brother. I didn't know what a brother was, as I didn't have any. A little later, she went out to a square dance with him (Frank). This was the first, last and only time I ever saw my mother dance. I don't remember the ride back; so it must have been uneventful. My grandfather must have persuaded Uncle Frank to go in with him in the hardware business. They wound up buying the hardware in Sherman, so as to be near us."

Fred doesn't give the date of this event, but as Uncle Frank was married here in Michigan in December of 1906, it had to have been before that. Uncle Fred Jewell was born in 1897, so he would have been 8 years old or less. They were living in Sherman at the time.

2. Doris Elizabeth[9] Jewell (from page 324), b. 28 Jul 1908 in Buckley, MI; m. 15 Sep 1936 to Alfred V. Whinnery, b. 7 Oct 1900, s/o William & Mary (Simmonds) Whinnery, who also homesteaded in the Traverse City area before the turn of the century. Doris attended school in Sherman, MI and went to High School in Mesic, MI. She was known as a 'tomboy,' riding her pony, Bobbie, and helping her father at the mill. After high school, she worked for a time at the Wolverine Shoe & Tanning Corp. in Rockford, MI and then returned to Sherman.

The Whinnerys were Irish Quakers who settled in North Carolina, with subsequent generations migrating westward to Indiana. William Whinnery came with his parents, Silas & Sarah (Ozbun) Whinnery to the Grand Traverse area in 1879, settling in Cedar Run; and (Middleton) Simmonds, had also come from Indiana. They had four children: Leon, Della, Edith and Alfred, all born in Grand Traverse county. When Della contracted tuberculosis, the family doctor advised them to move to a warmer climate. The family moved to Tennessee, staying for four years during which time Della's health improved.

They returned to Michigan, settling in Detroit, where the older children married. Della died after the birth and death of her first child. Alfred, then only 17, had the responsibility of returning her body to the Cedar Run area for burial. Alfred remained a bachelor, caring for his aging parents and worked at a clothing store for 20 years. During this time, he made many trips north, often stopping to see his aunt and uncle, the Rev. & Mrs. Allen Jenne, who by coincidence, lived next door to the Jewells. At age 36 some time after the death of his parents, he married Doris, took her to Detroit, where oldest daughter, Mary, was born.

When the store went bankrupt, Alfred had no choice but to take his family back to Sherman to live with Doris's parents. In 1942 they left Lincoln and Edith in the care of Doris's brother, Fred, and moved to Muskegon and found employment in factories that were gearing up for war production. Daughter Nora and son David were born there. During the nine years that they lived in Muskegon, Doris was lonely, often ill, and always homesick for Sherman. In 1951 they moved about 12 miles east of Muskegon into a small house on 20 acres where Doris enjoyed gardening, raising chickens, and had many friends among the wonderful neighbors there. After a long illness, Doris died on March 14, 1959. After Alfred retired, he spent time with each of his daughters, passing away on 17 Aug 1973 after a stroke and hospitalization in Greenville, MI.

Fred Willis[8] Wightman

Fred had one daughter with Lena. When this child was a toddler, full of the usual curiosity, she drank an unknown substance that she found in the cupboard. The substance proved to be toxic and fatal to the child. The shock and grief of this tragedy destroyed the marriage and Fred returned to Michigan. He married Cora in Pontiac, MI where all their children were born. In 1937, they moved to Owosso, MI where Fred was employed as a night watchman at the Robbins Furniture Store. Cora attended the Methodist church in Owosso.

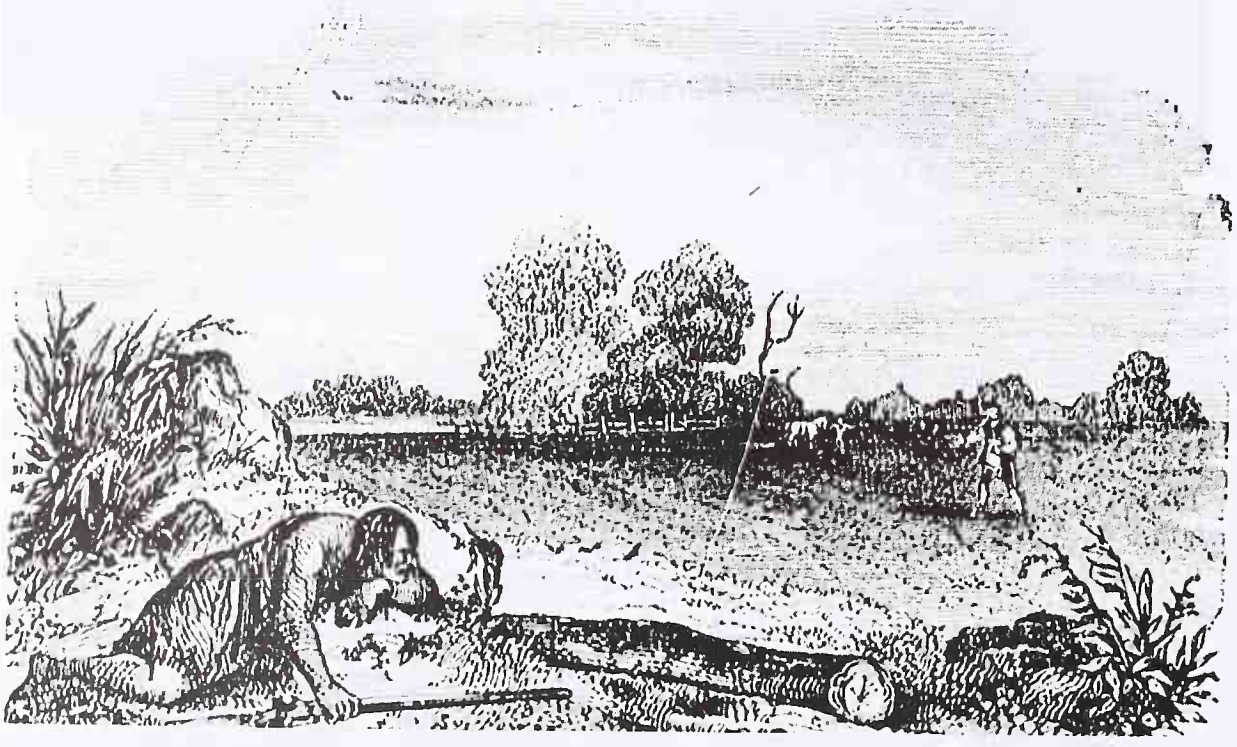
Schell Family History✸[3]

Christian Schell and his brother, John, were from Nassau-Dillenburg, Germany, and arrived in Philadelphia in 1752, having arrived on the ship "Forest", whose captain was Patrick Auchterlony, setting sail from Rotterdam, with a stop at Portsmouth, England. The Schell brothers settled a few miles north of what is now Herkimer, New York. The immediate area where they lived became known as "Schell's Bush." They cleared land and built houses next door to each other.

During the Revolutionary war, Christian Schell, Jr., son of the above mentioned Christian Schell, enlisted in the revolutionary army, although he spoke only German, and understood no English. He served valiantly, but because of a misunderstanding, left just before his enlistment was up, therefore forfeiting his pension.



The Mohawk Valley was ravaged by raiding parties.

During the Revolutionary War, the Mohawk Valley was ravaged by raiding parties, and most settlers left their homesteads to live at nearby forts. Because of the distance they were from the fort, Christian Schell either constructed a blockhouse, or fortified his dwelling so it could be defended like a fort. Even then, he and his family as well as his brother John and his family spent a good deal of time at Fort Dayton. On August 6, 1781, the two families had gone to their homes to thresh wheat, and were working to bring the grain in from the field. Two sons were sent to a neighbor's to borrow a winnowing fan, and the family dog accompanied them. On the way, they encountered a party of sixty-six Indians and Tories, and turned and fled for home. The dog arrived first, and his agitated state warned the rest of the family, giving them time to run for their blockhouse (or house) before the attackers beset upon them.

✸[3] Data on the Wightman and Schell families are from records and research by Mary Sprague, 10022 W. Elm St., Lake City, MI 49651. She has also given credit for information from a book by Hazel Patrick entitled, The Mohawk Valley Rasbachs and Allied Families, published by the Herkimer County Historical Society, Herkimer, NY.

The two sons, eleven year old twins, were captured by the British, later were taken to Canada, and it would be nine years before they were re-united with their family. There were only two guns inside the house to defend themselves with, but they managed to withstand the siege. During lulls in the fighting, Christian Schell prayed and sang in the German language. The Indians would listen for a while, then renew the attack. At one point, the attackers bored a hole through the door. "Ma Schell," who had been beside her husband, helping load the guns, took an axe, and struck every gun that was thrust through the hole in the door, spoiling them for further use.

At one point, the leader of the raiding party, a Scotsman named Donald McDonald, tried to force the door open with a crowbar. He was wounded by the Schells, who then opened the door suddenly and drew their enemy inside, where they secured him.

Christian Schell went upstairs and prayed very earnestly, then in a loud voice called out the names of the Captains of the local militia. This, and the sound of a rising wind in the trees, made the raiding party think that help was arriving from the fort. They were frightened, and hastened away. After all had been still for a while, Christian Schell opened his door and went out among the dead and wounded. He and his sons carried the wounded inside, set bread and milk beside them, and set off for the fort, just in time to save themselves before the raiding party, realized it had been tricked, returned. On the way to the fort, the mosquitos were so bad that the mother gathered the little ones under her full skirt to protect them and prevent their crying and attracting the enemy.

John Schell, brother of Christian, and his sons, were in their own barnyard when the Indians attacked. They watched the battle from the other side of the fence, unable to come to the aid of his brother. Had they revealed their position, they would probably have been killed by the raiding party.

About a year later, a raiding party again attacked the Schell farm, surprising Christian and his sons in the field. They fired, fatally wounding Christian Schell and his son, Derric [also sometimes listed as Dennis]. But before dying, the three of them fought back valiantly and the raiding party retreated. After the twin sons returned to the Mohawk Valley and were reunited with the rest of the family, the descendants of Christian Schell moved to Canada, eventually moving to Michigan.

For many years, people in the Mohawk Valley with the name Schell believed they were descended from Christian Schell. But as records were assembled and research done on the Schell and Rasbach families, it was discovered that Christian Schell had been killed a year after the famous battle, and his family had gone to Canada. The Schells that remained in Herkimer county are descended from John Schell, Christian's brother.

Christian Schell's wife was Maria Elizabeth Petrie, daughter of Johann Jost Petri II, born 1686 in Heidilburg, Germany, and Cordelia Demuth. Maria was born in 1730, and died 1790 in Schell's Bush. Their children, all born at Schell's Bush, were:

1. John Christian Schell, Jr., b. 8 Oct 1758, m. Elizabeth Segner on 6 Apr 1793, d. in Michigan.
2. Elizabeth Schell, b. 21 Sep 1760, m. Peter Martz, d. 12 Apr 1859 in Canada.
3. Derric [or Dennis] Schell, b. 12 Apr 1763, d. Jul 1782 in Schell's Bush after an Indian attack.
4. Frederick Schell, b. 16 Dec 1764, m. Catherina Staring in 1788, d. in Canada
5. Anna Maria Schell, b. 16 Feb 1767.
6. Eva Schell, b. 1768, m. William Plank.
7. Markus Schell, b. 7 Oct 1770, m. Delila Casley, d. 1845.
8. Henry Schell, b. 7 Oct 1770, m. Mary Moyer, d. 1859.
9. Mary Catherine Schell, b. 1 Dec 1777, m. Adam Kaiser, d. 1899.

A granite monument was placed at the site of the battle that took place at the home of Christian Schell by the Daughters of the American Revolution. It can be seen if you visit the site, about four miles north of Herkimer, NY.

After migrating to Canada, John Christian Schell, Jr., and his younger brother, Mark, came to Sanilac Co., Michigan about 1845.

John Schell I

John Schell, the younger brother of the above mentioned Christian Schell, was born in Nassau-Dillenburg, Germany in 1734. He came to the colonies in 1752 , and made his home in Herkimer County, NY. His home was about a half mile from the Schell's Bush road, just north of where the DAR marker stands today, and next door to his brother's home. He was naturalized on Oct. 20, 1754, and served in the 4th regiment of the Tyron County Militia, under General Nicholas Herkimer and Col. Pellinger. He participated in the Battle of Oriskany, the major battle of the Revolutionary War that was fought in that area of New York. He was wounded in this battle and disabled for further service. He made his way home from this battle ragged and literally almost naked. When he reached his family, he had become so thin he was not able to support his trousers, and carried them in his hand.

John Schell married, on Feb. 16 1762 to Barbara Rasbach, daughter of Johannes and Margaret (Bierman) Rasbach. She had been born in 1740 in Herkimer County, NY.

Johannes Rasbach was born in Berne, Schwartzwald, Germany, about 1720. He arrived in Herkimer County in 1726. His wife, Margaret, is probably the daughter of John and Mary Bierman, original patentees of Lots #11 and 26, North in the Burnetsfield Patent, County of Herkimer, Province, NY. Their home was on the turn-pike about a mile east of the present village of Herkimer about opposite the present site of the East Herkimer fire department. Family tradition says that the Rasbach's were "Palatines," German Protestants who were beaten and driven from Germany by the soldiers of King Louis XIV. Children of John and Barbara (Rasbach) Schell, all born in the Schell's Bush area are:

1. John Christian Schell, b. about 1763; m. Catharina H. Hauser, a first cousin (daughter of his mother's sister). He was a small, slightly built man, very handy with tools. His wife was a stout, robust woman, who assisted in farm chores. They were well known for the maple syrup they produced on their farm. They had nine children.
2. Johannes Marcus Schell, b. 11 Jun 1764; m. about 1788 Catharina Elizabeth Raan. He, too, was slight in build, and his wife was "fleshy." He was a trapper. The North Creek, which was frequented by muskrats and mink, ran right through his farm. He and his son later owned and ran the saw-mill originally built by Joshua Reed at Eaton's Bush. Later, they moved to Lewis County, NY. They had eight children.
3. Anna Catharina Schell, b. 12 Apr 1766.
4. John Schell II, b. 17 Sep 1767. [discussed next]
5. Pieter Johann Schell, b. 24 Mar 1769; d. 4 Jan 1838; m. in 1790 to Catherina Hielz. Pieter's farm joined that of his brothers, Christian and Marcus; but he was perhaps a better farmer than they. His house was finished better and painted red. He had a cider mill to work up the fruit of a large, flourishing orchard. His outbuildings were of better class than usually found on a farm at that time. They had eleven children.
6. Elizabeth Schell, b. 2 Mar 1771.
7. Barbara Schell, m. Michael Kaiser. Two known children.
8. Mary Moyer, an adopted daughter, m. Heinrich (Henry) Schell, s\o Christian & Maria Schell.

John Schell's farm passed through several generations of his descendants, until his great granddaughter, Nancy Maria Schell, married a cousin, Marcus Rasbach, and the Schell and Rasbach properties were combined. John and Barbara (Rasbach) Schell are buried in the Herkimer cemetery.

John Schell II

John Schell, fourth child of John and Barbara (Rasbach) Schell, b. 17 Sep 1767 at Schell's Bush; m. (1) 31 Jan 1792 to Margreth Thum; m. (2) 5 Aug 1794 to Anna Eva Kessler, b. 28 Jan 1769, d/o Jacob & Delia Kessler. After his first wife's early death, he married Anna who was the mother of his eleven children. John would have been 14 years old when his uncle, Christian Schell, fought off the raiding party at his blockhouse.

John lived in the Southwestern part of Schell's Bush, some distance from his brothers. His log house had a thatched roof. John was very lame and badly stooped. He had to walk with two canes. Their eleven children were born in Herkimer County, NY:

1. John Schell III, b. 31 Jan 1795. [discussed next]
2. Peter Schell, b. 9 Apr 1798; m. (1) Maria Schell, his first cousin [daughter of Pieter & Catharine (Hielz) Schell]; m. (2) sometime after his first wife's death between 1833 and 1840 to Fanny Fulmer, who was 19 at the time. He had five children by his first wife, and five by his second.
3. Jacob Schell, b. around 1800; m. (1) in 1820 to Elisabeth Myer. She died in 1854 and he m. (2) Elisabeth "Betsey" Casseler. He had seven children by his first wife.
4. Mary Schell, b. about 1800 or 1801. (possibly a twin of either the above or below)
5. Mark Schell, b. 12 Jun 1801; m. in 1823 to Elisabeth Fuller. He lived in Schell's Bush. Mark was of medium height and slender, very soft-spoken. But when he did speak, it was definitely to the point. After his wife's death, his oldest unmarried son lived with him, as did a daughter and her husband. He had 12 children in all.
6. Catharina Schell, b. 8 Feb 1803; m. in 1821 to Johannes Christmann, Jr. They had three children.
7. Magdalena Schell, b. 2 Dec 1804; m. in 1822 to Conrad Fultz. They had twelve children.
8. John Schell, b. 20 Feb 1808.
9. Adam Schell, b. 8 Jan 1809; m. in 1828 to Delia Foltz, d/o Jacob & Catharine (Hess) Foltz. They moved to Orleans, Jefferson Co., NY. They had eleven children.
10. Delia Schell, b. 7 Jan 1811; m. Jacob Moyer. They had four children.
11. Anna Nancy Schell, b. 1 Feb 1813; m. Philip Christmann, s/o Joanis & Margaret (Hiltzen) Christmann. They had four children.

John Schell III

John Schell III, b. 31 Jan 1795 was the oldest son of John Schell II and his wife, Anna Eva Kessler; m. on 19 Feb 1815 to Anna Hiltz, b. 2 Jan 1793, d/o John Hiltz, whose wife, Maria, was the widow of John Bell.

John Schell III fought in the War of 1812 and was stationed at Sackett's Harbor. He received an honorable discharge and for his services was pensioned by the government. He was also given a land warrant that he exchanged for the farm he and his wife lived on. The first years of their married life were spent in Herkimer County, but about 1837 he moved his family to Stone Mills, Jefferson County, NY where they lived for 18 years. In the spring of 1855, they moved to Haskinsville, Steuben County, NY. His children were all born in Herkimer County.

1. Isaac Schell, b. 14 Jun 1815. He married Anna Rhode Herder, and had eight children. They lived at Stone Mills.
2. Elisabeth Schell, b. 5 Sep 1816; m. on 27 Feb 1834 to Benjamin Helmer, s/o George & Catherine (Stahring) Helmer. They had 7 children.
3. Maria Schell, b. 22 Feb 1818; m. on 26 Feb 1835 to David Fulmer, a third cousin, s/o Jacob & Maria Catharine (Rasbach) Fulmer [Sometimes may have been spelled Volmer.] David Fulmer was born on 22 May 1815 in Herkimer and was Captain in the 72nd regiment of the NYS Militia in Steuben. They had three children.
4. Simeon Schell, b. 12 Feb 1819 (discussed next).
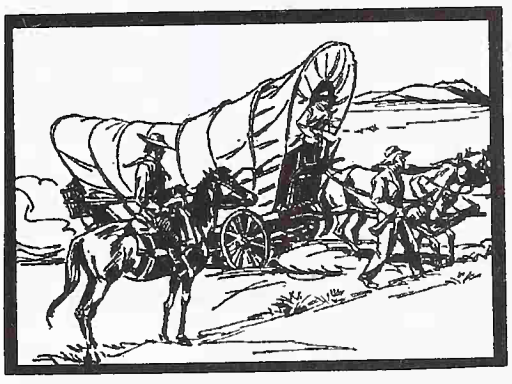
5. Soloman Schell, b. 29 Dec 1819(?); m. Mary Snell. They had three children.
6. Margareth Schell, b. 13 Feb 1823; m. George Helmer. They had five children.
7. Anna Eva Schell, b. 22 Jun 1824; m. Isaac Conderman. They had 2 children.
8. Joseph Schell, b. 1 Jul 1825; m. Nancy Barder. They had one child.
9. David Schell, b. 21 Jan 1827.
10. Dalia Schell, b. 26 Aug 1830; m. (1) Thomas Getman; m. (2) _____ Guerney.
11. John Frederick Schell [twin], b. 26 Dec 1830.
12. Anna Catharina Schell [twin], b. 26 Dec 1830; m. Samuel Myers. Three child.
13. Franklin Schell, b. 22 Apr 1834; m. Clista Hall. They had six children.
14 Lucinda Schell, b. 13 Sep 1836; m. George McCombs. They had three children.
15. Louisa Schell, b. ? ; m. Edgar Ormsby. They had four children.

Of John and Anna Schell's seven sons and eight daughters, twelve of these were living in May of 1896, along with 65 grandchildren, 90 great grandchildren, and twelve great-grandchildren. John and Anna each died at their last home in Fremont, Steuben County, NY.

Simeon Schell



Simon Schell, b. 19 Feb 1819 in Herkimer County, NY was the fourth child of John Schell and Anna Hiltz; m. prior to 1837 to Elizabeth Dygert, b. 7 Mar 1821, d/o Peter and Elizabeth (Helmer) Dygert.✸[4]

Simeon and Elizabeth evidently accompanied his parents in a move to Jefferson County, NY in 1837, since their children were all born there. In the 1860s, Simeon and Elizabeth left New York state and traveled by covered wagon to settle in the wilderness area of Northern Michigan. Descendants can recall their daughter Elizabeth [Libby (Schell) Wightman] who would have been in her late teens at that time, tell of the hardships of the journey. They followed the trail south of the Great Lakes, entering the state of Michigan from the south. They drove their wagon through the Grand Rapids area on the first road north to Traverse City, which was still in the construction stages. There were times that they had to wait, camping along the way, for the road crew to complete a bridge or a section of roadway before they could proceed north. They arrived in Grand Traverse County in 1870 settling on a homestead just west of the village of Monroe Center which is about ten to twelve miles south of Traverse City. The children of Simeon and Elizabeth (Dygert) Schell were:

1. William Henry Schell, b. 21 Jul 1837.
2. Mary Schell, m. George Canute. They had six children.
3. Philo Schell, b. 19 Dec 1840; d. 21 Sep 1872 at age 31.
4. Nancy Catherine Schell, b. 19 Dec 1840; d. 21 Sep 1872; m. Paul Perkins. One son
5. George Schell, m. Maryette Breasted. No children.
6. Jerome Schell, b. 1848; d. 1938; m. Abbie Spafford. They had four children.
7. Elizabeth "Libby" Schell, b. 13 May 1850; m. Willis[7] Wightman. They had five children. (discussed earlier).
8. Helen Schell, m. Joel Avery.

✸[4] "Grandmother Edith Jewell's records state that the parents of Elizabeth Dygert's mother, Elizabeth (Helmer) Dygert, were George and Nancy (Storing) Helmer. They also state that Elizabeth (Helmer) Dygert's brother, Benjamin, married a Betsey Schell. Now Hazel Patrick, in her book, The Mohawk Valley Rasbach's and Allied Families," states on p.30 that Simeon Schell's sister, Elizabeth, married a Benjamin Helmer, but his parents are listed as George and Catherine (Storing) Helmer. I believe that the couple listed by Grandmother and the couple listed by Mrs. Patrick may be the same; perhaps the wife's name was Nancy Catherine (Storing) Helmer. Grandmother's records also lists the brothers and sisters of Elizabeth (Helmer) Dygert as Philip, Kate, (who married John Fultz) Nancy and Tena." Mary Sprague, 10022 W. Elm St., Lake City, MI 49651

9. William Alburtus Schell (known as Uncle Burt), b. 1854, d. 1929; m. (1) Imogene Britt; m. (2) Lyddie Engel (after the death of his first wife). Four children with Imogene.

10. Charles Madison Schell, b. 1858; d. 1938; m. Myrta Saunders. Two children.

11. Ellsworth Schell.

Simeon Schell died 28 Aug 1883 and was buried in the Monroe Center cemetery. The inscription on his gravestone reads: "Watch, for in such an hour as ye think not, the son of Man cometh; Simeon Schell, died Aug 28, 1883, at age 66, 6 months and 7 days." Nearby is the grave of his daughter, Catherine (Schell) Perkins and a short distance in the other direction is buried another daughter, Elizabeth (Libby) and her husband, Willis Wightman.

"Simeon and his family brought with them to Michigan the story of the battle fought by John Christian Schell against the Indians and Tories, in the form of a poem. This poem was recited annually at the Schell family reunion. Grandmother wrote this poem down for me and told me to cherish it, as it was a part of my heritage. She didn't know exactly how we were related to the Christian Schell mentioned in the battle. As the years went by, the poem was almost forgotten, until found one day when I was searching for old records in the attic. Since Grandmother's records didn't tell where the Schell ancestors came from in New York, this poem became my only clue as to the origin of this family. I searched through books on the history of the Revolutionary War in New York, but could find nothing about this battle. I had come to the conclusion that this was merely an exaggerated legend; when one day in the Wexford County Library, I ran across a book called "Places to Visit During America's Bicentennial." There, under the heading of "Mohawk Valley" was the account of this battle and its location just north of Herkimer. As I read, I was amazed at the accuracy of our poem. This took me to the Herkimer County Historical Society and the book by Hazel Patrick, The Mohawk Valley Rasbachs and Allied Families, where I finally traced the ancestors of Simeon Schell to John Schell, the brother of the Christian Schell in our poem." — Mary Sprague

The Schells also brought with them the story of a 'great aunt' who had been scalped by the Indians, but survived. The Indians left her for dead and when she regained consciousness, the dogs were licking her head. She always thought that they were instrumental in saving her life. This great aunt lived many years but was permanently blinded by the shock of the scalping. She was remembered for the way she would put her hand on the heads of the children to see how much they had grown.

This story is also part of the Rasbach family tradition and the Rasbach descendants refer to her as 'Granny Rasbach,' who slipped out of the fort to milk a nearby cow so that little ones within the fort could have milk to drink. Hazel Patrick identities her, through the process of elimination, as Sophrania (Moak), who married Marx Rasbach, brother in law to John Schell.

THE STORY OF CHRISTIAN SCHELL

A story, a story, unto you I will tell,
About a brave man, one Christian Schell.
He was attacked by the Indians and the Tories, 'tis said,
But for this attack they most bitterly paid.

About two in the afternoon the invaders they came,
And began the fight that brought old Schell fame.
Two sons had he with him as he worked in the field,
Determined, if the enemy came, never to yield.

He fled to the blockhouse to save his life.
For he'd left his arms in the care of his wife.
They pitched into old Schell and began to fire,
But Schell and his blunderbuss soon made them retire.

He wounded Donald McDonald, and drew him in at the door,
Who gave an account they were strength sixty-four.
The Indians were forty-eight, the Tories full sixteen.
But old Schell and his two sons, the like was never seen.

The old woman spoiled six guns, I have been told;
With nought but a chopping axe, which shows she was bold.
They fought from two in the afternoon to the closing of light.
Schell's son was slightly wounded before it was night.

Not like to get any assistance or anyone's help,
They sought to affright him by setting up their yelp.
But God was his Assistant, his Buckler and Shield;
He dispersed the cruel enemy and made them quit the field.

So come all ye trying countrymen and never be dismayed;
Trust in the Lord and He will be your aid.
Trust in the Lord and call upon His name,
And he will help you as He did old Schell in his immortal fame.

"This poem was given to me by my grandmother, Edith (Wightman) Jewell, who told me that it was recited at each Schell reunion by the oldest member of the clan present."

Abel Pendleton[6] Wightman, [from page 213](Israel[5], Dea. Valentine[4], Daniel[3], Rev. Valentine[2], George[1]), b. Nov 1794 in Bozrah, New Haven, Connecticut; d. 18 Aug 1863 in Cascade, Iowa; m. 28 May 1825 to Delia Evaline Jewett, d/o Alpheus & Samantha (Munson) Jewett.

Abel P. Wightman took part in the War of 1812. He fought in the battle of Plattsburgh. He volunteered from New Haven, Vermont on 18 Sep 1814. His family moved to Granville, Ohio where he taught school as a young man. He worked in the carriage and wagon shop of Alpheus Jewett, married his employers daughter Delia Evelyn Jewett. He was a man of much charm and intelligence. [His children remember Delia saying that he could have married any of the girls of her acquaintance. See page 213 for different spelling of Delia Evaline Jewett] With his four youngest daughters and wife he crossed the country in a covered wagon of his own make to Dubuque County, Iowa. He settled on a farm five miles from Cascade, Iowa where he lived many years before the Civil War came. He was a staunch Republican, but did not live to see the War end. [His daughter, Ella, lived to be 98 years, 7 months old.] His son:

George Abel[7] Wightman (Capt.), [from page 304] (Abel P.[6], Israel[5], Dea. Valentine[4], Daniel[3], Rev. Valentine[2], George[1]), b. 14 Jun 1831 in Granville, Licking Co., OH; d. in 1906 in Fort Worth, TX; m. 4 May 1852 to Maria Louise Schaffer.*[1]

George Abel Wightman lived in Granville, Ohio until a young man and then moved to Germantown, Ohio. He married Maria Louise Schaffer who was born in Germantown. They lived there many years and raised their family. For years he was in the Revenue Department of the government collecting taxes on all liquors made in that territory. When the Civil War was declared, he raised a company of volunteers in Germantown in 1862. His company was organized as Company "B"; was transferred along with three other companies to Company "G" by Gov. Borough of Ohio. He fought under General Grant at Cornith, Mississippi. He was sent to Prospect, Tennessee to join Sherman's Army in the break through Chattanooga, Tennessee under General Granville Dodge.

He marched with Sherman's troops through the south and was severely wounded in the memorable battle of Decatur, Alabama on July 22nd, 1864. He was hit with a Mimie bullet which took his right eye. As a result of his wounds, he lost an eye and his general health was much impaired. Upon being honorably discharged from the army on account of his wounds, he returned to Germantown, Ohio where he lived until 1884 when he moved to Ottawa, Kansas near the home of his son, Charles C. Wightman.

Lieut. Frank Emly of Germantown, who enlisted under Captain George A. Wightman and served under him throughout the war, said that the men of Capt. Wightman's Company loved and respected him. He was both a fearless leader and a considerate officer; was especially concerned over the physical welfare of his men. He lived quietly in Ottawa. He died in Ft. Worth, Texas at the home of his daughter, Della (Wightman) Reineke. Children: Annie[8] Wightman, b. 1 May 1854, d. 1933, m. Joseph Kemp; Charles Copp[8] Wightman, b. 8 Apr 1856, d. 21 Nov 1926; Fannie[8] Wightman, b. 19 Aug 1858, d. 2 Jun 1897, m. William Westover; Frank[8] Wightman, b. Dec 1863, d. young; Della[8] Wightman, b. 22 Nov 1870, d. 1942.

Charles Copp[8] Wightman, [from page 371] (George A.[7], Abel P.[6], Israel[5], Dea. Valentine[4], Daniel[3], Rev. Valentine[2], George[1]), b. 8 Apr 1856 in Germantown, Ohio; d. 21 Nov 1925 in Ottawa, Kansas; m. in Ottawa, KS on 25 Dec 1878 to Lydia Ann Wagner, who was born in Clarion County, PA on 24 Jan 1857, d/o Peter & Lydia (Rupert) Wagner who lived in PA. She died 2 Dec 1942 caused by "infirmities of age". They lived all their lives in Ottawa, KS. Both are buried in Hope Cemetery, Ottawa, Kansas.

She came to Ottawa on April 24, 1877 with family friends after her parents died when she was 20 years old. It was on Christmas day 25 Dec 1878 that she went sleigh riding with Charles and they came back to announce to friends and relatives that they had been married. They began housekeeping in a little stone house on the corner of Fourth and Hickory streets. Mr. Wightman was then employed in a drug store, and at noon Mrs. Wightman hung out a towel knotted to a long stick that hung from the front porch, so he would know that it was time for him to go home—dinner was ready.

From there they moved to a cottage on Maple street, and this house was almost demolished by a cyclone that passed through the town the spring of 1880. They were both at home at the time and greatly frightened, as a much larger house turned over onto their home. Neither one of them were injured, but it made a great impression on the mind of Mrs. Wightman, an she was always disturbed by storms after that. This lead her to watching and studying the storm clouds, so that in her middle life she could foretell the day's weather quite accurately. No matter how fine the morning was, if the family planned picnics or excursions to the woods, Mrs. Wightman's opinion of the weather was asked before the trip was started. If she said it was going to be stormy that settled the proposed outing, the children did not go. Even the neighbors often telephoned to find out weather conditions if they wished to be real sure about them.

The cyclone experience led to Mr. Wightman building a cyclone cellar at their residence. There the family would assemble on windy, spring nights when cyclone elements were in evidence and often the cellar was entirely filled with the Wightman family and their neighbors who were glad of the shelter and security of the underground cave.

Mrs. Wightman was always planting trees wherever she lived. Some of the finest trees in Ottawa were planted by her. Her interest in trees was developed in her native state, the woods near Clarion, PA and she taught her children their value and to enjoy their beauty.

Charles was a salesman for many years for the Excelsior Roller Mills which is now the Ross Milling Company and which had been built and controlled by H. D. Crane, an uncle. Charles was a lover of good horses and always had something in the barn that stepped fast and high when driving. He was an indulgent father when he had anything left to spend on them. Everybody in town knew and liked Charley Wightman.

Jeannette[9] Wightman was a tomboy as a kid and had the toughness to do men's work. She broke U. S. Cavalry remount horses as a young lady when her daddy was buyer for the U. S. Army out at Fort Riley.

The following article was featured in the Kansas City Times, dated August 14, 1989, written by James J. Fisher.

Just don't call her Jeannette

Jeannette, or "J" as folks call her, is 92.

Take her first name. Jeannette is a fairly long monicker. Add Wightman or Stephenson, the latter J's married name, and you've got a job just to sing your name.

Putting down the initial is a whole lot easier," says J.

J's never stood much on form. She was a tomboy as a kid, wearing what back around 1900 were called trousers, not jeans. She broke U. S. Cavalry remount horses as a young lady when her daddy was buyer for the U. S. Army out at Fort Riley.

She worked as a clerk, a movie theater cashier, and the chief cook and bottle washer for the old North American Hotel here, which she and her late husband ran until his death in 1954.

"I used to make 60 beds a day," she says, laughing.

She bred Shetland ponies for the longest time and rode five gaited horses until she was 75. She was a regular in classes at Kansas City's American Royal.

In fact, J just moved to town from the farm two years ago. Forty acres was getting a mite too much at 90, she says.

So she's had a full life. But more and more, often when she's alone, she pulls out a folder full of old photographic slides that bring back another brief career she had — that as a model.

This part of her career took place in 1903 and 1904 to be exact. J was 5 years old.

Back then, Underwood & Underwood Publishers had a big operation here. What they did was put out millions and millions of what were called stereoscopic slides, two pictures mounted side by side on a piece of cardboard. The slides went into a device that people held up to their eyes to get a three-dimensional effect. The company sent these slides all over the world.

It's hard to believe now, what with cable television and Nintendo and VCRs, but people used to sit around rooms called "parlors" and look at such slides.

The slides, compared with what we see now, were pretty tame fare — travel scenes, pictures of cities or other faraway wonders, and, of course, the kind of pictures J posed for — how it was down on the farm.

J and sisters, Frankie and Inez, now both dead, were recruited as models basically because they lived here in Ottawa. Frankie and Inez were in pictures riding horses, looking dreamily at their canoe-paddling beaux, or getting chastely bussed, an old word hardly heard anymore.

J, who usually portrayed a boy in her slides, did the comic relief — getting squirted in the face by the young lass milking a cow; smiling as she fed some wriggling puppies, and sitting in front of a stone grinder as another girl pretended to turn the crank, they causing J some discomfort.

Sure it was corny. But then stereoscopic slides were before movies, before radio, before Kodaks, before just about anything. Back then, about the only entertainment that came into a home was the daily newspaper.

J remembers as a child how people would have parties and pass around the viewer, exclaiming how lifelike this one looked, how familiar that one seemed.

"Don't kid yourself," says J. "It was a big thing."

Of course, that was all a long time ago. Now we have soap operas that will turn your ears red and all the words except a few are on late-night television.

"I have one memory," says J. "It's when they squirted me with the milk. I was getting tired and cranky. They couldn't get it right.

"So I complained. And I remember the photographer gave me a quarter. Can you believe that? A whole quarter."

* The following notes on the above families were researched by Clarence F. Shangraw, 5517 Diamond Heights Blvd., San Francisco, CA 94131. "The only other information I could gather from the vital records in Richford and Georgia was that William had at least one brother, John. There are other Wightmans in the area of Georgia, but I couldn't find proof of their relation. The records from this time are somewhat incomplete. I also found a tombstone for Martha Wightman Fletcher, buried right next to William Y. Wightman in Richford Cemetery. Her vitals are: born about Jun 1822, died 6 Jul 1897 (gravestone says age 75 y, 25 d on date of death). She is also listed, along with her daughter Abigail, under William Wightman and family in the 1850 Berkshire County census. First husband and the father of Abigail (b. about 1848) was Guy Fletcher (d. before 1850). Martha's second husband was Jason Gross. Since Martha is living with William at the time of her first husband's death, I'm guessing that she was probably his sister, but once again no proof. Another clue is that Martha is sometimes called Pattie in the records, and her potential mother's name officially lists as Pattie, but once or twice Robert Wightman's wife is listed as Martha. Have you ever heard of Pattie being a nickname of Martha? Sounds pretty strange to me, but since it happened with two different people, it's got to be the same family!"

JAMES P. WIGHTMAN

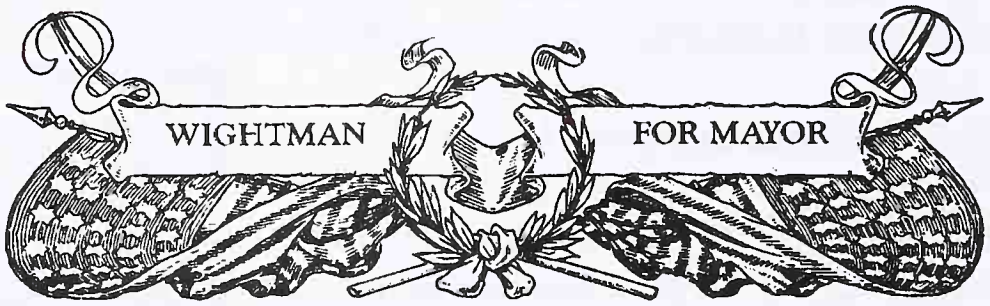
i. Joseph Milner Wightman, b. 19 Oct 1812 in Boston, MA; d. 26 Jan 1885; m. Bertha ____ _____ . Joseph M. Wightman left school at the age of ten when his father died. He was apprenticed to a machinist.*He studied mathematics, engineering, and physics in his spare time. He became involved with the Mechanics Institutes that were being established for the distribution of popular scientific knowledge. He spoke at lecture halls and institutes in Massachusetts on scientific topics and edited the BOSTON MECHANIC, a magazine that existed between 1832-36. He was elected president of the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanics Association between 1857-60. During this span in his life, he started one of the first firms in Boston for the importing and making of scientific instruments. This company became successful and well-known.

"Wightman's political career began with service on the Boston School Committee (1846-51), in the Massachusetts legislature (1850-51), and on the board of aldermen (1856-58). National politics intruded on the factional or single-issue politics that had been usual in Boston affairs and Wightman, nominally a Whig, was swept by the slavery and union agitation into the Democratic party. In December 1859, the Democrats nominated him for mayor, the first time in more than a decade that the party had run a candidate. Defeated by the popular incumbent, Republican-Citizens Frederic W. Lincoln (q.v.) (4,208 to 5,932), he ran again in December 1860, as a Democrat-Union candidate against the antislavery Republican, Moses Kimball, and was victorious (9,974 to 5,674). He was reelected for a second term in December 1862 by Lincoln, who had been called out of retirement

(5,287 to 6,352). Wightman remained active in Democratic city politics but did not again hold public office.



"Wightman was elected on a national issue, the desire to maintain the union and to conciliate the South if at all possible. Once conciliation had proved impossible and the war had begun, he led the city in unprecedented activities to reinforce the war effort. Under his leadership, Boston was generous in the offering of bounties to recruits, in the payment of relief to families of servicemen, in coordinating many private relief activities, and in maintaining the mustering depots and aid stations. Beyond this war activity, Wightman was eager to continue municipal actives in expanding the city. He pushed for a monumental city hall to symbolize 'the American Athens' and was active in encouraging further landfill and street extensions. The council agreed with these policies, and both mayor and council fell into considerable disfavor for their seemingly lax and lavish style of government and their inept administrative abilities. The old coalition of Citizens of the 1850s reemerged to persuade the respected Frederic W. Lincoln to run again and to lead the city during wartime. Although Wightman protested that the allegations were false and that under his direction the city had responded well, he was defeated. After leaving the mayor's office, Wightman continued in city politics and in his business. After retirement, he was given a place on the board of voter registration which he held at the time of his death on 26 January 1885. He was buried at Mount Auburn Cemetery in Cambridge, Massachusetts."

Children:

i. Daniel Butler[8] Wightman, [from page 299 & 369], b. 29 Nov 1874 in Maryland Township, Otsego County, New York; d. 25 Aug 1943; m. at Otsego, NY on 11 Aug 1909 to Lillian Mae Blencoe, b. 4 Feb 1890 in Westville, Otsego County, NY, d. 23 Aug 1958, d/o Cyrus and Angelia (Barnhart) Blencoe. As a young man, he worked as a millwright and operator of various wood working machines at Hanford's Mill at East Meridith, N.Y., now one of N.Y. State's historical locations. While in their employment, he lost three fingers on his right hand. These were the good old days; when he asked for a settlement, Hanfords refused to do anything, so he quit and came home to run the family farm. This example seems to tell a story as to why there are compensation laws today. However, his machine operating experience served him well when in 1938, the family home burned to the cellar. Lacking enough insurance money to rebuild, he bought a sawmill, planer and shingle mill and set them into operation. He went into the woodlands on the property, cut down trees, made them into lumber and with the help of his three sons, built a fine 14 room house. He was 64 years of age at the time.

Working with wood has been passed down through several generations of Wightmans — in the mid-1800s, Edmund Wightman, followed by his son Dan Wightman, Dan's sons Charles and Cyrus, and Charles' sons, Dan and David.

Wightman Brothers' lumber business was officially started December 5, 1945 by Charles and Cyrus. Cy Wightman brought to the business an Ireland sawmill, while Charlie contributed a Cletrack Crawler tractor.

With these two pieces of equipment, a dream and a lot of ambition and eagerness to succeed, Wightman Brothers came into existence.

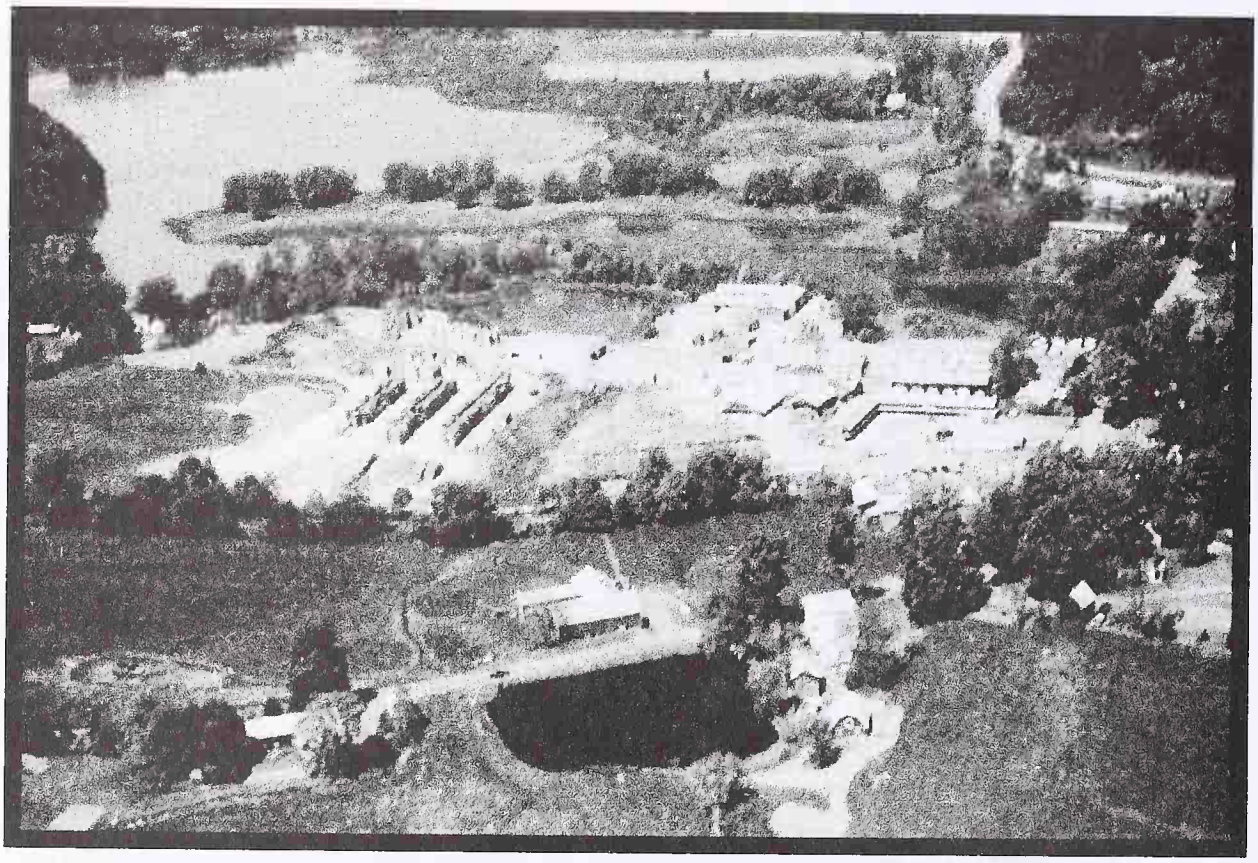
The first job taken on by the newly formed partners was in the town of Laurens. Transportation to the job was Charlie's 1929 Ford Model A pickup; minimum wage was $.75/hr. During this time, they had from 4 to 6 employees. Every facet of the operation was done by manual labor. After completion of the first job, the mill was moved to a woodlot in West Oneonta.

In the fall of 1948, the mill was moved to the site on Route 28 north of Portlandville where it would remain for 26 years. In the summer of 1949, the mill burned but was quickly rebuilt and business resumed. A finishing mill was erected on Crumhorn Mountain in early 1950 which remained in operation until a fire destroyed it in September of 1966. After the finishing mill fire, the decision was made not to rebuild on Crumhorn, but to purchase property in Portlandville from Howard and Doris Murphy, the site of an existing but unused sawmill. This became the first building on what is now the only location of Wightman Specialty Woods and Wightman Lumber & Building Supplies, Inc.

Business continued in both the Route 28 and Portlandville locations until the untimely death of Cyrus in February 1971, and the Route 28 mill was sold. In 1974, Charles' sons, Dan and David, joined the business. It was at this time that the name changed from Wightman Brothers to Wightman Lumber & Building Supplies, Inc.

The situation for Wightman Lumber & Building Supples, Inc. in 1974 was similar to that of Wightman Brothers in 1945: a father, Charles, and two sons, Dan and Dave, starting out with very little equipment, locating on a tiny site, and possessing meager resources except for that same dream and a lot of ambition and eagerness to succeed.

A local neighboring farmer gave them their first break. He agreed to sell them some land to locate their sawmill. In March 1975 they sawed their first board at the sawmill in its present location. And the rest, as the saying goes, is history.



Wightman Lumber and Building Supplies, Inc. is a family owned and operated business located in upstate New York at the foot of the Catskill Mountains. In business since 1945. They have added many new operations and upgraded existing facilities on their 17 acre site.

As time went on more land was purchased. In 1980 dry kilns were added to the operation followed in 1984 by a new and much larger planing building. New equipment and buildings were added on a gradual basis every year to keep up with the demands of the markets and customers, and to stay one step ahead of the competition in product quality and manufacturing efficiency.

December 1992 brought to an end the era of the founders with the death of Charlie. The torch had passed on to the next generation of Wightmans, already well versed in facing the challenges and ever-changing nature of the lumber business.

In 1994 with the manufacturing plant firmly established, the company began its first effort in over 30 years to enter the forestry end of the business. Events had come full circle. With the purchases of forested acreage, responsible management of timber lands should ensure future raw material supplies for the lumber business known as Wightman Specialty Woods and Wightman Lumber & Building Supplies, Inc. for years to come.

WIGHTMAN

The English surname Wightman is of nickname origin, belonging to that group of surnames derived from some personal, physical or moral characteristics of the original bearer. In this case there are two suggested sources of the surname. First and most usually the surname comes from the Old English "wight mann" meaning "strong man"; the original bearer would thus have been renowned for his great strength, bravery and dependability. Alternatively the surname may derive from "wiht mann" meaning "elf man", indicating perhaps one who was as spry as an elf or perhaps one reputed to be on amicable terms with the Little People. There is evidence to suggest that the name Wightman was also used on occasion as a forename, thus in some instances the surname may be of patronymic origin denoting the "son of Wightman". The surname was also found as Weightman, Wight, Weight and Whight. However, the name is in no way associated with the name Whiteman, Whitman or White; these derive from the Old English "hwit mann" meaning "fair-haired man" or the "white-haired one". The surname Whightman is documented in England as early as the Thirteen Century when the name of one William Wihtman appears in the Assize Rolls of Bedfordshire in the year 1227, while one Wyctman de Freton is recorded in the Feet of Fines for Essex in the year 1248. One William Wightman is noted in the Subsidy Rolls of Cumberland in 1332 while in 1647 one Roger Wightman, son of John Wightman, milner, was made a Freeman of the City of York, as was his brother Henry Weightman in 1654.

OBITUARY
Ottawa County Herald
Death of a Centenarian

Isadore Bennoir, aged 102 years, died at the home of his daughter in Erie township Monday evening, Feruary 17th, 1913.

Mr. Bennoir's parents cane to this country from France and settled at Bay Port, Mich., where he was born on March 20, 1811. Mr. Bennoir followed farming and trapping during the early years of his life. There was no market for grain when he was a young man and furs was the main thing to barter for the needs of the pioneer. With plenty of opportunities to enter land he never embraced the chance. He volunteered in the Mexican War and served two years before he was in several battles when that country was invaded by the American army. At the age of 50 he enlisted in the Civil War and served for three years. He was twice wounded in the arm and another in the back which lodged so close to the spine that the surgeons refused to operate. He suffered no ill affects from this wound.

Mr. Benoir was married three times and was the father of 21 children, six of whom are living [at the time of his death]: John, Joseph, William, Mrs. John Chevalier and the daughter with whom he resided at the time of his death, Mrs. Samuel Wightman.

"My family's ancestry is very old," said one club member trying to impress the group. "We can be traced back to the early kings of Europe." Then, turning to a lady sitting nearby, she asked, "And how old is your family, my dear?" "I really don't know," replied the lady with a sweet smile. "All our family records were lost in the great flood."

WALTER HOUGH[8] WIGHTMAN, [from page 385 & 537] (Eugene T.[7], Rev. Joseph C.[6], Jesse[5], Rev. John Gano[4], Rev. Timothy[3], Rev Valentine[2], George[1]), b. 12 Nov 1898 in Dover, NJ where his parents lived for a short time. The family moved to Tottenville, a rural town on Staten Island, New York, when Walter was an infant. He grew up on the "South Shore" of Staten Island and attended an annex of Curtis High School. During his teens, his family moved to the "North Shore", a section called New Brighton, where he attended and graduated from Curtis High School. His father, Eugene Timothy[7] Wightman, [see page 335] married Frank Eliza Luke, who were immigrants from Ireland. (Naturally, she called herself Frances!). "Frances" Eliza Luke's father was a Baptist minister—said to have been of Scotch-Irish descent. She was originally from Greenport, Long Island, but had moved to Danbury CT where she met Eugene W. It is believed by family members that her parents had died before she was married in New York City. "Frances" died 29 Jan 1922 and is buried in the Moravian Cemetery on Staten Island in a town called New Dorp. Eugene went to sea after his wife's death. He was killed by a car while crossing the street in the port of New Orleans and is buried there. Eugene had lived with his parents in Taunton, MA while his father, the Rev. Joseph Colver Wightman, was pastor of a Baptist church there. They were from Connecticut where both of their parents were born to old Connecticut families. Eugene's mother was a Mayflower descendant [Her father, Dr. Hough, was descended from Elder William Brewster and his wife Mary as detailed in the official Mayflower book of descendants]. Eugene attended Colby College (a Baptist school) in Maine, but had to drop out when his father died suddenly. Walter Hough[8] was married on 19 Jun 1920 at the First Baptist Church in New Brighton, NY to Filomena Grosso, d/o Sebastian Grosso and Maria Antonia Gigante, immigrants from San Fele, di Potenza, Italy. Filomena was born in Manhattan (New York City) on 16 Dec 1895, either just before or just after her father died. She was educated at St. Patrick's School in Manhattan by Irish nuns who insisted that she be called "Fanny". Although Catholic, Filomena had become a Protestant before moving to Staten Island with her family at age 16. She attended the First Baptist Church of New Brighton where Walter's mother was superintendent of the Sunday School and Filomena's teacher. One of her sisters had her children christened Episcopalian and descendants still attend Christ Episcopal Church of New Brighton. (Merle Wightman's children were members of St. Mary's Episcopal Church of West Brighton). She died at age 90 and is buried in Little Rock with her husband.

Walter Hough Wightman was an officer of the Chase National Bank of Manhattan and he traveled often to Midwestern states on bank business. On retirement, he became a trust officer of a correspondent bank in Little Rock where his daughter, Frances Wightman Pritchett had settled with her three children. He lived there until his death on 8 Mar 1974 at the age of 75. He is buried there. Although raised as a Baptist and descended from the founder of the Baptist church in America as well as a long succession of Baptist ministers, Walter Hough Wightman, Sr. became a member of the Moravian Church in his middle years, long after the death of his parents. He was a member of the Board of Trustees of his church and of the Central Board on Staten Island which administers the Moravian Cemetery.

WIGHTMAN BURIAL GROUNDS GROTON, CONNECTICUT

"At a meeting of the Wightman Burial Association on August 20, 1887 a committee was appointed consisting of Charles R. Stark of Providence, R.I., Warren Burnet of Groton, and Rev. P. G. Wightman of Branford, CT "to locate the grave of Valentine Wightman and his wife, and to secure a suitable memorial to be placed thereon, provided funds for the same could be procured."

At the meeting in August 1888, after careful study and deliberation, a marble marker was placed in the ground to show as nearly as possible the location of the supposed grave of Valentine Wightman. The reasons for selecting the spot were twofold:

1. Within the memory of those now living, a rough field stone stood on or near the spot on which were rudely carved the letters "V.W.". In the general state of decay into which the grounds fell a few years since this stone was either removed or has become buried out of sight.

2. The custom which prevailed here as elsewhere of burying the children at the feet of the parents; and we find his children so buried as shown by their tombstones.

The above statement originated from the unveiling exercises at the Wightman Burial Ground on Tuesday, August 19, 1890. The committee mentioned and others since, failed to correctly identify the final resting place opened in 1747. It is the opinion of this writer that they inadvertently searched in the wrong place within the burial grounds because of an oversight.

Explanation:

In the book written by Mary Ross Whitman on George Wightman of Quidnesset, R.I., published in 1939, there was mention of Valentine Wightman being married twice. [see page 31 of THE WIGHTMAN ANCESTRY — VOLUME I] First to Susannah Holmes who died between 7 April 1726 and 1728 in Groton.

Married second to Joanna . . . (last name unknown), who survived her husband, living (last record) 28 Jun 1754 in Groton, CT.

Based upon this known information, this writer concluded that the "V.W." stone could be placed elsewhere in the burial ground with a "second" family or that upon his impending death, Valentine wished to be buried by himself because of struggling emotions concerning two wives. On this date this writer has successfully located and identified Valentine Wightman's first grave marker which is inscribed:

This stone is along side what appears to be three additional graves. This report will be included in the Association records and conferred to existing officers, Daniel Lamb, Treasurer and Nancy LaCapra, Treasurer."

[Signed]

Daniel LaCapra, President
Wightman Burial Association
September 21, 1994

Dan LaCapra relates the following in the first newsletter put out by the Wightman Burial Ground Association, dated 1 Feb 1995.

"Valentine Wightman's stone has been discovered in an obscure area under a huge pine tree. It was noted by President Dan LaCapra and Kay Hill (the neighbor and loyal member living adjacent to the burial grounds). On September 28, in the autumn sun, the light shone upon the stone where the first revelation of the number 7 and the letter V were sen by Dan. Kay was talking to one of the many visitors who come to admire the old burial grounds. Excited, Dan motioned for Kay to 'come look'. Painstakingly, he started removing mold which had grown over most of the stone. First found was a large W — then a rough small g and then a large M. All together it finally read V. Wigman 1747. This is very crude, but make no mistake it is there along side of three other unmarked graves. This discovery was exciting because, as we all know, a memorial stone was erected in memory of his great Baptist leader. Many of you don't know, however, that this memorial was erected in 1890 after the efforts of a committee of three to find the actual resting ground of Valentine failed. They found the place and erected the memorial stone about 75 feet away."

ANNUAL MEETING, AUG. 20, 1887.

Worthy Work

From the Mystic Press of Aug. 25, 1897

The Wightman Burial Ground Association met as announced on the afternoon of Aug. 20th, having an unusual attendance. After attending to annual reports, routine matters, and re-election of old officers, Mr. Charles R. Stark introduced and spoke happily to the following:—

Resolved,—That the President name a committee of three, empowered to add to their number if they think proper, whose duty it shall be to designate the ground containing the remains of Rev. Valentine Wightman and his wife, and to take the needful steps to secure some memorial to be placed on said ground, provided the funds can be raised for that purpose.

On this, earnest addresses were made by Rev. F. Denison, Capt. John K. Bucklyn, Rev. A. J. Chandler, and others. Mr. Denison also delivered a poem written for the occasion and entitled The Baptist Pioneers of Groton, Conn., the publication of which has been called for. The committee of three consists of C. R. Stark, Warren Burnet, P. G. Wightman. Dea. James C. Lamb was chosen to present at the next meeting a paper on the Lamb Family. Large enthusiasm pervaded the meeting, relative to its memorial and historical work, which is every way highly praiseworthy. The Wightman memorial, costing not less than $200, will elicit wide interest as it should. The style of monument proposed is the "ledger" or "sarcophagus," which would make it of the most substantial and durable character. The meeting closed with prayer by Mr. Chandler and the Doxology.

The officers of the Association are Samuel S. Lamb, President; Seabury N. Haley, Secretary; Warren Burnet, Treasurer.

Read before The Wightman Burial Ground Association, Aug 20 1887

By Rev. Frederic Denison

Who scatters precious seed
To meet man's urgent need,
  Secures our praise.
They who o'er ocean press
To fell a wilderness
And plant a world to bless,
  Win honor's bays.
Here wrought heroic sires
Enkindling holy fires
  Of worship free
Amid prescriptive wrong.
With faith and courage strong,
They raised their trusting song
  Of Liberty
Withstanding Church-and-State
And mace of magistrate
  Great truths they held—
The standard gracious given

'Neath which have martyrs striven
Of the primeval oak
That bowed before their stroke
They built their shrine;
Nor needed they the parts
Of outward sensuous arts,
Since furnished were their hearts
With the divine.

Deep-shading woods among,
Behold that Sabbath throng
In temple calm.
Devout in thought draw near Where with attentive ear
Discourse and prayer we hear
And fervent psalm.

Like John the Baptist rude,
With power from Heaven endued,
They smote the root
Of error's stately tree,
Pronouncing all men free
To plant soul liberty
And reap the fruit

What strength to them denied,
Their children have supplied,
By love's decree;
To beautify this place
And add historic grace,
That time may not efface
Their memory.

But shall the leader brave
Sleep in nameless grave
On this famed field,
Who, loyal to our Lord,
Held firm the two-edged sword
Till borne to his reward
Upon his shield?

Shall thousands sing the gain,
On distant hill and plain,
From his brave deed,
While he is left alone,
His grave to men unknown,
And no memorial stone
His merit plead?

A man of mental gold,
Shaped in scholastic mould,
Heaven born anew,
Deep versed in Scripture lore;
High championship he bore,
And through long conflict wore
His armor true.

Obedient to Heaven
Full hallowed be this spot;
Nor ever to forgot
The battle ground,
Where sounded trumpet thrill
Loud over vale and hill
To rouse the land, until
The Right was crowned.

The second house we tread,
Its sounding-board o'er head
And pulpit high.
In joy we breathe the air,
Of ardent praise and prayer,
Where faces all declare That God is nigh.

There see the preacher sage,
There deacons crowned with age,
There stalwart men;
There matrons in their hoods,
There youths in varying moods;
With these fond memory floods
The heart again.

Behold the preacher stand
With Hold Book in hand,
His face aglow
With radiance from the throne,
And half-angelic tone
To make God's message known
To all below.

And then breaks forth the choir
In nigh seraphic fire
All souls to raise
On warm devotion's wing—
The heart's pure offering—
And all the people sing
Their love and praise.

Here those brave toilers sleep,
As angel-guards to keep
This alter site
And urge its ceaseless claim,
While love preserves each name
Deserving fadeless fame
In Freedom's light.

Lo! funeral trains appear
Slow following the bier,
On shoulders borne,
To lay the loved away,
Clay mingling with the clay,
Yet lit with hope's bright ray—
The rising morn.

From days of old.
Nor has their service ceased;
Their sons by Heaven increased
As Israel's race;
Our soul-freed country shares
The Victory of their prayers
And toils, and grateful wears
The priceless grace.

Undying is the good—
Blest law of brotherhood;
Heaven gave it birth;
Still be our land its home,
And perfect be its bloom
To pour its sweet perfume
Wide o'ver the earth.

WIGHTMAN BURYING GROUND -- GROTON, CONNECTICUT

The Colver/Culver and Wightman/Whitman Connection in Wightman Burying Ground, Groton, Connecticut by Marjorie K. Whitman Shelton, August 1985

According to the Wightman Genealogy, in 1785 a group of dissenters petitioned to meet "at Will Starks in New London" and called Mr. Valentine Wightman to serve them as pastor. He deeded two acres of land together with a house by William Stark. The meeting-house was situated about half a mile away on a rise of ground known as Stark's Hill, just off the present river road to the right. On 24 March 1717/8 the membership received the deed to the this site for a church and burying ground, the church building being already in a "frame condition". The land was taken from the Clark farm, and a family burying ground was already there.

Another account of these facts begins on page 75 of the Giorgi Colver/Culver Family Genealogy: "Joseph (this being Joseph in the fourth generation after Joseph, 3), Joseph, 2) Joseph, 1) Edward) and his wife Mary [Eddy] were instrumental in forming the First Baptist Church of Groton, Connecticut in 1704. In a deed dated 24 March 1718, they bought one-half acre from William Stark for a meeting house and burying place. The first pastor was Valentine Wightman." Also from Giorgi, page 13, "Historians in the Groton area agree that the Wightman Burying Ground lies within the land that was originally granted to Edward Colver by the King for his services to the Crown in the Indian Wars. This probably started as a family plot, but then became a regular burying ground when Edward Colver, progenitor of the Colver/Culver Families in America, died and was buried there in 1685, some 20 years before the founding of the church body and 32 years before the church building was erected on the site. Edward had received two hundred acres in 1652/3 and four hundred additional acres in 1654 according to Land Records of Groton, Connecticut.

Eventually the "rise of ground known as Stark's Hill" became known as Wightman Hill, perhaps because of the tenure of Wightmans as pastors of the church.

Reverend Valentine Wightman, the first pastor of the First Baptist Church of Groton, was the eighth child of George Wightman, progenitor of the Wightman/Whitman Family in America. Valentine Wightman served as pastor of the First Baptist Church of Groton for 42 years, from 1705-1747.

Nine years later in 1756 his son, Timothy, succeeded him as pastor of this church. At his death in 1796, Reverend Timothy had completed a pastorate of more than forty years. The record of Wightmans serving as pastor of the Groton church was continued by Timothy's son, Reverend John Gano Wightman. Reverend John Gano Wightman was installed as pastor at the Groton Church in August 1800, serving forty-one years, bringing the Wightman service to the church to a total of 123 years by three successive generations. Reverent Palmer G. Wightman, grandson of Reverend John Gano Wightman, served as pastor of the historic Groton church for twelve years, from 1864-1876, bringing the total number of years of Wightman-as-pastors-at-Groton to one hundred thirty-five.

Just as a burial monument was placed in the Wightman Burying Ground for Edward Colver and his wife Ann Ellis Colver by succeeding generations (specifically in 1982 by Charles Gordon Colver of California, an eleventh generation descendant of Edward, and by a distant cousin James Culver of Wisconsin, making the project a true Colver/Culver venture), so too was a monument erected there for Reverend Valentine Wightman several years after his death. According to the Wightman genealogy, "In 1887 at a meeting of the 'Wightman Burial Ground Association', a committee was appointed 'to locate the graves of Valentine Wightman and his wife and to secure a suitable memorial to be placed thereon provided funds for the same could be procured,' The movement resulted in a memorial celebration in 1890 at the burying ground when a monument was unveiled to the memory of Reverend Valentine. (The principal address of this occasion was delivered by his great-great-grandson Reverend Palmer Gallup Wightman who had served as pastor of the Groton church 1864-1876.) The site of the grave was determined by the remembered existence of a foot stone, long in evidence, marked V.W., and by the indication of the graves of his young children near by."

Referring to the list on page 15 of the Giorgi Colver/Culver genealogy of Colver/Culvers who are buried in the Wightman Burying Ground, There is evidence of an actual link between Colver/Culver and Wightman/Whitman families. Both Selenda and Parmelia Culver were granddaughters of Reverend Timothy Wightman, the second Wightman to serve as pastor of The First Baptist Church of Groton. Selenda Lamb, daughter of Timothy's daughter Tabitha Wightman and Samuel Lamb, was the first wife of Joseph Colver, Jr. (Colver is spelling used in Mary R. Whitman's Wightman Genealogy). This Joseph is sixth generation Colver/Culver from 5) Joseph, 4) Joseph, 3) Joseph, 2) Joseph, 1) Edward. Following Selenda's death, Joseph married her sister Parmelia (also found spelled "Parmelia"). Joseph E. Culver, M.D. (1823-1897), son of Joseph and Parmelia, and his wife Myrtilla are also buried here. This Joseph, M.D. would be seventh generation from Edward, the Puritan, Colver and sixth generation from George Wightman (as Joseph was great-grandson of Rev. Timothy Wightman and great-great-grandson of Rev. Valentine Wightman). From page 175 of the Girogi book, "Since Joseph was a genealogist, it is thought he chose to be buried at Wightman because it was a Culver family cemetery and Edward Colver, the Puritan and progenitor of the lineage was buried at Wightman." I suggest that his Wightman lineage was an additional compelling factor in the selection of his burial site.

HISTORIC GLIMPSES by Carol W. Kimball

Some of them, with no one left to care for them, are overgrown with weeds and brush. There is nothing more forlorn than a neglected burial ground.

But in Groton, we have an ancient cemetery to which we can point with pride — the Wightman Burial Ground.

It is one of the town's oldest. According to the deed recorded March 24, 1717-18, it was already in use as a burying place when William Stark, for six pounds current money, deeded one and a half acres to Valentine Wightman and other members of his congregation.

The land was to be used for a burying place and meeting house, and the grantor, William Stark, reserved for himself "the convenience of the burying of himself of any of his."

The meeting house was of extreme historical significance, for it as the first Baptist church in Connecticut. As early as 1704, the year before Groton achieved independence from New London, a company of 12 dissenters, including Sgt. William Sark, John and Ephraim Culver and Isaac Lamb, had petitioned the General Court of Connecticut for the settlement of a Baptist meeting.

This was a courageous act, for at that time Baptists in many of the colonies were banned in Boston and were persecuted and whipped for their beliefs.

But the six brethren and six sisters who signed this petition, confidently founded the First Baptist Church of Groton and in 1705 called young Valentine Wightman from Rhode Island to become their pastor.

A suitable choice to lead the congregation, Valentine was a lineal descendant of Edward Wightman, the last martyr by fire in England, burned at the stake in Lichfield in 1612. Valentine served the church for 42 years, until his death in 1747; two of his descendants succeeded to the pastorate.

Each summer genealogists come to our town in search of family history. Each summer I receive inquiries about the location of the Wightman Burial Ground. It's not exactly on the beaten path; it lies off Route 184 west of Old Mystic at the top of winding Cold Spring Road.

At the summit of the hill, lies a neat cemetery walled in native stone, entered through graceful iron gates. On one stone gatepost is a bronze marker inscribed "The First Baptist Church of Groton. Their first house of worship was erected in front of this burying ground in 1718."

The original meeting house is long gone, although the First Baptist Church of Groton on Shewville Road is the present embodiment of the group. Its best memorial is the burial ground itself, always well cared for and a source of much historical data.

Many of Groton's early settlers lie in this historic ground. The oldest stone in the cemetery, and the most unusual, is the wolf stone set flush to the ground marking the grave of John Burrows and crudely inscribed, "J B A74 dyed 1716." You will also see a marker erected in 1890 in memory of Valentine Wightman himself.

The reason for this cemetery's well-groomed appearance is the active Wightman Burial Ground Association, formed in 1882 when a group of people interested in the preservation of the cemetery took action, lamenting "the said burial ground had been already too long and too sadly neglected and is largely covered with brush."

For more than a century, the association has continued its work. Many members are descendants of the original Culver, Stark and Lamb families from 1704.

The group is presently involved in genealogical research and in addition to maintenance of the grounds is planning future restoration of lost and damaged memorial stones.

Present officers [1995] are Dan LaCapra, president; Nancy LaCapra, secretary; and Daniel Lamb, treasurer. The association invites you to become a member. Anyone interest may join. The dues are $5 annually. Call 536-0599 or 449-9422 for more information. Address: Daniel LaCapra, 39 Russ Sim Hgts., Groton, CT 06340

He married on 18 May 1870, in Muskegon, Muskegon Co., Michigan to Anna Beveridge, daughter of Hugh McLellan Beveridge and Elizabeth Noonan. Anna was born on 20 Jun 1855 in or near London, England; she died on 24 Oct 1916 in Grand Rapids, Kent Co., Michigan. Levi Butts[7] Wightman — holding son —
Robert Josiah[8] Wightman

Levi was a farmer from Wheatland, Illinois when he enlisted in the Union Army in 1861. He was discharged in 1865 from the 2nd Illinois Light Artillery with the rank of 2nd Lieutenant. While serving with the artillery at Vicksburg he developed impaired hearing which remained with him the rest of his life. The military record describes him as 6 feet tall, sandy hair, blue eyes, and light complected.

After the war Levi worked in the logging industry of western Michigan, where he met Anna whose family lived in Muskegon. He gave his occupation as "surveyor" in the 1870 Census. He eventually became a millwright and followed the trade wherever it led him around the country. Levi abandoned his family in 1886, at least in part because of religious difficulties resulting from his being a Baptist and Anna a Catholic. His military pension file shows that during his last years he lived with his grand-nephew, William G. Wightman, in Plainfield, Illinois. Levi's tombstone in the Wheatland Cemetery is inscribed "First White Boy Born In Wheatland."

The following 55 pages on the military records of the Wightman family were researched by Thomas A. Wightman of 623 Bolinger in Rochester Hills, MI 48307-2820. He has given permission to publish this data.

He has arranged the data in groups based on the time frame of the war in which they served. There are ten sections:

1) Colonial Wars
2) American Revolution
3) War of 1812
4) Mexican War
5) Civil War — Union Soldiers
6) Civil War — Confederate Soldiers
7) Spanish - American War
8) Philippine Insurrection
9) World War I
10) Miscellaneous Military Service

In regards to text and format:

1) He has included alternate spellings of the surname Wightman because he found in his research that many times Wightman is misspelled on records as Whitman, Whiteman, Weightman, etc.

2) There is a footer beginning with the second page of his report: "✷Original filed under other name" which indicates that the record may also be found under the alternate spelling indicated.

The following descendancy from Benjamin[4] WIGHTMAN [See page 65], with particular attention to his son, Jeremiah[5] presents the results of collaborative research by Rose Ann Shepardson, Dorothy Tracy Stevens, 6110 Rainsborough Rd, Salt Lake City, UT 84121 and Bobby W. Shandrew, 4313 Amblewood Rd, Alexandria, VA 22309. These researchers all trace their lineage directly to Celia Ann[7] WHITMAN.

Please contact any of the above researchers or the author for any queries on these families or to clarify any genealogy information. Comments, critiques, corrections and above all, new–found cousins with additional data are welcome.

Benjamin's[4] sons all served in the Revolutionary War, first from Rhode Island and later New York. Their pension and military records are extracted and presented here. There is an ongoing effort to trace the histories and specific battles of the Rhode Island regiments involved.

"The Christian name Jeremiah occurs repeatedly among the immediate descendants and the name Spencer is used as a given name. It is possible that Mary's family name was Spencer."

Notes from Dorothy Stevens:

In 1790/1800 census for Rutland Vermont
In 1810 for Jay Essex County New York.

See p. 65 "... b. abt. 1754 in R.I.*; living in 1810 in Jay Twp., Essex Co., N.Y., aged forty-five and upwards (census). He had served in the Revolution enlisting from Warwick under the name of Jeremiah Wightman. Five children at home in 1810.'

Revolutionary War Records at the National Archives show Jeremiah served in two Regiments of Rhode Island State Troops. (a) Colonel Crary's Regiment and (b) Colonel Talman's Regiment. These are the only records indexed/on file for Jeremiah.

Of note, there are no records on file for 'Jeremiah Wightman', only Jeremiah Whitman for service from Rhode Island during the Revolutionary War. Further reference 'Spirit of 76 in Rhode Island', Benjamin Cowell, Boston MA, 1850, p. 553 (Benoni) p. 554, (George and Jeremiah)

For service in Colonel Crary's Regiment, Jeremiah drew 20 pounda, 12 schillings and 10 pence. This is reflected in his service record, card number 37453655. This indicates that Jeremiah completed his 'draft' or 'enlistment' for this regiment in 1776.

His service in Colonel Talman's Regiment seems to have been less than sterling. Service card number 39186348 shows that Jeremiah deserted from from Captain James Parker's company on October 6th, no year. This would certainly explain why only he of the four brothers that served in the Revolutionary War from Rhode Island did not receive a pension. [Research continues on where and when these regiments served for a clue as to when Jeremiah left Rhode Island - See NY service below] bws Place of birth not proven. Assumed based on Jeremiah's Father's places of residence in Rhode Island, coupled with brother Benoni's Revolutionary War pension deposition that he (Benoni) was born in Warwick.

In the 1777 Military Census for Coventry, Rhode Island, p. 7; "Jeremiah Whitman 16-50 R-Sciteueate" This means that Jeremiah was in Coventry when the census was taken, aged between 16-50 and a resident of Scituate.

Extracted from 'New York In the Revolution as Colony and State' James A. Roberts, Albany NY 1898, pp. 94-96' The following men (according to the certificates of the muster-masters) served either in the Line or the Levies, having been hired by the several classes under the Land Bounty Rights; but there is nothing to indicate in which regiment of the Line or the Levies they served.

[Research continues in an attempt to isolate the service period, if bounty land was warranted, how this ties in with the 'desertion' above, etc.) bws [Bobby Shandrew]

Genealogical Research in England'. "The registers of Chesham show the marriage, on 10 June 1630, of Zachariah Whitman and Sarah Biscoe, baptized at Chesham 9 Nov. 1606, daughter of Richard and Martha BISCOE. This couple are evidently the Zacharia WHITMAN, aged 40, and wife Sarah, aged 25, who came to New England in the Truelove in Sep. 1635, the same ship that brought William Preston from Chesham. This Zachariah WHITMAN was a brother of John WHITMAN of Weymouth, ancestor of most of the Whitmans of America. Research in Bucks may unearth the Whitman ancestry." [further research shows Zacharia went through Duxbury Massachusetts to Connecticut. Research continues] bws. No documentation linking to Elisha to Father Jeremiah. Added family based on data in LDS records. Research continues. At first assumed this to be a child of father, Elisha. Elisha was none too truthful when giving out his age to the Government (ae 73 in 1855 census seems to be incorrect, etc.)

Transcription of letter from former Essex County historian, A.F.Hayward of New York in answer to a request from a Mrs Stevens re Shandrew/Whitman/Wood.

"July 10 68, Dear Mrs Stevens; Today I had a long visit with both Otis Decker and his sister Mattie Floyd. I spent more time with Mattie than I did with Otis because she knew more details. First I will give you family data as is was given to me. ((Decker and Welch Children)) The following is as they gave it to me Both said Celia Ann Whitman (their grandmother) was married only once, to the best of their knowledge and belief. Celia, when young, had a child out of wedlock, called Sylvester Henry Shandrew, they too believed him to be the son of a man named Shandrew. Their mother used to correspond with him, he did not live with Wm Woods after their mother (Cordelia) was born. Cordelia told Mattie that Sylvester started to come to see them once and got as far as New York, was taken sick and returned home to Utah without seeing any of them. They knew Celia had a reputation and had lived with several men. Oatis said one was Will Patten brother of old Jim Patten. Mattie remembered Jim but did not know Will. Oatis did not know who her dau. Anna Perrys father was but Mattie said her mother told her it was Perry. Mattie said she believed and it was commonly believed by the family that both Sylvester and Anna were William illitigimate [sic]. Neither of them knew anything about Celia having another boy which Celia claimed she gave to her sister (more of this later). Neither knew anything about Bertha Hathaway other than Oatis said he remembered her but didn't know who she married or what became of her. Mattie did not think she was a child of Celia because Celia was about 54 years old when Bertha would have been born. Mattie said the small headstone beside her Grandfather Wood's stone which reads 'Baby Woods' was the headstone of Lucinda Woods. Mattie said her grandmother Celia died in the house on the farm that Stephan Hathaway and Celia lived in .. while Stephan was alive. This was the property that Clarissa Storrs sold on 23 Aug 1892 to Stephan Hathaway and 'Anna Perry the daughter of Celia Ann Patten." She thought this was the same property that Celia Ann Pattin deeded on 24 June 1889 to Stephan Hathaway reserving life interest. Then on 28 Dec 1893 Celia Ann Pattin sold the same to Ann Perry Brown, reserving the use & income for her support during her natural life. Mattie said that after Stephen died Celias brother George came there and lived with Celia and Ann Perry for awhile then later George & Celia moved to Lewis N.Y. living the little hamlet of "Stowersville' some years later Celia returned to the home farm and lived the rest of her life with Ann Perry Brown and her husband. After leaving Mattie I went to Elizabethtown to try and check for the 2nd boy that Celia said she gave to her sister, while there I found more on Stephen & Celia. On May 29 1880 Stephen Hathaway of Lewis was convicted of selling liquor without a license In the 1880 Census Stephen Hathaway 59 was living in Lewis with Celia A. Patten, Housekeeper age 45. On 11 Aug 1889 Stephen Hathaway of Westport and Rosanna Hathaway (his legal wife) of Lewis sell land in Lewis to Alonzo S. Hathaway. The witness was MC Perry (this was poorly written and could have been either M or W C Perry. Note that Anna Perry was living with Stephen & Celia in 1892-3 years after a W or M Perry witnessed Stephens signature. So much for Stephen. [[about Patten]]. So much for Patten, now Whitman. In the settling of Josiah Hathaways Estate I find Josiah died in Sept 1845 his daughter Celia was then living the wife of Elisha Whitman of Lewis. By the year 1850 when the Estate was actually settled Celia Whitman leaving the following children listed as grand-children; George Whitman, Harvey Whitman and Lucy (Whitman) wife of Joseph Barber all of Lewis. Also listed as grand-children and children of a deceased daughter Polly Whitman were Mary (Mrs Luther Moody) of Jay Kilborn Whitman; Russell Whitman; Sally Dunn (These 3 the residence was unknown. Also Roxana (Mrs John Kent) of Pierpont, St Lawrence Co. [Long discussion about Lucy (Whitman) Barber family and the possibility of another, unknown, child born to Celia Ann, given to Lucy] Celia Ann [Whitman] Wood being born Feb 20, 1835 and her mother Celia [Hathaway] Whitman dying between the years of 1845 and 1850 would leave Celia Ann a mere child of only 10 to 15 years old. It is possible she, soon thereafter, began working at household work, among the neighboring families, and being young without a mothers guidance, could have easily been lead astray. After my interviews today I have no doubt but what this did happen. It apparently was common knowledge to the Deckers and both of them today carried the attitude that it is far in the past and why should they hide it any longer. As Mattie said, "Those things happened, even oftener than we knew about, not only in our family but, many other families had just such goings on, I don't think they were any worse in those days than what goes on today." End quote and I think it was well said. I rather think Mrs Spaulding and her sister probably knew as much as the Deckers do but were rather reticent and did not care to talk about it. [discussion

Extracted from Celia Ann Whitman's probate record, Henry's Half-Sister Anna [Perry] Brown, Administratrix, Book K, Book 2, Page 83, 1913"State of New York County of Essex, Anna Brown, being duly sworn, says ... That one Sylvester Shandrow was named in the petition of this deponent, heretofore filed, for letters as a son of the said decedent; that the said Sylvester Shandrow is over fifty years of age; that he left the County of Essex and State of New York for the State of Nebraska to reside with an uncle when about four years of age; that he resided with the said uncle in the State of Nebraska for about fourteen years, and then left Nebraska and went to Salt Lake City in the State of Utah to reside, and was there married and resided at said Salt Lake City when last heard from by this deponent; that this deponent addressed to the said Shandrow at his last known address at Salt Lake City, some five years ago, still remains unanswered, and this deponent is unable to state anything abut his present whereabouts, if living. That according to the best knowledge, information and belief of this deponent the said Sylvester Shandrow is not now a resident of the State of New York, and has not been . . It is further Ordered, Adjudged and Decreed, that the administratrix distribute the said balance of $112.90 as follows: ... Pay to Henry Sylvester Shandrew, son, for his distribution share 13.23 ..." 2. Surrogate's Court, Essex County, N.Y. [note order of given names on this, a legal document, for the money ($13.23), with his signature affixed.] "In the matter of Judicial Settlement ... of Celia Ann [Whitman] Wood, deceased; ... The undersigned, Henry Sylvester Shandrew, described in the Petition in these proceedings as Sylvester Shandrow, a son of the said Celia Ann Wood, late of the County of Essex, deceased, being of full age, do hereby appear in person and waive the issuance of service of a Citation in the above entitled proceedings. Dated, December 1st, 1914 /s/Henry Sylvester Shandrew State of Idaho: County of Power:" ((Notarization statement and stamps)) 3. Family legend has it that Henry was raised by his uncle in Iowa. Census data list a child named Sylvester, age six in 1860, with Celia Ann Whitman's brothers George and Bowen Becalm. Sylvester SHANDREW was b. Dec 1854. This Sylvester was born in New York. For speculation and research purposes, assume this child to be Henry Sylvester Shandrew, thereby placing him in Iowa in 1860 with his uncle as family legend has it. In 1870, there was no Sylvester listed with either George or Bowen Becalm. Henry Sylvester would have been about 16 years old. Another possibility is that the Sylvester (Whitman) could have been a child of Bowen's. No further evidence. Research continues 4. The following census might be Henry Sylvester living with his Uncle [assumed from age 6, b. 1854 in NY, given name Sylvester - not proven] Facsimile of 1870 census for Clinton Twp, Clinton County Iowa Page no 58 (number 291 on reel) 11 Jul 1870, dwelling number 415, family number 403.

Obit - Klamity Courier (Willow Creek) Mar 8, 1972 "Death Takes Ann Sullivan" Mrs. Anne Maude Sullivan passed away at the age of 55 in the Trinity General Hospital of Weaverville on Mar 3, 1972. She died of cancer. Her husband, Charles "Sully" Sullivan, principal of the Burnt Ranch School, survives her, as does her mother, Mrs. Mary Chandrew in Carmichael, Calif. Other survivors include four sons, Roland Jorgensen of Corinne, Utah, Dallas Jorgensen, Craig Jorgensen and Paul Jorgensen of Brigham City, Utah: brothers Edward Chandrew of Stockton, Lester Chandrew of Brigham City, John Chandrew of Ceres, Calif; James Chandrew of Willard, Utah, Harold Chandrew of Daly City and Nicolas Chandrew of Corning Calif; three sisters Mrs. Rose Barada of San Francisco, Mrs. Mabel Robinson of Grants Pass, Ore. and Mrs. Jean Doss of Grants Pass, who had lived with the Sullivans until last year. Anna Maude Sullivan is also survived by nine grandchildren and her mother-in-law, Blanche McCombs of Willow Creek. Born on Feb. 11, 1916, Mrs. Sullivan was a native of the state of Idaho. She had been employed as a postal clerk in the Burnt Ranch Post Office for 3 hrs. until illnes forced her to quit. She was member of the Willow Creek Branch of the Church of Latter Day Saints. She was the President of VFW Auxiliary in Burnt Ranch and a member of the Burnt Ranch PTA. More than just an active and helpful member of the community, Anna Sullivan devoted her time and love to the children of the area. Not only was she involved in 4-H work, but she also spent weeks every year making afghans to be auctioned and raffled off to raise funds for the Burnt Ranch Childrens' Christmas parties and the accompanying gifts from Santa which were paid out of the funds. She and her husband kept foster children in their home for many years. Ann baked everything from breads to cakes and cookies and doughnuts for the school children's lunches without pay. Several years ago, the PTA's Honorary Life Membership was bestowed upon her in recognition of her services to the youth of the community. Many thoughtful and considerate deeds she performed that were never publicized or mentioned much brought Anna Sullivan a host of friends in the Burnt Ranch area that made her beloved far and wide. Though the Sullivans have only lived in Burnt Ranch since 1961, everyone knew and respected her charming and considerate ways. A collection is now being taken up by her friends in the area to start the Anna Maude Sullivan Scholarship. Donations may be made to this scholarship fund in care of Mrs. Alice Sell, Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary, Burnt Ranch. CA. Funeral services were held Monday at the McDonald-Files chapel, in Weaverville with the Rev. Frank Gibbons of the Salyer Wayside Chapel officiating. Her reains were forwarded to the Fel Funeral Home in Brigham City Utah, where services were held this morning. Internment was in the family lot in Paradise Cemetery, Paradise, Utah." This prehistoric and extinct hairy mastodon roamed across my farm on the way to the Shiawassee River over 10,000 years ago. The huge, hairy, elephant like creature traveled throughout our township between the peet bogs and the river — a distance of about three to four miles. The in-between flat lands were ideal for these plant eaters. The enormous size of full-grown mastodons meant that only the most fearless predators would dare to attack them. Man hunted them with spears and axes. The saber-toothed tiger probably preyed on its young. This mastodon is permanently on display at the University of Michigan, discovered in Rush Township in 1944.

Wade Charles[9] Wightman [from pages 371 & 438](Floyd[8], Benjamin[7], Jabez[6], David[5], Valentine[4], Daniel[3], Valentine[2], George[1]), b. 30 Apr 1921; m. 29 Jun 1946 to Jean Eva Gerstner, b. 17 Jun 1924. Our retirement years have been enriched with continued lengthy visits from our family that live in Japan, South Carolina, Virginia and our daughter's family that live in South Lyons, MI. I spend most of my time compiling the Wightman family — Jean occupies her spare time doing volunteer work, clubs, reading, church and always is willing to help with my family history.

Children:

i. Dianne Lynne[10] Wightman [from page 339-40], b.21 Apr 1948; m. on 28 June 1969 to LaVerne Bailey, b. 17 Apr 1948, s/o Walter Cyril Bailey & Marjorie Eleanor (Durling) Bailey.

Due to the reorganization of Detroit Edison in 1994, LaVerne now works at the Newport Service Center near Monroe, MI as a design and field area leader. Although Corvair's are still his "interest car," he sold his 1965 restored Corvair this past year to pursue a "new interest" in boats.

He and his wife, Dianne purchased a beautiful cottage on Upper Silver Lake near Silver Lake Sand Dunes this fall (1996) and bought a pontoon boat. This cottage purchase has also renewed his interest in his Corvair-powered dune buggy that he built 28 years ago.

Dianne continues to work at the University of Michigan School of Nursing in Ann Arbor, MI as a research assistant on a federally funded research project titled "Female Adolescents Substance Experience Study." She and LaVerne have been busy remodeling and furnishing their newly purchased cottage near Mears, MI.

Both Dianne and LaVerne have shifted their main interests from Nikki's college sports endeavors to their recreational home which [according to them] needs a lot of remodeling and fixing up.

Child: Nikki Lynn[11] Bailey [see pages 440, 969, Intro. Vol. II, & 2300, 2303].

ii. Gerald Wade[10] Wightman [see pages 441-4], b. 8 Oct 1949; m. (1) 31 Dec 1977 to Patricia Loznak; m. (2) 8 Aug 1993 to Rowena "Winnie" Cauguiran Flores. Jerry has continued to teach at Masawa, Japan for the Department of Defense. He and his wife visit the U. S. every summer. Winnie is able to visit her parents in the Philippines once every two years.

The following e-mail describes a typical day for Jerry and Winnie.

"Today I went beachcombing, and got three balls. The Japanese are already afraid there won't be enough water come spring to flood their rice fields. On the down note to this for us is that the Sapporo Ice Festival may have to ship in snow/ice for their festivity. Basically I am teaching school the way I always have and beachcombing/trading glass floats. Winnie is in the money exchange business. Nation Bank is the only way Americans can get their yen for paying rent, etc. A lot of Filipinos work off base and want dollars. There is a 6 point spread between buy and sell quotes in the bank. Winnie gives the sellers a one yen less than the high buy bank rate, and buyers of yen(mostly teachers) a plus 2 yen rate from what the bank sells it to them, hence, her profit of 3 yen per $1.00. She is the only one that does this as far as we know which gives her a corner on the market. I don't even know if it is legal but my bosses buy from her, so I don't think there is anything wrong with it. She does everyone a favor, plus get paid for her time. This really picks up to a frantic pace at the end and first of the month. I call it Winnie's Mini-bank." Winnie also does bookkeeping for a Japanese business man off base and has a catering business that is popular with the Philippine residents on base. She is fluent in four languages. This summer (1997) she expects to get her U. S. citizenship.

iii. Richard Charles[11] Wightman [see page 445], b. 8 Nov 1953 in Owosso, MI; m. 29 Apr 1989 to Mary Theresa Novak, b. 1 Nov 1958. Mary & Rick have sold their greenhouses. Although they enjoyed growing bedding plants very much, they realized the tremendous amount of time involved without the appropriate compensation.

Mary is now working for a retail nursery which she likes very much. "Rick" went back to his first love — finish carpentry. His work took him to Alexandria, VA to move a house called: Pope-Leighey, a Frank Lloyd Wright house that is owned by the National Trust for Historic Preservation. This meant taking it apart and reconstructing it on a new foundation. The Alexandria house took one year and 40 days to finish. Rick was quite familiar with the architecture of Frank Lloyd Wright as he had at previous times done maintenance and new construction in South Carolina on Auldbrass, a Frank Lloyd Wright home. He is now helping a friend build his home and working on the Frank Lloyd Wright house near Beaufort. Address: 905 Forest Lane, Beaufort, SC 29902

Note: The Great Road in Lincoln, RI is lined with treasures from the area's past. This pastoral path gives travelers a chance to see how the Industrial Revolution took root in America. The Great Road runs near the Moshassuck River, which gave rise to numerous water-powered mills. There are mills, blacksmith shops, several farmhouses with rustic acres, taverns, two stone-ender houses and other attractions. [Such houses earned their nickname because of the stones that formed the end of the building where the fireplace was located. Only four are left in all of New England.] One of those is the stone-ender that belonged to Valentine Whitman, Jr. which is located at the end of the 3-1/2 mile stretch of the Great Road near Route 116. Valentine's house was built in 1694. It was bought by the town in 1995 for $155,000 and is expected to be restored and opened to the public. The first town meeting of Smithfield (which used to contain Lincoln) was held here after the town's creation in 1730.

Page 592 of THE WIGHTMAN HERITAGE. ZUINLESS[6] SKINNER (ancester of Perry[7] Skinner, Lauren[8] (Skinner) Bishop, Tessie[9] (Bishop) Wightman, Wade C.[10] Wightman). The following is an account of his religious affiliation with the Brookfield Baptist Church in Essex, NY researched and written by Elizabeth Densmore of the Ticonderoga Historical Society. Part of her chronicle is given here. Early settlers in Essex County, many of whom crossed from Vermont on John McNeil's sail-ferry (1790) to Essex, NY, founded one of the oldest Baptist Churches in the county. It was organized in a small farming settlement in the western part of the town of Essex. This area, once a part of a 2000 acre tract of land bought by William Gilliland in 1764 to develop into a manor to be known as "Brookfield", had been surveyed and sold to settlers in 1788, after Gilliland's project failed. In 1792 this district was "chiefly in a state of nature". The First Baptist Church was organized on 22nd of September 1807 with a written covenant "as a Platform of our General Sentiment Concerning the Truth of God's Word and our Solumn Respective Duties toward God and Each other". The covenant read: "We the brethen & Sisters of the First Baptist Church of Christ in Essex do willingly and cheerfully enter into the following covenant. We covenant with each other and this day call Heaven to Earth to record that we will give up our selves to God and one another, agreeing to attend to all this holy instructions as God in his providence shall enable us. We also agree to give up ourselves, that is our gifts and abilities for the good of the church. We also agree to keep the Christian Sabbath and to attend on Lords day according to Divine appointment and the appointment of the church ourselves and such of our family as are under our care can conveniently attend. We agree to abstain from all backbiting, tatling, and evil speaking and in meekness to watch over each other for good. We agree to not let sins rest on a Brother or Sister but to attend to the rule pointed out in the Eighteenth of Matthew. We agree to attend Covenant Meetings and all other meetings appointed by the church for doing business. We agree this day to walk in the ways of the Lord and to renew our Covenant and with willing hearts say Amen". Membership was carefully controlled. A person desiring to become a member was required to stand in meeting and give a Relation of Experience. If the membership present at the service agreed that the Experience proved the petitioner as worthy of membership, he was prepared for baptism. Baptism was performed in the near-by streams. A special meeting on the Crick was opened by Prayer. Mrs. Winslow related a work of grace and a wishing to be baptised in fellowship and welcomed by the church. "They repaired to the water" and she and two others were baptised. Similar meetings were held at the Creek when new members were accepted.

Early records reveal that to support the church, increase its membership, and maintain its standards was an all-consuming project. Church meetings were first a Covenant Meeting, opened by prayer and religious discourse, then proceeded to the business of admonishing wayward members of the congregation of the importance of keeping Covenant. The handling of the wayward took a great deal of the time of both the elders and the members. Committees were formed to labor with members in "difficulty", letters of admonition were written, an special meeting held. The Covenant was given a strict interpretation and from time to time new restrictions were put into the records. There was no time for frivolity. The minutes of April 19, 1820 read: "voted that playing any kind of game be a breach of Covenant".

Special sessions were carefully recorded in the minutes by the Covenant Clerk. They were usually listed as a "matter of difficulty" with a member, and often the wife was included in the charge.

The individual was called forward and the charge read. Often the charge was stated as "refusing to comply with the voice of the church". When the church members had done all they could to convince them of their error, but to no purpose, they withdrew the hand of fellowship from them and they were solemnly condemned as "Disorderly Walkers". Some were restored to fellowship after a "hartey confession of wrongs". A notation in the minutes of 1823 records the happy conclusion of a difficulty. It states: "The committee and the Church forgave her". In the minutes of the meetings, actual charges were seldom recorded. The term "difficulty" covered the sin, or it was stated that a person had been "dishonest in a number of instances".

There were Skinners and Whitmans in the membership that didn't quite live up to the standards set in the covenant of church. A "Letter of Exclusion to Brother Zuinless Skinner" was sent in 1821. Possible other relatives that were recorded for dismissal included Rhoda Skinner, Siphrona Skinner, and Betsy Whitman. In 1831 Alonzo Skinner had an "Ex" after his name on the membership roster — probably meaning a departure. One wonders if his leaving was by choice or request.

"Saturday Dec 1st 1821 Church met in conferance at the Mud Schoolhouse. Opened by prayor and proceed to business. 1st Noted to send the letter proposed for ...John Crowningshield. 2nd Noted the clerk write a letter of Exclusion to Brother Zuinless Skinner — than opened our minds with a Good Degree of Freedom. Appointed a Special meeting at the Plains [school house] on Saturday the 8th Inst at 1 O'Clock. [signed] U. Palmer [&] Art Clark"

Page 145 of THE WIGHTMAN ANCESTRY. Mary[5] Wightman (James[4], Abraham[3], Rev. Valentine[2], George[1]), born about 1773. "Archibald Gaut of Halifax and Miss P (or M)olly Witeman of Leyden was joined in marriage 8 Mar 1792." [Vital records of Leyden, Franklin Co., MA] Archibald Gaut was the youngest of the four children of William Gaut, Sr. of Halifax, VT and was named in the 1801 will of his father. [Halifax Will Book 2, p. 266] Archibald's brother, William Jr., moved to Smithfield, Madison County , NY. Some of those descendants also spelled the surname "Goit". John Gaut/Goit, son of William Jr., died leaving six young daughters and two small sons. Most of the daughters ended up in the Mexico-Pulaski area of Oswego County near where Archibald and Mary (Wightman) Gaut/Goit lived. There was another more distantly related family who made the switch from Gault/Gaut to Goit: James and Patty (Mathews) Goit who resided near Syracuse.

More information on the life of David, the fourth child of Archibald and Mary (Wightman) Goit: This will correct and update the information on page 146. Commentary of Patricia St. Clair Ostwald; the source of this update: "I have always been curious about the statement in the Wightman genealogy that "Archibald deserted his family so they changed the name to Goit", It has always seemed to me like a strange name-change — perhaps has something to do with the pronunciation of Gaut in a Scotch-Irish brogue. However, I doubt the change actually had much to do with the desertion since other branches made the same change. Seems like there should be some documentation about the desertion, since Mary married a 2nd time.

I am following the path God laid for me.
I took his hand when I heard him call.
I turned my back and left it all.
I could not stay another day to laugh, to love, to work or play.
Tasks left undone must stay that way.
I found that peace at the close of the day.
If my parting has left a void,
then remember it with remembered joy.
A friendship shared, a laugh, a kiss.
Ah, these things I too will miss.
Be not burdened with time of sorrow.
I wish for you the sunshine of tomorrow.
My life's been full I savored much.
Good friends, good times, a loved one touched.
Perhaps my time seemed all too brief.
Don't lengthen it now with undue grief.
Lift up your heart and share with me.
God wanted me now, he set me free.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF WIGHTMAN CHURCH (1877-1993)

The first actual church to be built and named Wightman Chapel was dedicated in 1885 by Dr. W. D. Kirkland, Presiding Elder, and was valued at $800. Prior to this, church services were held in any schoolhouse or hall that was available.

There are two legends as to how Wightman Chapel received its name. One is that it was named after one of South Carolina's bishops, William May Wightman. The other is that Wightman Chapel was named for the Bishop's youngest daughter, Miss May Wightman. [see page 867]

In the fall of 1928, the first worship service was held in the new church which was built on a plot offered by Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Langford.

In 1944, the basement was finished to provide classrooms.

In 1952, a new brick parsonage was built on the corner of Main & Brown Streets.

The new educational building was dedicated in 1965 and the new church in 1968. Both of these are modern air-conditioned buildings that fulfill the needs of the church.

A significant achievement in 1975 was the raising of funds to furnish a hospital room in the new Newberry County Hospital.

In February 1982, the last payment was made on our church debt and the sanctuary and upper floor of the Education Building were dedicated by Bishop Roy C. Clark on Sunday, June 27, 1982, during an 11:00 a. m. worship service. Also taking part in the service was our District superintendent Marshall L. Meadows, Jr.; former pastor Raymond Brook, who assisted in burning the mortgage; and Rev. Don Hope, who was serving as pastor of Wightman and Zion at that time. Renovation work was done on the education building and sanctuary in preparation for the Dedication Service and the church bell was mounted in the narthex.

An outdoor sign was begun in the spring of 1982 and completed in July of that year. The roof was reshingled in 1984.

To celebrate the 100th anniversary of our first church building, 100 commemorative plates showing the three buildings were ordered and sold by the History Committee. Also in 1985, the parking lot was graveled and a new heating and cooling unit was installed for the lower floor of the Education Building.

A new Allen Digital Computer 5000 series organ was purchased in 1989. The organ was first used at the morning worship service on Palm Sunday, March 19, and the Service of Dedication was held on May 21.

A 1991 Dodge van was purchased in the spring of 1991 and a carport and driveway were constructed.

In August 1992, the church parking lot was paved.

In our 116 year history, 36 ministers have served up.

Wightman Church began 1994 with 230 members on the roll.

Page 1441 of THE WIGHTMAN ANCESTRY. R. Robert Mutrie, 244 Maple Leaf Avenue North, R. R. # 2, Ridgeway, Ont. L0S 1N0 has done extensive research on the disappearance of Eliphalet & Freelove[4] (Wightman) Gustin on their trip to the Royalist side during the Revolutionary War. The following comments in a letter to me, dated 31 Jan 1996, are his reflections on their disappearance. "I have been giving some thought to the death of Eliphalet and Freelove on their way to Canada. There were no white settlers in Ontario until 1780 when Peter Secord and Michael Showers "snuck" across from Fort Niagara (Youngstown, NY). The land along the Niagara River (4 miles deep) was purchased from the Indians in 1781. Surveys followed and settlement authorized in 1783. So, Eliphalet and Freelove did not die in Canada. My next thought is "What would lead them to go towards the British lines at such an early date?" The choices were pretty much limited to joining the Loyalist Militia, a good reason for leaving the children behind. In the north, Eliphalet had a choice only of Butlers Rangers at Fort Niagara, and Rogers Rangers and the King's Royal Regiment both at Sorel, Quebec. I can't think of any instances off hand, where a New Jersey Loyalist travelled that far north to join the forces, with the New Jersey Volunteers so much closer at Staten Island. It would make much more sense for Eliphalet and Freelove to have gone to Staten Island. You know how stories can get twisted over the years. With all of the battles and disease on Staten Island, many Loyalists died. The Upper Canada Land Petitions are rife with statements of a brother or a father dying there. I wouldn't be too optimistic though of finding death or burial records for wartime British administered Staten Island."

Get your priorities straight. No one ever said on his death bed, "Gee, if I'd only spent more time at the office."

FATHER OF US ALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — 26 May 1995. Humanity's first common male ancestor — the father of us all, as some call him — evolved 270,000 years ago, according to a search of mankind's genetic roots. This is the same era that other researchers give for the "African Eve."

Robert L. Dorit of Yale University says in a study published today in the journal Science that humans are of very recent origin in history of life on Earth and that all people are virtually identical from a genetic viewpoint.

"Except for superficial things, we're all alike," he said. Humans, he added, "are the new kids on the block so far as the Earth is concerned. We're noisy, but new."

Dorit and two co-authors looked for humankind's common male ancestor by seeking genetic mutations in a specific part of the Y chromosome, which is passed only from father to son.

Based on ape studies, said Dorit, it is known that the Y chromosome sequence mutates at a set rate over thousands of generations. By measuring these mutations in a representative population of living men, it is theoretically possible to calculate backward to a time when all humans shared the same male ancestor.

"We asked what it the oldest date that they could have shared a common ancestor and still make it statistically plausible to get the genetic result that we got," said Dorit, "That's where we got the figure of 270,000 years."

The study involved the genetic analysis of 38 men representing every major population group and race.

Dorit said researchers were startled to find that all of the men shared exactly the same pattern for the target portion of the Y chromosome.

"This means that we are a very young species," said Dorit. Some other species, such as turtles or crocodiles, have been around for hundreds of millions of years.

Because humans are new, he said, there has not been time for much genetic variety to develop.

"The differences between, as socially striking as we may wish to have made them, are largely irrelevant from a biologist's standpoint," he said.

Dorit's finding is consistent with a 1991 study that traced female ancestry through worldwide mutations of genetic material inherited only from mothers. That study showed the first common female ancestor lived about 200,000 years ago in Africa.

FOSSILS POINT TO EARLY HUMAN LIKE CREATURES

Washington - Human like animals lived in Europe some 780,000 years ago, almost a quarter of a million years earlier than once believed, according to fossils unearthed in Spain. Scientists said the new findings, reported today in the journal Science, fill a major gap in the scientific understanding of human migration and evolution. Thirty-six fossils of hominid bones along with primitive stone tools were found in caves near Burgos in the Atapuerea region of northern Spain by a group of Spanish scientists. A new technique determined the specimens are at least 200,000 years older than any other human like fossil found in Western Europe. Compiled from Journal wire reports. Printed in Michigan newspaper: Flint Journal - 11 Aug 1995.

EARLIEST ENGLISHMAN FOUND

Boxgrove, England — He is 6 feet, robust, and loves nothing better than a juicy rhinoceros steak. Oh, and he's more than 500,000 years old. Archaeologists on Thursday displayed a prehistoric tooth they said comes from the imposing, carnivorous humans who roamed Britain half a million years ago. They say the tooth, discovered Aug. 24 by an archaeology student on a perfectly preserved prehistoric site near the village of Boxgrove, is the oldest human fossil found in Britain. Flint Journal, Flint, MI— 8 Sep 1995

This index includes Volume One of The Wightman Ancestry.

The first 432 pages of the book were indexed by Mary Ross Whitman. She listed all persons of Wightman, Whitman, Weightman, Whiteman, Whytman, Whightman, or Witeman under the name Wightman. The balance of the names in the book were indexed under the actual spelling and merged into her list. An attempt has been made to distinguish between individuals of the same given name by the use of the father's name in parentheses, and, where necessary, by the addition of generation numbers. No similar attempt has been made to distinguish individuals in the remainder of the index. The married name of females is often clarified by adding the maiden name in parentheses. The Wightman females will have the generation number and married name, without the Wightman name added, when they are married.

EPILOGUE

I have tried to go beyond the recitation of names and dates. Anecdotes on family members, as well as education, occupation, religious affiliation, and even the thoughts of our cousins and ancestors gives us a better feeling of the family to which we belong. Close family ties by the Wightman/Whitman members are indicated by the naming of children after well-loved relatives.
